Senators To Back Labor's Own Inquiry

Will Supply Any Information Of Committee Staff

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP)—Senate rackets investigators Saturday pledged "enthusiastic cooperation" with the AFL-CIO in its investigation and trial of Teamsters President David Beck.

Chairman John L. McClellan (D-Ark.) of the Senate Committee on Rackets in Labor and Industry, said "any request" for information from AFL-CIO officials in bringing charges against Beck and in investigating his union "will be given immediate consideration."

"I think they know that the committee will cooperate with them in every way in the world in every effort they make to eliminate the unwholesome elements that have developed in the labor movement," McClellan said.

SUSPENDS BECK

The AFL-CIO Executive Council suspended Beck as acouncil member and an AFL-CIO vice president on Friday and ordered that he stand union trial May 20 on charges of "bringing the labor movement into disrepute."

The council also ordered its ethical practices committee to investigate whether the teamsters union is dominated by "corrupt influences."

The council acted within two days after Beck had invoked the Fifth Amendment 117 times rather than answer questions about his finances before the McClellan committee.

At an impromptu news conference Saturday, McClellan said resumption of the committee's hearings, expected in two weeks, could involve any one of four cities — Scranton, Pa., New York City, Los Angeles, or Philadelphia.

CAPITAL HEARINGS

Inquiries in all four areas, he said, have progressed to a point where hearings can be held. He stressed that until Congress adjourns all hearings will have to be held in Washington.

These were the other developments in the wake of Beck's suspension:

—The high command of the 1.5 million member teamster union appeared to be splitting under the clean - up pressures. Secretary-Treasurer John English broke with Beck on Beck's plan to spend $1 million in union funds on a publicity campaign to counter the committee's charges. English said he was not consulted about the plan and would oppose it.

—George Harrison, president of the AFL-CIO Brotherhood of Railway Clerks and one of the council members who voted to suspend Beck, said in Houston that "we are going right down the line and clean up these corrupt practices."

10,000 Vets Stage Riots On Paris Streets

PARIS, March 30 (UP)—An estimated 10,000 war veterans, rightwingers and youths marched to the Arch of Triumph Saturday in a pro-army demonstration that ended in a street battle between hundreds of demonstrators and riot police.

Dozens of young rioters were detained for questioning after club swining police moved in to break up the demonstrations. One marcher was wounded in the leg when a bystander threw a bomb-detonator.

NONE BADLY HURT

Although no serious injuries were reported, it was the most violent street demonstration in Paris since last November when anti-Communist throngs, incensed over Soviet crushing of the Hungarian revolt, sacked and burned Communist party headquarters.

The violence was concentrated in front of the Champs-Elysees office of "Express," the weekly magazine edited by Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber. Schreiber, who returned recently from military duty in Algeria, has been writing articles condemning alleged army brutality in the Algerian conflict.

MOST DISPERSED

The major portion of the crowd had dispersed after laying a wreath at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier when hundreds of youths poured down the avenue gathered outside the Express office, shouting insults and hurling rocks.

One stone broke the huge plate-glass window of the magazines building had helmeted police closed in to disperse the rioters.

6 Persons Die In Auto Crash; Five Teenagers

GREAT FALLS, Mont., March 30 (UP)—Six persons, a Montana school teacher and five teen-age students, were instantly killed in a car-truck, head-on collision, about 20 miles from here on U. S. 87 today.

Acting Choteau county Coroner Don McGinnis said the victims were "scattered all along the highway as a result of the terrific impact of the crash.

The dead, all residents of Fort Benton, Mont., were identified as Cleo Crane, 18; Jerome Nagengast, 17; Alderine LaBarr, 16, Mark Paul, 18; Bobby Peterson, 17; and H. Mern Parson, 36, the teacher.

The car collided with a Great Northern transport truck driven by J. A. Henen, 29. He was treated for slight injuries at a local hospital but was not hospitalized.

McGinnis said that the car in which the victims were riding was passing another car when the accident occurred.

TROUBLES GROW

British Cabinet In Grave Crisis

LONDON, March 30 (UP)—Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's conservative government had its back to the wall Saturday night.

Opposition Socialists were demanding a general election they believed they were sure to win against a regime plagued by internal political discord, a strike, the Suez and Cyprus crises, gas rationing and high prices.

Some 500,000 workers in the engineering industry around London went on strike to join another 1.2 million workers already out to demand higher wages.

The Marquess of Salisbury, often called the most powerful man in Britain, resigned from the cabinet as president of the council and leader of the House of Lords Friday in protest against Macmillan's decision to release the exiled Archbishop Makarios of Cyprus.

Britain, which invaded Egypt under Macmillan's predecessor Sir Anthony Eden, to preserve the Suez Canal, was faced with the bitter fact that it must accept Egyptian control of the waterway.

Sources predicted Macmillan's government would agree however grudgingly, to Egyptian terms for canal operation and permit British ships to use the Middle East oil lifeline whose blockade caused gasoline rationing in Britain.

"Suez rebels" in Macmillan's own party were demanding a showdown on whether Britain would "give in" to Egypt.

The conservatives already have lost one House of Commons seat and suffered humiliating drops in majorities in half a dozen other

AIR PROBLEM

CAB Reports 452 'Near-Collisions'

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board said Saturday that it received reports of 452 near-collisions from civil and military planes during the last four months of 1956.

That was a daily average of 3.7 near-misses on the nation's crowded airways, it said.

A total of 4,429 persons were aboard the reporting planes. No estimates were made as to the number aboard the other aircraft involved.

About one-third of the other aircraft were said to be military jets.

The near-collision reports came from 259 military planes and 193 civil planes. Fifty-five per cent of the planes were on point-to-point flights. The remainder were on training, check or local flights.

The CAB said that nearly nine out of 10 of the reported incidents occurred in "controlled airspace" — that is, in areas where pilots flight patterns.

The reporting pilots said that about 40 per cent of the other aircraft cut across their courses, 38 per cent approached head-on, and 20 per cent were roughly on the same course as the reporting pilot.

The pilots took evasive action in 318 cases. In the remainder, evasive action was impossible, and collisions came very close to occurring.

Thirty per cent of the reporting pilots said they did not become aware of a possible collision until the other plane was 500 to 2,000 feet away. Twenty-seven per cent placed the distance at 100 to 500 feet anl 14 per cent at 2,000 feet to one mile.

The CAB's report covered the period from September through December.

The agency issued the statistical analysis without comment. It has near-collisions since last May.

Nasser Raps U. S. Use Of 'Pressure'

Vows To Ignore American Effort In Suez Dispute

CAIRO, March 30 (UP)—President Gamal Abdel Nasser Saturday accused the United States of "aiming to starve" Egypt and pressure it into surrender in its disputes with Israel.

In one of his most bitter public attacks on United States policy, Nasser indicated that he would continue to oppose passage of Israeli ships through the Suez Canal and the Gulf of Aqaba.

He insisted that Egypt is not Communist and wishes to be friendly with the United States, since his government has a "basically American" concept of neutrality. But he added that Egypt was more opposed than ever to Israel.

CONVOY CLEARS

As he spoke to a group of 30 visiting American newsmen, the first convoy to clear the blocked Suez Canal in five months steamed through Port Said Harbor into the Mediterranean from the Red Sea. The convoy included Russian, Italian and West German vessels. Another five-ship convoy entered the canal at Suez. Operation of the canal made it apparent the West would accept Egypt's terms for running it as an Egyptian operation.

(In New Delhi, informed sources said Egypt has agreed to discuss Israel's right to use the canal before the World Court at The Hague).

Nasser told his audience that the canal and the Gulf of Aqaba, despite claims to the contrary, are territorial waters.

"I am sure neither threats nor (American) pressures will affect us," he said.

U. S. OF 1776

He likened the Egypt of today to the United States of George Washington's time, defending the theory of a neutral Egypt between the West and Russia as a "basically Anrerican idea" of non - entangling alliances.

But he said the United States refused to send wheat to Egypt while Russia offered 600,000 tons

WAR OF NERVES

Danes Given Warning By Soviet Union

COPENHAGEN, Sunday, March 31 (UP)—Soviet Premier N. A. Bulganin has warned Denmark not to risk "suicide" in an H-bomb war by allowing Russia's enemies to establish bases on its soil, it was announced Sunday.

No officia' comment on the implied threat was available immediately.

The note Bulganin sent to Danish Premier H. C. Hansen Friday was made public here Sunday. It repeated the threat the Soviet premier made to Norway [illegible] days ago — that Russia's first act in any new war would be to blast U.S. bases with "annihilating modern arms."

NO BASES THERE

Strictly speaking, the United States has no bases in either of the Scandinavian countries. However, it does man the big Thule airbase on Greenland — a Danish possession.

Bulganin reminded Hansen ominously that "one hydrogen explosion would destroy a territory with a radius of several hundred kilometers." He added that action in a new war "would hardly be limited to the use of one bomb."

Tiny Denmark measures only 240 by 280 kilometers (150 by 175 miles). If Bulganin's figures are correct, a single H-blast would virtually blow the entire country off the map.

The purpose of the Russian notes to Denmark and Norway appeared to be to frighten the two countries into dropping their membership in the Atlantic Pact.

Chachere Seeks Welfare Slashes

BATON ROUGE, March 30 (AP)—Rep. Walter Chachere, chairman of a legislative group, said today a new effort to ease the tax burden caused by illegitimate children will be made in a special session he expects after May.

The Franklin Parish legislator heads a committee of senators and representatives conducting public hearings on the problem.

NEED CLEAR LAW

"We definitely need a clear law setting forth methods of proving fatherhood," he said, analyzing committee findings so far. "That seems to be the basis of Supreme Court rulings holding us back on the issue.

"It is evident from testimony and our findings in public records, the question of illegitimate children in Louisiana will require more than one corrective bill. Fathers are being overlooked and their responsibility is not being demanded."

The chairman said the next public hearing will be held in Lake Charles next month, with a final session in Baton Rouge just before the 30-day fiscal Legislature in May.

"From all indications," he said, "it is apparent a special session of the Legislature will be called after that. And if it is called we are going to ask the governor to place our welfare proposals before the Legislature."

Chachere was one of Gov. Earl

Stork Lurks At Crossroad

ASHEVILLE, N.C., March 30—Broadway and 42nd Street in New York may be the crossroads of the world to many folks but Mrs. William Brigman will take Broadway and Lexington right here in Asheville.

Six years ago to the day, on March 29, 1951, Mrs. Brigman was being drawn from her nearby Barnardsville home by her husband to Memorial Mission hospital to have a baby.

But the stork intercepted the Brigman's and their daughter was born in the car at the corner of Lexington and Broadway.

Friday, again on March 29, Brigman again was hurrying his wife to the hospital to have a baby. There was the stork, waiting at the corner of Lexington and Broadway.

The second baby born at the intersection also was girl. Like the first, she weighed eight pounds.

Embassy Sees Hope For Safety

TEHRAN, Iran, March 30 (AP)—Hopes soared tonight that pretty 25-year-old Mrs. Anita Carroll would be rescued from the desert bandits who seized her six days ago.

The U.S. Embassy said the Shah's police are closing in on two segments of the bandit gang in the desert of southeast Iran.

SEND DOCTOR

A doctor and a nurse were rushed to the area 800 miles southeast of this Iranian capital to stand by.

While the embassy remained noncommittal, an informed source said "it looks quite hopeful."

The embassy said it had been determined the outlaw gang split up after the ambush in which Mrs. Carroll's husband and three other men were killed last Sunday.

She was borne away by one group—perhaps in the party of the bandits' womenfolk or maybe with four gangsters who headed in another direction.

HARD ON HEELS

Police are hard on the heels of both these groups, the embassy was informed.

The embassy spokesman said there has been no contact with the outlaws despite offers of unlimited ransom and Iranian government promises the murderers and kidnapers would go free if they released Mrs. Carroll unharmed.

He flatly denied reports of negotiations.

"There is no information that anyone has had contact with the

DESPITE IKE'S STAND

Knowland Expects Slash In Budget

WASHINGTON, March 30 (AP)—Sen. Knowland R-Calif. said today President Eisenhower's latest defense of his spending budget isn't going to keep Congress from cutting about three billion dollars off presidential money requests.

Knowland, the Senate Republican leader, said in an interview he doubts even that amount of economizing by the legislators will permit any tax cut measure this year. Democratic leaders have been considering plans to reduce income levies effective next Jan. 1, if Eisenhower's budget is trimmed sufficiently. Knowland said he doesn't think such a move would be wise.

FIRMER STAND

Knowland and other GOP leaders apparently look on Eisenhower's remarks at a White House news conference last Wednesday as indicating the President is taking a firmer stand against budget cuts than they had expected.

Nevertheless, Knowland said he thinks there are going to be "substantial" reductions from the $71,800,000,000 in new money requests made by the President.

NEAR $3 BILLION

"I think more members of Congress believe the reductions will run between 2½ and 3 billion dollars than think anything like a five billion dollar cut can be achieved," Knowland said.

Sen. Byrd (D-Va) has called for a slash of from 5 to 6½ billions.

Knowland said he doesn't believe the Senate's action Thursday in approving a bill authorizing 1½ billion dollars worth of new water projects indicates that economy sentiment is declining among his colleagues.

The bill opens the way to future requests for actual appropri-

PANAMA

Legal Minds Brew Trouble Over Canal

PANAMA CITY, March 30 (UP)—Latin American legal experts expressed the opinion here Friday night that the United States should pay Panama a higher fee for the use of the Panama Canal.

Panama University's international conference on interoceanic canals adjourned without adopting any formal resolutions, but the consensus of those attending was that the $1,943,000 a year Panama receives from the U.S.-owned canal company is not enough.

WANTS 50 PER CENT

Vincente Saenz, of Mexico, said Panama is entitled to claim as much as 50 per cent of the canal's receipts after the capital cost of digging the "big ditch" has been amortized.

Delegates to the conference also challenged the provision of the 1903 canal treaty which grants the United States what amounts to sovereign righs over the Canal Zone "in perpetuity."

Francisco Alvarado Garcia, of Cuba, said the clause is contrary to international law. He added, however, that Panama is not entitled to cancel the "in perpeuity" provision arbitrarily.

He said elimination of the clause should be sought through negotiations with the United States.

ON SUEZ ISSUE

Big Powers Ready To Accept Defeat

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, March 30 (AP)—The United States, Britain, France and other big shipping nations today appeared to be about ready to accept defeat on the major issue of their long dispute with Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

From the time that Nasser seized the Suez Canal July 26 Western nations and others had fought for international control of the canal's operation.

Barring some unexpected change of plans, all signs now indicate they are prepared silently to yield to exclusive Egyptian operation, and to negotiate for the best safeguards they can get for their shipping rights.

The issue has been brought to the point of final decision by Nasser's proposal to the U.N. and to the United States and seven other nations this week of a plan for operating the vitally important waterway through the Egyptian canal authority.

This authority would collect all tolls. It would be bound, according to the Egyptian memo, by an 1888 treaty guaranteeing right of transit to all nations. Egypt would set aside 25 per cent of the tolls for development of the canal and 5 per cent for paying off the former Suez Canal Co., from which the property was seized last July.

Other provisions of the Egyptian plan call for development of a set of rules to govern the canal's operation, for appeals and arbitration procedures open to shippers who feel they have been treated unfairly and for filing of the Egyptian policy statement with the U.N. as "an international instrument."

The United States, which received a copy of the plan from Egypt, has been in consultation since midweek with British, French and other Western European governments which did not receive a copy. Secretary of State Dulles was reported working with advisors at his home today on the kind of reply which the United States should make, having in mind the common interests of the other nations as well as its own.

He insisted that Egypt is not Communist and wishes to be friendly with the United States, since his government has a "basically American" concept of neutrality. But he added that Egypt was more opposed than ever to Israel.

CONVOY CLEARS

As he spoke to a group of 30 visiting American newsmen, the first convoy to clear the blocked Suez Canal in five months steamed through Port Said Harbor into the Mediterranean from the Red Sea. The convoy included Russian, Italian and West German vessels. Another five-ship convoy entered the canal at Suez. Operation of the canal made it apparent the West would accept Egypt's terms for running it as an Egyptian operation.

(In New Delhi, informed sources said Egypt has agreed to discuss Israel's right to use the canal before the World Court at The Hague).

Nasser told his audience that the canal and the Gulf of Aqaba, despite claims to the contrary, are territorial waters.

"I am sure neither threats nor (American) pressures will affect us," he said.

U. S. OF 1776

He likened the Egypt of today to the United States of George Washington's time, defending the theory of a neutral Egypt between the West and Russia as a "basically American idea" of non - entangling alliances.

But he said the United States refused to send wheat to Egypt while Russia offered 600,000 tons

WAR OF NERVES

Danes Given Warning By Soviet Union

COPENHAGEN, Sunday, March 31 (UP)— Soviet Premier N. A. Bulganin has warned Denmark not to risk "suicide" in an H-bomb war by allowing Russia's enemies to establish bases on its soil, it was announced Sunday.

No official comment on the implied threat was available immediately.

The note Bulganin sent to Danish Premier H. C. Hansen Friday was made public here Sunday. It repeated the threat the Soviet premier made to Norway days ago — that Russia's first act in any new war would be to blast U.S. bases with "annihilating modern arms."

NO BASES THERE

Strictly speaking, the United States has no bases in either of the Scandinavian countries. However, it does man the big Thule airbase on Greenland — a Danish possession.

Bulganin reminded Hansen ominously that "one hydrogen explosion would destroy a territory with a radius of several hundred kilometers." He added that action in a new war "would hardly be limited to the use of one bomb."

Tiny Denmark measures only 240 by 280 kilometers (150 by 175 miles). If Bulganin's figures are correct, a single H-blast would virtually blow the entire country off the map.

The purpose of the Russian notes to Denmark and Norway appeared to be to frighten the two countries into dropping their membership in the Atlantic Pact.

Wet Weekend In Prospect

Showers pelted the Twin Cities area last night, and the weatherman saw more of the same for Sunday.

Temperatures recorded at the CAA's Selman Field station here yesterday were a high of 73, and a low of 44.

The weekend weather outlook for Arkansas is for scattered showers.

ILLEGITIMATE TOTS

Chachere Seeks Welfare Slashes

BATON ROUGE, March 30 (AP)—Rep. Walter Chachere, chairman of a legislative group, said today a new effort to ease the tax burden caused by illegitimate children will be made in a special session he expects after May.

The Franklin Parish legislator heads a committee of senators and representatives conducting public hearings on the problem.

NEED CLEAR LAW

"We definitely need a clear law setting forth methods of proving fatherhood," he said, analyzing committee findings so far. "That seems to be the basis of Supreme Court rulings holding us back on the issue.

"It is evident from testimony and our findings in public records, the question of illegitimate children in Louisiana will require more than one corrective bill. Fathers are being overlooked and their responsibility is not being demanded."

The chairman said the next public hearing will be held in Lake Charles next month, with a final session in Baton Rouge just before the 30-day fiscal Legislature in May.

"From all indications," he said, "it is apparent a special session of the Legislature will be called after that. And if it is called we are going to ask the governor to place our welfare proposals before the Legislature."

Chachere was one of Gov. Earl

Stork Lurks At Crossroad

ASHEVILLE, N.C., March 30—Broadway and 42nd Street in New York may be the crossroads of the world to many folks but Mrs. William Brigman will take Broadway and Lexington right here in Asheville.

Six years ago to the day, on March 29, 1951, Mrs. Brigman was being drawn from her nearby Barnardsville home by her husband to Memorial Mission hospital to have a baby.

But the stork intercepted the Brigman's and their daughter was born in the car at the corner of Lexington and Broadway.

Friday, again on March 29, Brigman again was hurrying his wife to the hospital to have a baby. There was the stork, waiting at the corner of Lexington and Broadway.

The second baby born at the intersection also was girl. Like the first, she weighed eight pounds.

Embassy Sees Hope For Safety

TEHRAN, Iran, March 30 (AP)—Hopes soared tonight that pretty 35-year-old Mrs. Anita Carroll would be resuced from the desert bandits who seized her six days ago.

The U.S. Embassy said the Shah's police are closing in on two segments of the bandit gang in the desert of southeast Iran.

SEND DOCTOR

A doctor and a nurse were rushed to the area 800 miles southeast of this Iranian capital to stand by.

While the embassy remained noncommittal, an informed source said "it looks quite hopeful."

The embassy said it had been determined the outlaw gang split up after the ambush in which Mrs. Carroll's husband and three other men were killed last Sunday.

She was borne away by one group—perhaps in the party of the bandits' womenfolk or maybe with four gangsters who headed in another direction.

HARD ON HEELS

Police are hard on the heels of both these groups, the embassy was informed.

The embassy spokesman said there has been no contact with the outlaws despite offers of unlimited ransom and Iranian government promises the murderers and kidnapers would go free if they released Mrs. Carroll unharmed.

He flatly denied reports of negotiations.

"There is no information that anyone has had contact with the

DESPITE IKE'S STAND

Knowland Expects Slash In Budget

WASHINGTON, March 30 (AP)—Sen. Knowland R-Calif. said today President Eisenhower's latest defense of his spending budget isn't going to keep Congress from cutting about three billion dollars off presidential money requests.

Knowland, the Senate Republican leader, said in an interview he doubts even that amount of economizing by the legislators will permit any tax cut measure this year. Democratic leaders have been considering plans to reduce income levies effective next Jan. 1, if Eisenhower's budget is trimmed sufficiently. Knowland said he doesn't think such a move would be wise.

FIRMER STAND

Knowland and other GOP leaders apparently look on Eisenhower's remarks at a White House news conference last Wednesday as indicating the President is taking a firmer stand against budget cuts than they had expected.

Nevertheless, Knowland said he thinks there are going to be "substantial" reductions from the $71,800,000,000 in new money requests made by the President.

NEAR $3 BILLION

"I think more members of Congress believe the reductions will run between 2½ and 3 billion dollars than think anything like a five billion dollar cut can be achieved," Knowland said.

Sen. Byrd (D-Va) has called for a slash of from 5 to 6½ billions.

Knowland said he doesn't believe the Senate's action Thursday in approving a bill authorizing 1½ billion dollars worth of new water projects indicates that economy sentiment is declining among his colleagues.

The bill opens the way to future requests for actual appropri-

PANAMA

Legal Minds Brew Trouble Over Canal

PANAMA CITY, March 30 (UP) — Latin American legal experts expressed the opinion here Friday night that the United States should pay Panama a higher fee for the use of the Panama Canal.

Panama University's international conference on interoceanic canals adjourned without adopting any formal resolutions, but the consensus of those attending was that the $1,943,000 a year Panama receives from the U.S.-owned canal company is not enough.

WANTS 50 PER CENT

Vincente Saenz, of Mexico, said Panama is entitled to claim as much as 50 per cent of the canal's receipts after the capital cost of digging the "big ditch" has been amortized.

Delegates to the conference also challenged the provision of the 1903 canal treaty which grants the United States what amounts to sovereign righs over the Canal Zone "in perpetuity."

Francisco Alvarado Garcia, of Cuba, said the clause is contrary to international law. He added, however, that Panama is not entitled to cancel the "in perpeuity" provision arbitrarily.

He said elimination of the clause should be sought through negotiations with the United States.

ON SUEZ ISSUE

Big Powers Ready To Accept Defeat

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, March 30 (AP) — The United States, Britain, France and other big shipping nations today appeared to be about ready to accept defeat on the major issue of their long dispute with Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser.

From the time that Nasser seized the Suez Canal July 26 Western nations and others had fought for international control of the canal's operation.

Barring some unexpected change of plans, all signs now indicate they are prepared silently to yield to exclusive Egyptian operation, and to negotiate for the best safeguards they can get for their shipping rights.

The issue has been brought to the point of final decision by Nasser's proposal to the U.N. and to the United States and seven other nations this week of a plan for operating the vitally important waterway through the Egyptian canal authority.

This authority would collect all tolls. It would be bound, according to the Egyptian memo, by an 1888 treaty guaranteeing right of transit to all nations. Egypt would set aside 25 per cent of the tolls for development of the canal and 5 per cent for paying off the former Suez Canal Co., from which the property was seized last July.

Other provisions of the Egyptian plan call for development of a set of rules to govern the canal's operation, for appeals and arbitration procedures open to shippers who feel they have been treated unfairly and for filing of the Egyptian policy statement with the U.N. as "an international instrument."

The United States, which received a copy of the plan from Egypt, has been in consultation since midweek with British, French and other Western European governments which did not receive a copy. Secretary of State Dulles was reported working with advisors at his home today on the kind of reply which the United States should make, having in mind the common interests of the other nations as well as its own.

Indian Coming To U.S. For Surgery

By LEE LINDER

PHILADELPHIA, March 30 (AP)—An Indian post office clerk "who wants to live" is coming to America for heart surgery, thanks to a Nobel Prize Winner, an internationally known heart specialist and a group of Philadelphians.

His trip to the U.S. is being financed by trustees and friends of the Mary Bailey Foundation for Heart and Great Vessel Research in Philadelphia.

Foundation Chairman I. Stauffer Oliver, a judge of Common Pleas Court, explained the interest in the case as "a token of international good will — because the heart is universal and a man has a longing to live and to succeed."

The story of Sewa Chand of Samur, Patiala, in the Punjab region—telling of the bad heart he hopes will be made sound—had its beginning in a letter written last Oct. 27 to Dr. Andre Cournand of New York's Bellevue Hospital and 1956 winner of the Nobel Prize in medicine and physiology.

Chand, 35, a father of four who earns the equivalent of $27 weekly, appealed to Dr. Cournand to recommend medicines that would cure him of his ailment.

Chand outlined in meticulous detail his case history.

"My heart palpitates [illegible] speedily. I get absolutely exhausted having covered a little distance walking, climbing stairs and bicycle riding have become almost impossible for me. Breathlessness develops on a little exertion. Heart strain frequently develops and lasts for a week or so."

Doctors in India recommended surgery as the only cure but Chand said he couldn't take such a risk in his country.

"It is evident that the technique of heart operation has not yet fully developed in India and as such it involves ominous danger to undergo heart operation in these circumstances," he declared, voicing hope that Dr. Cournand would [illegible] and spontaneous interest in his case.

Dr. Cournand immediately got in touch with Dr. Charles P. Bailey of Philadelphia, one of America's leading heart surgeons and among the first to explore and operate inside the heart.

Wrote Dr. Cournand: "Don't you think it would be a means of proving that Americans are genuinely interested in people living in less advanced countries if money could be provided so as to enable him to have the benefit of your [illegible]. Do you know of any [illegible] patient who would help in this [illegible]

School Board Sets Meetings In Concordia

FERRIDAY, March 30 (Special)—The Concordia Parish School board announced today that they will conduct a series of panel discussions throughout the parish on needs of public education, both elementary and secondary. The discussions will be held at Ferriday, Vidalia, Monterey, and Clayton, with members of the school board and some faculty members taking part.

Adults throughout the parish are invited to attend.

"Doc" Pierce To Attend The State Contest

BATON ROUGE, La., March 30 (Special) — The "Papa" of the Chicken-of-Tomorrow Contests in the United States, Howard C. "Doc" Pierce, will be the guest of honor at the Louisiana Market Poultry Show to be held in Alexandria, April 2-4, according to Clyde Ingram, poultry specialist, LSU Agricultural Extension Service and a director of this annual show.

Some 12 years ago the Chicken-of-Tomorrow Contest was held for the first time in Louisiana, points out Ingram. It had a modest beginning but it has grown to great proportions, Ingram asserts. This year 54 of Louisiana's 64 parishes will be represented in the initial judging at the parish level. Only 25 per cent of the parish entries can qualify for the state finals. This means a total of approximately 200 pens of blue-ribbon broilers will be at the Alexandria show.

"Doc" Pierce is an internationally famous poultry expert, says Ingram. He serves as director of poultry research for the A & P Food Stores, with headquarters in New York, and has been an established authority in the fields of both research and marketing for more than half a century. In addition to the Louisiana honors to be conferred on Pierce, he will be called on to present his company's trophy to the championship winner.

"A dozen years later since the first Chicken-of-Tomorrow Contest was held in Louisiana, the success of the idea can be seen on thousands of Louisiana farms and in hundreds of thousands of farms over the nation," says Ingram. "The ratio of feed conversion has been reduced from more than four pounds of feed to a pound of meat, to less than three pounds of feed to a pound of meat. And traceable to this program is the fact that the growing period for broilers has been reduced to eight or nine weeks as compared with 12 to 14 weeks back in the mid-forties."

All Members Canvass Set

Methodists in Louisiana and Arkansas are engaged in a ten-week period of cultivation and promotion of a simultaneous every-member canvass program in local churches throughout the two states.

The every-member canvass made a part of the program of each of the three annual conferences of the area by conference action last year, is an attempt to assist local churches in achieving a sound financial relationship with their members. Providing the opportunity for all Methodists to observe their vow of loyalty, the canvass acquaints them with the financial program of the church.

Mrs. Leigh said this week's conference would be the first national Republican meeting she has attended. She had not been advised as to which party officials will speak at the meeting.

Mrs. A. J. Hodges, national committeewoman from Shreveport, will head the Lousiana delegation to the conference.

2 New Oilers Completed In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss., March 30 (AP)—Mississipi oil men this week reported completion of two oil wells, one labeled the discovery well of a new pool.

The discovery well was Shell Oil Co.'s Lincoln County Wildcat Denkmann Lumber Co. No. 1.

Operators reported the well flowed 156 barrels of oil a day from a lower Tuscaloosa sand at 10,778-90 feet.

The well also logged shows of undetermined commercial worth in the semi-shallow Wilcox zones at 6,000 feet, increasing the possibility of Wilcox sand production in Amite, Pike and Walthall counties.

The other completed well was Gulf Oil Corp.'s Coryell McKinney No. 3 at Pistol Ridge in Pearl River County.

The well was reported flowing 261 barrels of 40 gravity oil daily from perforations in the lower cretaceous sand at 9,582-83 feet.

Other oil activity included:

Sun Oil Co. abandoned its Federal-Creosote No. 2 well in Forest County. The well was drilled to 5,100 feet to test the semi-shallow Wilcox sand.

In Jones County's Gitano field, operators were preparing to rework the discovery well in an attempt to increase production.

The well is Gulf Refining Co.'s Lee Welch et al No. 1 which is producing from perforations in the Paluxy sand at 11,280-86 feet.

In Simpson County, Gulf Oil Corp. was below 11,600 feet in its V. F. Sullivan No. 1 offset to the Martinville Field discovery well. The venture showed scattered shows of oil at 10,024-77 feet.

In Smith County's Raleigh Field, California Co. was coring below 11,200 feet in its Homer Currie et al No. 1 well. The venture logged oil shows in sand sections below 10,970 feet.

In Covington County, Sinclair Oil and Gas Co. was coring below 14,300 feet in its deep wildcat Miler-Autman No. 1.

Two other Smith County wells were:

California Co.'s Central Oil Co. No. 1 which was scheduled to be drilled to 12,500 feet; and Continental Oil Co.'s M. C. Bryant No. 1 scheduled to be drilled to 13,000 feet.

Weatherman Overcome By Spring Sights

JACKSON, Miss., March 30 (UP)—The weatherman was overcome by spring Saturday.

This "observation" appeared on the weather wire service of the local U.S. Weather Bureau:

"Observed at Jackson at 11:35 this morning was unquestionably the most beautiful thing in all the heavens, and that was a magnificent display of iridescent clouds. We saw numerous splotches among the cirrus clouds of gorgeous opalescent rose pinks, emerald greens and turquoise blues. It occurred in a small area about 15 degrees from the sun and lasted only about 15 minutes. It can be fully explained but only in the language of a meteorologist. However, it can be said that it was only a fragment of a giant halo due to unusually small droplets. Signed Fish."

FERRIDAY, March 30 (Special)—The members of the Ferriday Kiwanis Club viewed a film on last year's Boy Scout Jamboree at the regular meeting Thursday night. MINISTER EXPLAINS PROTEST

Country Club Bar Issue Comes To Vote Tomorrow

With a meeting scheduled Monday night for the membership of West Monroe's newly-formed Highland Park Country Club to discuss a protest from the community's Ministerial Association against plans for establishment and operation of certain facilities in a proposed new clubhouse, a ministerial spokesman Saturday reiterated the association's opposition to provision of a "bar and recreation room."

The Rev. W. D. Milton, pastor of the West Monroe First Methodist Church, commented on behalf of the ministers that "we must stand in open opposition to anything which undermines the character of our youth and the interest of our home life."

W. D. Maxwell, president of the club, has stated that the members will vote by "secret ballot" on the question of whether the club should include or omit a bar and cardroom facilities.

"It was thought," Maxwell said, "to be generally understood from the outset that these facilities would be provided at the clubhouse, just as it is the usual practice for country clubs to have bars available for members and guests. The 'card-room' would be simply a recreation room, where members and guests would play bridge and other games; and this does not mean that it would be a place of gambling."

A resolution adopted by the Ministerial association set forth: "We stand ready to join you in any project for the spiritual, social and cultural betterment of our community . . . We plead with you to use your influence to build a center in which no member of any family would be embarrassed by any activities promoted by this club."

The Rev. Father Jim Marshall, vicar of St. Patrick's Episcopal church, West Monroe, Saturday said he had necessarily been absent from the Ministerial Association meeting at which the resolution was adopted. He added that, while concurring with the wish for development of wholesome recreational and cultural facilities, he did not "necessarily equate drinking with drunkenness or card-playing with gambling." He said his personal view as a minister was to the effect that these were "allowable pleasures which, if done properly, could be indulged in without being destructure to social, cultural or spiritual life."

Spain Rounds Up Communists Behind Boycott

MADRID, March 30 (UP)—The government announced Saturday it has rounded up 14 members of a "Communist propaganda ring" accused of fomenting recent boycotts of transportation and entertainment here.

The announcement said the activities of the ring "were directed from abroad."

The suspects, all "with known Communist affiliations and a record of conviction for similar offenses in the past," were caught with "propaganda apparatus and subversive materials" in their possession, security authorities said.

The arrests occurred in a hotel in suburban Lineal City. The announcement did not identify the prisoners or say when they were arrested.

Security authorities said the prisoners are suspected of responsibility for last month's partially successful boycott of subways, trolleys and buses here and for an attempted boycott of entertainment this weekend.

Spain Rounds Up Communists Behind Boycott

MADRID, March 30 (UP)—The government announced Saturday it has rounded up 14 members of a "Communist propaganda ring" accused of fomenting recent boycotts of transportation and entertainment here.

The announcement said the activities of the ring "were directed from abroad."

The suspects, all "with known Communist affiliations and a record of conviction for similar offenses in the past," were caught with "propaganda apparatus and subversive materials" in their possession, security authorities said.

The arrests occurred in a hotel in suburban Lineal City. The announcement did not identify the prisoners or say when they were arrested.

Security authorities said the prisoners are suspected of responsibility for last month's partially-successful boycott of subways, trolleys and buses here and for an attempted boycott of entertainment this weekend.

Ellender Fighting 'Civil Rights' Bill

Senator Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana is continuing a strong and worthy battle against attempts in congress to pass the so-called "civil rights" bill, which is in reality an action against the south and a movement toward the centralization of police powers in Washington.

A recent address by the Louisiana Senator contained many facts regarding the bill which should be called to the attention of all who believe in states rights, trial by jury and individual rights and those who oppose discrimination against the south. In part Ellender said:

"This so-called civil rights legislation will, if enacted, make a shambles of the Constitution and place basic individual rights at the whim of whoever may occupy the position of attorney general of the United States.

"For example, if you, as an individual, should be haled into federal court on complaint of another individual, the United States government would be named as plaintiff and Uncle Sam would act as his own attorney against you. You would not automatically receive a jury trial and, as a matter of fact, you would have no absolute right to a jury trial, since the United States government would be a party to the suit.

"Proponents of this vicious legislation have no compunction about declaring that they oppose provisions requiring a jury trial as a matter of right because they do not trust southern juries!

"This attitude is not only unrealistic, but it documents the fact that the so-called civil rights legislation has as its sole purpose the reduction of our southern states to the status of satellites of an over-powering c e n t r a l government located many miles away in Washington.

"If enacted into law, this legislation would relegate the southern people to the status of 'domestic Hungarians', under the iron heel of a horde of Washington lawyers instead of Russian commissars, subject to the whim and caprice of an appointed politician, instead of Kremlin bosses, but captives of oppression, nevertheless.

"When our founding fathers gathered to draft the Declaration of Independence, one of the specific abuses of power they cited as compelling the American independence from England was the fact that King George deprived our citizens of the right to trial by jury. No doubt the king felt he could not trust American juries, just as proponents of civil rights legislation feel they cannot trust southern juries.

"Let us hope the American people will awaken to the gigantic fraud which power-hungry minority elements are attempting to perpetrate upon us. It is unfortunate that the obnoxious nature of this legislation is so heavily buried beneath the glowing phrases which its proponents use in their efforts to justify it. Our citizens in all areas of our country must look beyond these honey-coated words; they must apply the principles of this legislation to themselves. If they do . . . they will all agree that it should be consigned to the junk heap forever.

"I hope and pray that congress will awake to the dangers which these bills carry, and that they are never brought to the floor of either house for debate. If they should be, you can count on me to talk against them as long as I have breath in my body. The only weapon we have at this time is the filibuster. I, along with others, shall not hesitate to use freedom of debate to preserve the freedom of individuals."

It will take such determination as Ellender expresses to prevent passage of this un-American legislation. Since debate in the house can be limited, the senators opposed to these measures probably will have to carry the burden of the fight. Our legislators who are carrying on the battle for southern, individual and constitutional rights should receive strong support from the people.

People Alone Don't Indicate Prosperity

Time and again in recent weeks and months we have read articles and heard discussions to the effect that the prosperity of the United States is more or less assured for the next two or three decades at least by the enormous population growth we are experiencing in this country.

Those who make such predictions are certainly assuming a lot of things, because if they read history or if they will just look around them in the present world, they will realize that there is no relationship between population and prosperity. If the largest population meant the highest standard of living, then India and China would lead the world in a big way; just the opposite is the actual case. Under certain conditions, the greater the population, the lower the standard of living.

The basic fundamental of prosperity is an entirely different factor than numbers of people; it is incentive, the incentive to the individual to exercise his initiative and his ingenuity, with the full realization that the extent of his success will be determined by his own energy and ambition.

If this incentive is dulled in any respect, just to that extent will prosperity be less likely to be achieved. If the results of the individual's efforts are taken from him to the extent that there is no longer any incentive to exert such efforts, then prosperity will be stopped dead in its tracks. This can be done by a totalitarian government of any sort — and it makes no difference whether this government is the autocratic rule of the dictator, the regimentation of communism or the planned economy of socialism: the end result will be the same.

Of course, if the incentive is taken away from him a little bit at a time, the retrogression of prosperity will also be gradual — but it will reach the point of no return just the same. That is the danger that faces us here in the United States. Even now it is difficult to find venture capital with which to build more factories and establish more businesses and supply more jobs to more people, because the individual is not allowed to keep enough of what he earns to interest him in supplying this capital. As it is, our present rate of taxation is such that the lowest paid among us works one day out of every five to pay his taxes — and the highest paid works nine days out of every ten to pay his taxes.

It is true we have the highest standard of living in this country of any nation of the world, the highest man has ever known, and we are rightly proud of it. But we should not forget what brought this about, else we shall inevitably reverse the process. There have been other nations in the world during the 175 years of our national existence with more people, with greater area, with more natural resources than we have had. What has caused the United States to become the most powerful of nations, with the highest standard of living, while these other nations have lagged far behind?

There can be no question but that the answer lies in our way of life, in the philosophy of government founded for us by our forefathers — that in proportion as a man exercised his initiative and his ingenuity and exerted his energy, he would prosper accordingly and the fruits of his labors would not be taken from him by excessive taxation or otherwise.

Our population has grown from 150 million in 1950 to approximately 170 million in1957. It is estimated that the population will reach 200 million by 1967 and perhaps pass 225 million by 1975. If we are going to assure prosperity for all these people, we had better begin thinking about cutting taxes so that the billions of dollars we are now spending on such things as foreign aid and welfare state benefits and bureaucratic administration — all of which are entirely unproductive and add nothing to the standard of living — can then be spent on investment in new factories and new machinery and new products and thereby provide productive jobs for all who will be needing them. Only in this way can prosperity be maintained.

Unemployment In China Is Serious

A United Nations economic commission reports that Communist China faces a "pressing problem of unemployment" that threatens to produce 17 million jobless by 1962.

It seems that the population of China is expected to rise from its present estimated 600 million to about 660 million by the time of completion of the next red "five-year plan." Of the added 60 million 24 million will be working age and jobs are not expected to be available for 17 million of them.

The communist bosses must feel a great frustration. The mothers of China are producing children faster than their schemes can produce jobs. But the commissars can do as they have in the past— "liquidate" a few million people. When they decide this is the only solution left, the terror will begin anew.

Spring is here, but there is new evidence that winter never surrenders unconditionally.

Demand For Reduced Federal Budget Strong Enough To Disturb Officials

WASHINGTON, D. C. —If the problem of cutting federal expenditures were presented more truthfully, better progress could be made in bringing the federal budget within limits which would permit a slash in federal income taxes.

It isn't that the budget itself is dishonestly compiled, t h o u g h many departments and bureaus undoubtedly prepare their estimates of expenditure with tongue in check, hoping that the various questionable items will be approved. Neither can congress be called dishonest in refusing to eliminate many items, because every allocation of federal money is deemed essential by some group.

This is the first year in which the demand for reduced federal expenditures has become strong enough to disturb both the executive and legislative branches of government. It is also the first year in which the federal debt has pushed so hard against the 275 billion dollar debt ceiling that fiscal experts fear a recurring federal deficit and a possible drop in value of government securities.

That is why, also for the first time, congress may do something really sincere about reducing the cost of government. Failure to do so before may be attributed to several causes, but one principal reason is the jealousy between the two houses of congress over fiscal matters. For this, neither house can be given all the blame.

Since appropriations constitutionally must originate in the house, members of that body think that the amounts they vote should not be changed. The senate reviews all house figures and often restores cuts sometimes just to show its independence. That doesn't result in much progress in reducing expenditures, as differing amounts must be reconciled in conference between the houses, where a lot of trading goes on.

This same jealousy has prevented final action for the past seven years on a proposal for a joint committee on the budget, offered by Senator John L. McClellan which would be composed of members of house and senate appropriation committees and "would assist congress in exercising adequate control over expenditure of public funds by the executive branch of government."

The routine followed in appropriating the peoples' money hasn't changed appreciably during the 20th century. Committees have been enlarged, more clerks have been added, but the fact remains that thousands of items comprising the 72 billion dollar budget, filling 1200 closely printed pages of telephone book size, are rushed through in limited time.

There is litle detailed analysis, with the result that the experts from the executive branch of goverment are prepared to justify the continuance of all programs and all expenditures, which is one of the main difficulties in cutting the cost of government.

The McClellan plan is different. It provides for a staff sufficient to examine all budget items with a view to reducing the cost of government without decreasing efficiency. In purpose, it would resemble the joint committee on taxation, which has modernized the government's tax laws in recent congresses.

The senate has passed the McClellan bill to provide new machinery for cutting government expenditures three times since 1950, but house jealousy of its historic appropriation prerogatives has killed the bill in that chamber.

As President Eisenhower reminded a recent press conference, there didn't use to be so many economy minded people in congress as there are now. And since government economy can't be sensibly accomplished by slashing wildly in all directions, the house at this session may give more thought to McClellan's plan for a systematic combing of proposed expenditures by a staff created for that purpose.

Fear Of Financial Loss Through Illness Serious

There are three great fears of economic insecurity which profoundly disturb all but an insignificant minority of us, America's tens of millions of adults.

One is the fear of being helplessly dependent in our older years on others for mere subsistence.

To some extent, this fear is being alleviated by the development since the '30s of our social security system and the growth of major private pension plans.

Another is the fear of being out of a job for some time and as a result, losing our savings, going into debt, hiting financial boom.

This fear also being gradually eased by the development of jobless insurance and supplementary unemployment benefit plans.

And a third fear is that of prolonged illness — resulting not from an unusual sickness, but from an everyday type of disease which can strike anyone anytime and which always places a massive financial burden on the worker and his family.

On combatting this great fear, we have made only minimum progress.

In fact, not until the day of March 29, 1957, have we had even an authoritative estimate of the extent of this form of economic insecurity, its cost to the worker, the employer, the community, the nation.

Yet, the chances are one out of 25 that this year you will be hit by the disaster or prolonged illness — defined as an illness keeping you away from your job for four weeks or more.

The chances are one out of five that you will be struck by this catastrophe within five years.

The chances are that only a little more than half the cost of this illness will be covered by corporation payments to you or by some insurance deal.

The chances are that, if you're an average worker earning $3,485 a year, your illness will keep you absent from your job for 10.7 weeks; your wage loss will be $717; you'll be compensated for only 55 per cent of this loss; your net loss will run to 9.3 per cent of your annual earnings.

And the chances are that if you are in the $7,500 or over income bracket, your illness will keep you absent for 11 to 12 weeks; your average wage loss will top $1,000; your net loss in annual earnings will exceed 21 per cent.

To put it brutally, you'll recover from your physical illness a lot faster than you'll recover from the financial blow.

It's hard to believe that we've never known such facts as these until today. And behind this lies a fascinating tale of research.

Back in 1951, when there was an outburst of pressure for national health programs, the Research Council for Economic Security — a privately - financed, non-profit Chicago organization — decided to get some facts about the costs of lengthy illness. "To our astonishment, we found we were into an absolutely unexplored field" said Leon Werch, the Council's research director, when I interviewed him in New York this week. "When our union advisers and industrial sponsors urged us to go aheal and said, 'This (prolonged illness) will be the next major area for bargaining,' we really dug in." The Council has been working on its report for five years, has studied almost 194,000 employes of 145 firms for at least one year.

One of the most significant findings of the survey is the disclosure that while insurance plans do "a pretty good job" of covering hospital and surgical cost, they provide woefully inadequate coverage of other expenses. Yet, Werch emphasized, "The average worker stays in the hospital only two weeks, but he's away from the job for more than 10. We should re-examine our entire insurance program to see what package can be devised to cover the non-surgical, non-hospital costs of the average worker."

Another most significant finding is the confirmation of the vital need for better corporation planning to prevent prolonged illness of workers.

The Council has given us a basis for action to fight this third great fear. Now what will be done will depend on you — as an individual businessman, a union leader, an insurance executive. Even modest progress would mean so much to so many of us.

Deflecting Big Government Called Way To Break It Up

WASHINGTON, D. C. — "It's like a stampede," this Western Senator was saying in describing the juggernaut of Big Government. "You can't stop a stampede by riding into it head-on. But if you ride into it on an angle, you can deflect it and break it up into little bits."

The Senator was speaking from personal experience on the cattle range, but the figure of speech holds good. There are these contrasts in the 85th Congress between the head-on and the sidewise methods of attacking our stampede toward Federal totalitarianism.

The head-on way to lower Federal taxes is to repeal the 16th Amendment to the Constitution which gives Congress unlimited power to confiscate - by - taxation all private and corporate property. There is a good deal in favor of repeal. It is supported by a number of good men, including former Notre Dame Law School Dean Clarence Manion, former Internal Revenue Commissioner T. Coleman Andrews, and Michigan Congressman Clare Hoffman (House J. Res. 232).

All efforts to meet the challenge of confiscation by frontal obstruction have both the merits and demerits of their nature. They are forthright, fearless and inspirational, but they are probably futile. I reach this conclusion unwillingly, after having praised the attempt and the men who are making it. But the only thing worse than finding myself in error would be to cringe from admitting it. To stop the juggernaut in our time, we must be cunning as well as courageous. We must outflank the stampede.

There are several sidewise ways to lower Federal taxes. One (S. J. Res. 25) is to put a 25 per cent limitation on the Federal tax take, except in times of war and lawfully-declared emergency. Another (H. R.172) sidewise way is to set a ceiling on taxes for any fiscal year. The proposed limit on the fiscal year 1958, beginning next July, is $65 billion instead of the $72 billion which the President has asked.

Still another side attack on big spending is the formation of a Joint House - Senate Committee on the Budget, similar to the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy. It would act as a super-group to oversee spending. Other deflection shots at the national take-away system are a Federal sales tax and a Federal lottery. But these are not very seriously taken by the lawmakers.

All methods which deserve attention should be based on a well-known pair of truisms. One is that only Congress can appropriate money. The other is that only the people can elect Congress. The Federal government, like the Serpent of Eden, hisses temptation into the innocent ears of people who believe in something - for - nothing. But Congress alone can reach for the forbidden fruit, and nobody but the people can munch it and develop the stomach - ache.

Taxes are only part of the problem. The Federal juggernaut dominates life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness with scores of regulatory restrictions upon business and Labor. The head-on method is to fight these laws, but there is little or no chance to repeal on the national level. Indirect methods, however, are coming into vogue. Indiana, with its right - to - work law, is the 18th State to emancipate local business and Labor from compulsory unionism. The construction industry recently established a Labor - Management Advisory Committee, with Labor Secretary Mitchell as chairman, and reached a "bargaining table" agreement on some Taft - Hartley amendments. Any community like Indiana, or industry like construction, can gain freedom from Federal force bills by applying its ingenuity to these voluntary, do-it-yourself methods.

The head-on way to stop foreign aid is to block the appropriation bills which each year take from 3 billion to $7 billion from the American taxpayer. But a sidewise way to stop the foreign giveway is to substitute private investment for public investment in underdeveloped nations.

We often assume that American business investment abroad is small; but it isn't. A recent witness before the Senate special committee on foreign aid set the adjusted figure of private investment "in the neighborhood of $4 billion."

I, along with others, shall not hesitate to use freedom of debate to preserve the freedom of individuals."

It will take such determination as Ellender expresses to prevent passage of this un-American legislation. Since debate in the house can be limited, the senators opposed to these measures probably will have to carry the burden of the fight. Our legislators who are carrying on the battle for southern, individual and constitutional rights should receive strong support from the people.

People Alone Don't Indicate Prosperity

Time and again in recent weeks and months we have read articles and heard discussions to the effect that the prosperity of the United States is more or less assured for the next two or three decades at least by the enormous population growth we are experiencing in this country.

Those who make such predictions are certainly assuming a lot of things, because if they read history or if they will just look around them in the present world, they will realize that there is no relationship between population and prosperity. If the largest population meant the highest standard of living, then India and China would lead the world in a big way; just the opposite is the actual case. Under certain conditions, the greater the population, the lower the standard of living.

The basic fundamental of prosperity is an entirely different factor than numbers of people; it is incentive, the incentive to the individual to exercise his initiative and his ingenuity, with the full realization that the extent of his success will be determined by his own energy and ambition.

If this incentive is dulled in any respect, just to that extent will prosperity be less likely to be achieved. If the results of the individual's efforts are taken from him to the extent that there is no longer any incentive to exert such efforts then prosperity will be stopped dead in its tracks. This can be done by a totalitarian government of any sort — and it makes no difference whether this government is the autocratic rule of the dictator, the regimentation of communism or the planned economy of socialism: the end result will be the same.

Of course, if the incentive is taken away from him a little bit at a time, the retrogression of prosperity will also be gradual — but it will reach the point of no return just the same. That is the danger that faces us here in the United States. Even now it is difficult to find venture capital with which to build more factories and establish more businesses and supply more jobs to more people, because the individual is not allowed to keep enough of what he earns to interest him in supplying this capital. As it is, our present rate of taxation is such that the lowest paid among us works one day out of every five to pay his taxes — and the highest paid works nine days out of every ten to pay his taxes.

It is true we have the highest standard of living in this country of any nation of the world, the highest man has ever known, and we are rightly proud of it. But we should not forget what brought this about, else we shall inevitably reverse the process. There have been other nations in the world during the 175 years of our national existence with more people, with greater area, with more natural resources than we have had. What has caused the United States to become the most powerful of nations, with the highest standard of living, while these other nations have lagged far behind?

There can be no question but that the answer lies in our way of life, in the philosophy of government founded for us by our forefathers — that in proportion as a man exercised his initiative and his ingenuity and exerted his energy, he would prosper accordingly and the fruits of his labors would not be taken from him by excessive taxation or otherwise.

Our population has grown from 150 million in 1950 to approximately 170 million in1957. It is estimated that the population will reach 200 million by 1967 and perhaps pass 225 million by 1975. If we are going to assure prosperity for all these people, we had better begin thinking about cutting taxes so that the billions of dollars we are now spending on such things as foreign aid and welfare state benefits and bureaucratic administration — all of which are entirely unproductive and add nothing to the standard of living — can then be spent on investment in new factories and new machinery and new products and thereby provide productive jobs for all who will be needing them. Only in this way can prosperity be maintained.

Unemployment In China Is Serious

A United Nations economic commission reports that Communist China faces a "pressing problem of unemployment" that threatens to produce 17 million jobless by 1962.

It seems that the population of China is expected to rise from its present estimated 600 million to about 660 million by the time of completion of the next red "five-year plan." Of the added 60 million 24 million will be working age and jobs are not expected to be available for 17 million of them.

The communist bosses must feel a great frustration. The mothers of China are producing children faster than their schemes can produce jobs. But the commissars can do as they have in the past—"liquidate" a few million people. When they decide this is the only solution left, the terror will begin anew.

Spring is here, but there is new evidence that winter never surrenders unconditionally.

Demand For Reduced Federal Budget Strong Enough To Disturb Officials

WASHINGTON, D. C. —If the problem of cutting federal expenditures were presented more truthfully, better progress could be made in bringing the federal budget within limits which would permit a slash in federal income taxes.

It isn't that the budget itself is dishonestly compiled, though many departments and bureaus undoubtedly prepare their estimates of expenditure with tongue in cheek, hoping that the various questionable items will be approved. Neither can congress be called dishonest in refusing to eliminate many items, because every allocation of federal money is deemed essential by some group.

This is the first year in which the demand for reduced federal expenditures has become strong enough to disturb both the executive and legislative branches of government. It is also the first year in which the federal debt has pushed so hard against the 275 billion dollar debt ceiling that fiscal experts fear a recurring federal deficit and a possible drop in value of government securities.

That is why, also for the first time, congress may do something really sincere about reducing the cost of government. Failure to do so before may be attributed to several causes, but one principal reason is the jealousy between the two houses of congress over fiscal matters. For this, neither house can be given all the blame.

Since appropriations constitutionally must originate in the house, members of that body think that the amounts they vote should not be changed. The senate reviews all house figures and often restores cuts sometimes just to show its independence. That doesn't result in much progress in reducing expenditures, as differing amounts must be reconciled in conference between the houses, where a lot of trading goes on.

This same jealousy has prevented final action for the past seven years on a proposal for a joint committee on the budget, offered by Senator John L. McClellan which would be composed of members of house and senate appropriation committees and "would assist congress in exercising adequate control over expenditure of public funds by the executive branch of government."

The routine followed in appropriating the peoples' money hasn't changed appreciably during the 20th century. Committees have been enlarged, more clerks have been added, but the fact remains that thousands of items comprising the 72 billion dollar budget, filling 1200 closely printed pages of telephone book size, are rushed through in limited time.

There is litle detailed analysis, with the result that the experts from the executive branch of goverment are prepared to justify the continuance of all programs and all expenditures, which is one of the main difficulties in cutting the cost of government.

The McClellan plan is different. It provides for a staff sufficient to examine all budget items with a view to reducing the cost of government without decreasing efficiency. In purpose, it would resemble the joint committee on taxation, which has modernized the government's tax laws in recent congresses.

The senate has passed the McClellan bill to provide new machinery for cutting government expenditures three times since 1950, but house jealousy of its historic appropriation prerogatives has killed the bill in that chamber.

As President Eisenhower reminded a recent press conference, there didn't use to be so many economy minded people in congress as there are now. And since government economy can't be sensibly accomplished by slashing wildly in all directions, the house at this session may give more thought to McClellan's plan for a systematic combing of proposed expenditures by a staff created for that purpose.

Fear Of Financial Loss Through Illness Serious

There are three great fears of economic insecurity which profoundly disturb all but an insignificant minority of us, America's tens of millions of adults.

One is the fear of being helplessly dependent in our older years on others for mere subsistence.

To some extent, this fear is being alleviated by the development since the '30s of our social security system and the growth of major private pension plans.

Another is the fear of being out of a job for some time and as a result, losing our savings, going into debt, hiting financial boom.

This fear also being gradually eased by the development of jobless insurance ond supplementary unemployment benefit plans.

And a third fear is that of prolonged illness — resulting not from an unusual sickness, but from an everyday type of disease which can strike anyone anytime and which always places a massive financial burden on the worker and his family.

On combatting this great fear, we have made only minimum progress.

In fact, not until the day of March 29, 1957, have we had even an authoritative estimate of the extent of this form of economic insecurity, its cost to the worker, the employer, the community, the nation.

Yet, the chances are one out of 25 that this year you will be hit by the disaster or prolonged illness — defined as an illness keeping you away from your job for four weeks or more.

The chances are one out of five that you will be struck by this catastrophe within five years.

The chances are that only a little more than half the cost of this illness will be covered by corporation payments to you or by some insurance deal.

The chances are that, if you're an average worker earning $3,485 a year, your illness will keep you absent from your job for 10.7 weeks; your wage loss will be $717; you'll be compensated for only 55 per cent of this loss; your net loss will run to 9.3 per cent of your annual earnings.

And the chances are that if you are in the $7,500 or over income bracket, your illness will keep you absent for 11 to 12 weeks; your average wage loss will top $2,000; your net loss in annual earnings will exceed 21 per cent.

To put it brutally, you'll recover from your physical illness a lot faster than you'll recover from the financial blow.

It's hard to believe that we've never known such facts as these until today. And behind this lies a fascinating tale of research.

Back in 1951, when there was an outburst of pressure for national health programs, the Research Council for Economic Security — a privately - financed, non-profit Chicago organization — decided to get some facts about the costs of lengthy illness. "To our astonishment, we found we were into an absolutely unexplored field" said Leon Werch, the Council's research director, when I interviewed him in New York this week. "When our union advisers and industrial sponsors urged us to go aheal and said, 'This (prolonged illness) will be the next major area for bargaining,' we really dug in." The Council has been working on its report for five years, has studied almost 194,000 employes of 145 firms for at least one year.

One of the most significant findings of the survey is the disclosure that while insurance plans do "a pretty good job" of covering hospital and surgical cost, they provide woefully inadequate coverage of other expenses. Yet, Werch emphasized, "The average worker stays in the hospital only two weeks, but he's away from the job for more than 10. We should re-examine our entire insurance program to see what package can be devised to cover the non-surgical, non-hospital costs of the average worker."

Another most significant finding is the confirmation of the vital need for better corporation planning to prevent prolonged illness of workers.

The Council has given us a basis for action to fight this third great fear. Now what will be done will depend on you — as an individual businessman, a union leader, an insurance executive. Even modest progress would mean so much to so many of us.

Deflecting Big Government Called Way To Break It Up

WASHINGTON, D. C. — "It's like a stampede," this Western Senator was saying in describing the juggernaut of Big Government. "You can't stop a stampede by riding into it head-on. But if you ride into it on an angle, you can deflect it and break it up into little bits."

The Senator was speaking from personal experience on the cattle range, but the figure of speech holds good. There are these contrasts in the 85th Congress between the head-on and the sidewise methods of attacking our stampede toward Federal totalitarianism.

The head-on way to lower Federal taxes is to repeal the 16th Amendment to the Constitution which gives Congress unlimited power to confiscate - by - taxation all private and corporate property. There is a good deal in favor of repeal. It is supported by a number of good men, including former Notre Dame Law School Dean Clarence Manion, former Internal Revenue Commissioner T. Coleman Andrews, and Michigan Congressman Clare Hoffman (House J. Res. 232).

All efforts to meet the challenge of confiscation by frontal obstruction have both the merits and demerits of their nature. They are forthright, fearless and inspirational, but they are probably futile. I reach this conclusion unwillingly, after having praised the attempt and the men who are making it. But the only thing worse than finding myself in error would be to cringe from admitting it. To stop the juggernaut in our time, we must be cunning as well as courageous. We must outflank the stampede.

There are several sidewise ways to lower Federal taxes. One (S. J. Res. 25) is to put a 25 per cent limitation on the Federal tax take, except in times of war and lawfully-declared emergency. Another (H. R.172) sidewise way is to set a ceiling on taxes for any fiscal year. The proposed limit on the fiscal year 1958, beginning next July, is $65 billion instead of the $72 billion which the President has asked.

Still another side attack on big spending is the formation of a Joint House - Senate Committee on the Budget, similar to the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy. It would act as a super-group to oversee spending. Other deflection shots at the national takeaway system are a Federal sales tax and a Federal lottery. But these are not very seriously taken by the lawmakers.

All methods which deserve attention should be based on a well-known pair of truisms. One is that only Congress can appropriate money. The other is that only the people can elect Congress. The Federal government, like the Serpent of Eden, hisses temptation into the innocent ears of people who believe in something - for - nothing. But Congress alone can reach for the forbidden fruit, and nobody but the people can munch it and develop the stomach - ache.

Taxes are only part of the problem. The Federal juggernaut dominates life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness with scores of regulatory restrictions upon business and Labor. The head-on method is to fight these laws, but there is little or no chance to repeal on the national level. Indirect methods, however, are coming into vogue. Indiana, with its right - to - work law, is the 18th State to emancipate local business and Labor from compulsory unionism. The construction industry recently established a Labor - Management Advisory Committee, with Labor Secretary Mitchell as chairman, and reached a "bargaining table" agreement on some Taft - Hartley amendments. Any community like Indiana, or industry like construction, can gain freedom from Federal force bills by applying its ingenuity to these voluntary, do-it-yourself methods.

The head-on way to stop foreign aid is to block the appropriation bills which each year take from 3 billion to $7 billion from the American taxpayer. But a sidewise way to stop the foreign giveway is to substitute private investment for public investment in underdeveloped nations.

We often assume that American business investment abroad is small; but it isn't. A recent witness before the Senate special committee on foreign aid set the adjusted figure of private investment "in the neighborhood of $4 billion."

Give Credit To God

HOW often do you think of God . . . In anything you do? . . . Are you quite conscious, first of all . . . That He created you? . . . Or do you feel your talents are . . . You would be non-existent, as . . . The world goes on its way . . . And as each moment of your life . . . Is one He lets you live . . . So are your talents those that God . . . 1892 Murder Case Still Intriguing

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—Everybody has favorite murder mysteries. One of mine is the Lizzie Borden case.

Did this 32-year-old spinster seize a hatchet one hot August day in 1892 and slay her father and step-mother in their Fall River, Mass., home? The burden of circumstantial evidence indicates that she did. But a jury found her innocent.

The fascinating sequence of events was brilliantly retold on Omnibus (ABC-TV). First her trial was dramatized, with some sage, dry comments by the noted Boston lawyer Joseph N. Welch, who has long been interested in the case. Then Agnes de Mille presented her own interpretation of the case in her beautiful and evocative ballet "Fall River Legend."

Perhaps the murders of Andrew and Abby Borden received such international and enduring interest because they were the subject of a ballad—and many variations on that ballad. The case has, in effect, become a legend.

Personally I've been familiar with the legend since childhood because my father's family lived in Fall River for many years. My grandfather knew Andrew Borden and never tired of discussing the case. My father recalls seeing Lizzie ride out in a carriage when he was a small boy. He remembers with a grimace the insensitivity of youth, how he and other boys would run after the carriage of the shunned woman chanting, "Andy Borden, he is dead; Lizzie chopped him on the head. . . . . As he now says, "Surely Lizzie was punished."

The Omnibus dramatization, hewing carefully to the line of court records, indicated Lizzie was guilty — though many lawyers would quickly point out reasonable doubt on the basis of evidence admitted to the trial. As Welch said, the jury could scarcely do other than find her innocent. But why, for example, did the court find inadmissable the testimony of the clerk from whom Lizzie tried to buy poison?

Herbert Polk, president of the company, said that "only a few" dealerships in communities the size of Monroe, or smaller, had previously been selected for representation in the courses.

Pierce To Be Honor Guest At State Poultry Contest

BATON ROUGE, March 30 (Special) — The "Papa" of the Chicken-of-Tomorrow Contests in the United States, Howard C. "Doc" Pierce, will be the guest of honor at the Louisiana Market Poultry Show to be held in Alexandria Tuesday through Thursday, according to Clyde Ingram, poultry specialist, L. S. U. Agricultural Extension Service, and a director of this annual show.

Some 12 years ago the Chicken-of-Tomorrow Contest was held for the first time in Louisiana, points out Ingram. It had a modest beginning but it has grown to great proportions, Ingram asserts. This year 54 of Louisiana's 64 parishes will be represented in the initial judging at the parish level. Only 25 per cent of the parish entries can qualify for the state finals. This means a total of approximately 300 pens of blue-ribbon broilers will be at the Alexandria show.

"Doc" Pierce is an internationally famous poultry expert, Ingram said. He serves as director of poultry research for the A & P Food Stores, with headquarters in New York, and has been an established authority in the fields of both research and marketing for more than half a century. In addition to the Louisiana honors to be conferred on Pierce, he will be called on to present his company's trophy to the championship winner.

"A dozen years later since the first Chicken-of-Tomorrow Contest was held in Louisiana, the success of the idea can be seen on thousands of Louisiana farms and in hundreds of thousands of farms over the nation," says Ingram. "The ratio of feed conversion has been reduced from more than four pounds of feed to a pound of meat, to less than three pounds of feed to a pound of meat. And traceable to this program is the fact that the growing period for broilers has been reduced to eight or nine weeks as compared with 12 to 14 weeks back in the mid-forties."

Cardinal Still In Asylum At U.S. Legation

VIENNA, March 30 (AP) — Hungary's Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty will round out the fifth month of his asylum in the U.S. Legation in Budapest April 4.

He took refuge there when the Russian army attacked Budapest Nov. 4 and crushed an uprising of Hungarian anti-Communists.

There is no idea of what the outcome will be in this most spectacular case of political refuge resulting from the modern Hungarian revolution.

Will the Communist government some day soon demand that the Cardinal be turned out of his sanctuary and make himself liable to be arrested again?

Would the U.S. authorities comply with such a demand?

Word from Budapest is that nobody seems worried about a possibility of such a government demand now despite increasing attacks on the Cardinal in the Hungarian Red press.

The Cardinal is less of an embarrassment to U.S. authorities now than he was two months ago. That was when his nominal protector was U.S. Minister Edward T. Wailes, an envoy who left rather than present his credentials to the Soviet-imposed government of Premier Janos Kadar.

U.S. diplomats from Budapest who recently visited Vienna said Mindszenty may remain in the Legation indefinitely.

They say the Cardinal never mentions the prospect of leaving. No Americans ask him about it.

And from here it appears unlikely that the Kadar government would demand that the Americans expel the Cardinal. The government is well aware of the Cardinal's popularity among the Hungarians, no matter what their religious belief, because of his opposition to Communism.

The Kadar regime would not like to face the problem of what to do with him.

It has been reported frequently that the Communists asked Mindszenty when they had him in jail if he would accept exile in return for his liberty.

He was always reported to have refused.

A Western diplomat who recently left Hungary went around to say goodby to the Cardinal and asked him jokingly if he wouldn't like to come along.

The Cardinal answered, seriously, "Yes, that would be fine—provided I could come back."

Janos Horvath, head of the Hungarian government's Bureau of Religious Affairs, contended in a statement March 10 that the Cardinal's life prison sentence is still in effect.

He claimed that the Cardinal's liberation by insurgents last Oct. 30 represented "only an interruption of his sentence."

Horvath reiterated charges, also carried in the Budapest press, that the Cardinal used his asylum to issue orders curbing "progressive minded" priests who have collaborated with the Communist regime.

But the press attacks are believed by some observers here and in Budapest as designed mainly to badger the United States.

The press jibes have made much of the fact that the Cardinal sought refuge in the Legation, a kind of political asylum common in Latin American countries but not in Europe. The Communists made capital of the questions asked by some: "Why did not the Prince Primate of the Church remain with his flock and share their fate?"

But this correspondent, who also took refuge in the U.S. Legation, recalls that the Cardinal in taking asylum cited international law or tradition that allows princes of the Roman Catholic Church to ask the aid of any government in time of danger.

Another factor is the Cardinal's own attitude as a living link of the Church.

This correspondent recalls the night everyone was ordered into the Legation cellar because of a reported Russian ultimatum to bomb the city if the Nationalists did not lay down their arms.

In the intimacy of the improvised air raid shelter, packed also with women, children and pets, we talked quietly about his health.

Then he added, "somebody has to stay free to tell the world what is happening here." Gazing fixedly before him for a few moments, he said in a softer tone, "I don't want to go back to prison, you know."

1892 Murder Case Still Intriguing

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—Everybody has favorite murder mysteries. One of mine is the Lizzie Borden case.

Did this 32-year-old spinster seize a hatchet one hot August day in 1892 and slay her father and step-mother in their Fall River, Mass., home? The burden of circumstantial evidence indicates that she did. But a jury found her innocent.

The fascinating sequence of events was brilliantly retold on Omnibus (ABC-TV). First her trial was dramatized, with some sage, dry comments by the noted Boston lawyer Joseph N. Welch, who has long been interested in the case. Then Agnes de Mille presented her own interpretation of the case in her beautiful and evocative ballet "Fall River Legend."

Perhaps the murders of Andrew and Abby Borden received such international and enduring interest because they were the subject of a ballad—and many variations on that ballad. The case has, in effect, become a legend.

Personally I've been familiar with the legend since childhood because my father's family lived in Fall River for many years. My grandfather knew Andrew Borden and never tired of discussing the case. My father recalls seeing Lizzie ride out in a carriage when he was a small boy. He remembers with a grimace the insensitivity of youth, how he and other boys would run after the carriage of the shunned woman chanting, "Andy Borden, he is dead; Lizzie chopped him on the head. . . . As he now says, "Surely Lizzie was punished."

The Omnibus dramatization, hewing carefully to the line of court records, indicated Lizzie was guilty — though many lawyers would quickly point out reasonable doubt on the basis of evidence admitted to the trial. As Welch said, the jury could scarcely do other than find her innocent. But why, for example, did the court find inadmissable the testimony of the clerk from whom Lizzie tried to buy poison?

Pierce To Be Honor Guest At State Poultry Contest

BATON ROUGE, March 30 (Special) — The "Papa" of the Chicken -of - Tomorrow Contests in the United States, Howard C. "Doc" Pierce, will be the guest of honor at the Louisiana Market Poultry Show to be held in Alexandria Tuesday through Thursday, according to Clyde Ingram, poultry specialist, L. S. U. Agricultural Extension Service, and a director of this annual show.

Some 12 years ago the Chicken-of-Tomorrow Contest was held for the first time in Louisiana, points out Ingram. It had a modest beginning but it has grown to great proportions, Ingram asserts. This year 54 of Louisiana's 64 parishes will be represented in the initial judging at the parish level. Only 25 per cent of the parish entries can qualify for the state finals. This means a total of approximately 300 pens of blue - ribbon broilers will be at the Alexandria show.

"Doc" Pierce is an internationally famous poultry expert, Ingram said. He serves as director of poultry research for the A & P Food Stores, with headquarters in New York, and has been an established authority in the fields of both research and marketing for more than half a century. In addition to the Louisiana honors to be conferred on Pierce, he will be called on to present his company's trophy to the championship winner.

"A dozen years later since the first Chicken - of - Tomorrow Contest was held in Louisiana, the success of the idea can be seen on thousands of Louisiana farms and in hundreds of thousands of farms over the nation," says Ingram. "The ratio of feed conversion has been reduced from more than four pounds of feed to a pound of meat, to less than three pounds of feed to a pound of meat. And traceable to this program is the fact that the growing period for broilers has been reduced to eight or nine weeks as compared with 12 to 14 weeks back in the mid-forties.'

Cardinal Still In Asylum At U.S. Legation

VIENNA, March 30 (AP) — Hungary's Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty will round out the fifth month of his asylum in the U.S. Legation in Budapest April 4.

He took refuge there when the Russian army attacked Budapest Nov. 4 and crushed an uprising of Hungarian anti-Communists.

There is no idea of what the outcome will be in this most spectacular case of political refuge resulting from the modern Hungarian revolution.

Will the Communist government some day soon demand that the Cardinal be turned out of his sanctuary and make himself liable to be arrested again?

Would the U.S. authorities comply with such a demand?

Word from Budapest is that nobody seems worried about a possibility of such a government demand now despite increasing attacks on the Cardinal in the Hungarian Red press.

EGYPTIANS BITTER

Egyptians were bitter, he said, when they read between the lines of American newspapers that Americans were "happy to see us in trouble."

He added that he receives 30,000 sympathetic letters a month from people in the United States and answers all of them.

The Egyptian President said Egypt would be willing to take up the overall Mideast problem with the West but "if they want to deal only with Israel rights and not the rights of refugees then we will not accept it."

"No cold war pressure against Egypt would change that," he said.

"They say Nasser is a dictator but I believe in our rights and don't care."

He summed up his argument with the sentence, "We want to keep Egypt as an independent nation."

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP) — The United States Saturday rushed preparation of a note countering Egypt's go-it-alone Suez Canal plan and urging a tighter set of rules for operation of the disputed waterway.

Officials indicated the diplomatic message might be dispatched to Cairo over the weekend, or Monday.

Ranking officials worked overtime on the problem in the face of an almost insurmountable deadline — prospective opening of the canal to heavy traffic in about 10 days. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles grappled with the problem from his Georgetown home.

Dulles conferred with Assistant Secretary of State William M. Rountree, his expert on Middle East problems, in an effort to establish a U.S. position on the Egyptian plan and word a reply to Cairo. Officials said the note will be coordinated with those of Britain, France, Norway and perhaps the Netherlands.

TOLD TO AVOID CANAL

The question bothering Dulles was how Egypt will carry out the points in her plan.

The State Department has advised American shippers to avoid the canal for the time being but has issued no order to that effect.

The Egyptian plan was delivered to the United Nations and governments of six countries, including the United States, earlier this week. The "draft memorandum" said the canal will be "operated and managed by the autonomous Suez Canal Authority" set up by Egypt after she seized the canal last summer.

CAUTIOUS ATTITUDE

It also declared that Egypt would respect the 1888 Constantinople treaty guaranteeing free access to the canal, and provides for arbitration of disputes in the international court of justice.

American officials looked at the plan with reserve but said it might be a basis for further negotiations.

The note to Egypt apparently will state what changes the United States thinks must be made. Informed sources said the United States wants a "tighter, more definite" set of canal rules.

Embassy Sees Hope For Safety

group," he said.

The Pakistan government alerted police and armed forces to be on the lookout for the Iranian bandits, a Foreign Office spokesman in Karachi announced.

The spokesman said it was certain the gang has not yet crossed the frontier into Pakistan.

Earlier today a desert tribesman told of seeing a white-faced foreign woman riding on muleback with the women and children of a nomad bandit band, presumably the one which captured Mrs. Carroll last Sunday—presumably for sale as a slave—after murdering her husband and another American in the desolate reaches of southeastern Iran.

There was talk that she already had been freed, but there was no confirmation from search headquarters at Iranshahr in the desert.

The latest report from the search area continued to speak of the hunt closing in on Mrs. Carroll's kidnapers. The U. S. Embassy was informed that one of the police columns pursuing the bandits was "close to a group of tribal women believed to have a non-Iranian woman with them."

Light planes criss-crossed the sky over the desert today to assist the ground parties and give some assurance to the American woman that help was on the way.

Police came across the witness as they followed a trail of paper and clothing presumably left by Mrs. Carroll on the desolate Tangeorkheh Desert near the Pakistan border.

The bodies of Mrs. Carroll's husband, Kevin, 37, a Point Four official in Iran, and Brewster A. Wilson, 35, of Portland, Ore., a Near East Foundation official, have been brought to Tehran for return to the United States.

The U. S. Embassy said the police found Mrs. Carroll's empty suitcase and then the witness who "claimed to have seen a foreign lady on a mule, traveling along with the women and children of the bandits in the desert toward the southeast Iran-Pakistan border."

"The blonde white-faced foreigner did not have any difficulty and had no signs of injury," the witness said.

He added that the woman he saw was not tied and was "not looking sick."

His story indicated the band was heading toward Pakistan, as police already had suspected. Extra guards have been placed on the border and Pakistani authorities have been asked to keep a lookout.

Iranian authorities believe the gang will try to smuggle the Issaquah, Wash., woman to the slave markets on the Persian Gulf or the Gulf of Oman, where a white woman would fetch a high price.

Dr. M. Oswalt Will Address BSU Session

Dr. Macon Oswalt, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hammond, Friday will address the Baptist Student Union at the organization's spring banquet, Lonnie Penton, BSU director, announced.

The event is scheduled at the Baptist Student Center, College Avenue, on Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Installation ceremonies for officers of the coming year will be in charge of Miss Virginia Currey, assistant state BSU director.

Reservations are currently on sale and may be made by contacting Penton, or the following Northeast State students: Eddie Bobo, Ruth Collins, Marilyn Gilmore, Jon Barker, Tommy Coleman and Sybil Perkins.

The Baptist Center will be transformed into a mass of rainbows and celestial bodies in developing the banquet theme, "Somewhere Over the Rainbow." The speaker's address will underscore this idea.

Dr. Oswalt, who is considered an outstanding youth lecturer, recently completed an evangelistic tour of Jamaica under sponsorship of the Baptist Foreign Mission Board.

He is a graduate of the University of Alabama and holds a master of theology degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Fort Worth, Texas.

Geology Prof Dies At Austin

AUSTIN, March 30 (UP)— Dr. Hal P. Bybee, University of Texas professor of geology, died Saturday at his home. He was 69.

Death came to the popular professor just three days before he was to receive one of hie profession's highest honors — honorary membership in the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

The award had been announced in recognition of the "standard of ethics which he imparted to so many of his former students who are now leaders in the petroleum industry, and for his great effort in building the university permanent endowment fund by developing oil and gas production on university land."

Bybee joined the university faculty in 1914.

Cites Need For More Pipelines To East Coast

— WICHITA FALLS, March 30 (UP)— Railroad Commissioner Ernest O. Thompson said Saturday there is "a compelling defense need" for additional oil pipe lines from Texas to the East Coast.

Thompson, in a speech prepared for delivery before the 27th annual meeting of the North Texas Oil and Gas Association, warned that "come war, tankers would be sunk in great numbers."

The commissioner said now is the time "to get the pipe lines built to the East Coast," and added: "I am given encouragement to believe it will be done."

"The steel is available. The Suez incident has given the need for pipe lines to the East Coast the full publicity that convinces everyone who will listen that the safe pipe line method must be utilized for defense. Come war, there will not be time to build them," he said.

A real feast of music was provided at the Brown Hall Thursday night when the Twin Cities Symphony, Dr. Harry Lemert director, presented LeRoy Anspach, famous pianist as guest artist.

The program was such as one would hear in Carnegie Hall in New York City for Anspach is one of the very great musical artists of the present time.

To say all hearers were delighted fails to express the thrill that this wonderful classic music imparted at the hands of an artist who has few superiors.

The next day someone contacting the Anspachs, asked his little daughter: "Do you think you will ever be able to equal your dad at the piano?" she hung her head and replied: "I don't think I ever can."

Rodney J. Hobbs post V.F.W. in West Monroe, through Kenneth R. He at once wrote a letter addressed to "Tigerettes Young Ladies" in which he stated that the V.F.W. can not help in any great way but that it is enclosing a check for $5 for their cause to show that they are in sympathy with their efforts. This is fine, it shows "Sisterhood" as well as "Brotherhood." Dulles Asks Permanent Police Force For World

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP) —Secretary of State John Foster Dulles Saturday called for an international police force as part of a three-point plan "to save the world from war."

At the same time he vigorously reiterated his opposition to the admission of Red China to the United Nations because it is not entitled "to speak for China." The Red Regime he said, is maintaining itself in power only by "ruthless police state methods."

Dulles' views were the highlights of a 2,000-word preface he wrote to bring his 1950 book, "War or Peace", up-to-date.

The State Department issued the preface as an official press release. It said 100,000 copies of the book at 15 cents "or less" each are to be published for sale overseas in the Japanese, Turkish, Arabic, and English languages.

The department said Dulles will waive royalties on all editions.

The secretary said in his foreword that events of the last seven years call for comment.

"The fact is that war will be an ever-present danger until there are better developed institutions for peace, such as an adequate body of international law, an international police force, and a reduction of national armaments," he said. "Today we live, and I fear for long shall live, under the shadow of war. Only if we are vividly conscious of this fact will we make the exertions needed to prevent war."

He did not elaborate on his ideas for an international police force but some diplomats suggested the timing of the proposal could be significant. They noted that it was made soon after the United Nations had approved dispatch of a UN emergency force to the Middle East.

March Bows Out Like Little Lamb

By UNITED PRESS

March prepared to bow out of the weather picture Saturday and weathermen generally agreed it would be more like a lamb than a lion.

Outside of anticipated development of a low pressure disturbance in the Texas Panhandle, and another rolling across the Rockies, forecasters predicted generally fair weather would portray the bleat of the departing lamb Sunday.

The possible Texas disturbance was expected to spread precipitation over a wide area of the nation's mid-section. The bad weather, however, was not expected to match the blizzard which struck across the same area a week ago.

Rain, sometimes mixed with very light snow, was predicted as far north as the Dakotas, Wisconsin, Illinois and Indiana and westward into Wyoming and Colorado.

In advance of the developing system, a general influx of moisture from the Gulf of Mexico wet the Plains from Central Texas to South Dakota.

Generally fair weather prevailed over the remainder of the nation eastward from the Plains to the Appalachians. Some snow flurries persisted, however, over a few sections of New York and Pennsylvania.

Very widely scattered light showers, occasionally mixed with snow, fell at higher elevations over many sections from the Pacific Northwest to Montana southward over the Rockies to New Mexico.

Heavier shower activity was expected, however, over southern Montana in connection with a disturbance moving over the Rockies.

Low Salaries Problems Of Teachers Cited

Unless salaries are boosted sufficiently, many Louisiana teachers will take their skills into other more highly paid professions.

This was one of the points stressed at a two-day meeting of the Public Affairs Research Council conference on Louisiana government, which wound up Friday in New Orleans. The speaker was Mrs. Ione Hill, of Monroe, president of the Louisiana Teachers' Association. She discussed the "Major Reasons for Higher Teacher Salary Schedules."

"It's true that some people are dedicated teachers; there will always be dedicated teachers—and thank Heaven for that!," she said. "But those dedicated teachers, having wives whom they love and children they wish to educate, will quickly take their teaching skills into other more highly paid professions."

She pointed out that, "A man who can teach chemistry does very well for himself as a chief chemist in a commercial concern."

Mrs. Hill said that "Teachers are not in competition with any other profession. That's unfortunate, but it's true. The only thing teachers are in competition with is the cost of living index."

She continued, "We want government workers, industrial workers, farmers, to make all the money they're entitled to. But, we say, the only way they are entitled to more money is by knowing more things. And somebody has to teach them those things."

A number of outstanding speakers were featured on various panels at the conference.

The bill was passed by a 42-22 roll call vote in the Senate, indicating that its sponsors could not muster the necessary approval of those voting if Eisenhower vetoes it. The President vetoed a similar bill last year.

Knowland said the Senate's action points up the difficulty of trying to make economies in advance of the actual appropriation of funds.

Chachere Seeks Welfare Slashes

Long's strongest supporters in the 1956 session.

With his committee, Louisiana once again is building a new assault on the old problem.

"We are spending millions of dollars on illegitimate children," Chachere said. "The responsibility should be on the fathers and mothers, not the taxpayers."

The current fiscal and moral problem, he said, has been complicated by the fact the Supreme Court in recent years has ruled unconstitutional various efforts which attempted to allow proof of paternity as grounds for criminal non-support action.

In Alexandria Tuesday, former welfare Commissioner A. A. Fredericks told the committee the Supreme Court was "making it difficult to keep legislation which would enable the state to pass the responsibility of caring for illegitimate children to the fathers."

The Public Welfare Department said it has earmarked $20,531,000 for aid to dependent children next fiscal year, beginning July 1.

In a speech about the welfare program Friday before the Public Affairs Research Council conference in New Orleans, Executive Secretary W. A. Breedlove of the Louisiana Police Jury Assn. protested that "a premium is placed on illegitimacy in children."

Chachere said the Welfare Department last year reported 1,967 cases of women already on public relief rolls with two or more illegitimate children who bore additional offspring.

"About 80 per cent of these cases involved Negroes, from the records we've got," he said.

PAR, in a major study made for the Legislature in 1954, said two-thirds the case loads in aid to dependent children were non-white.

And, PAR said, "if public assistance costs are to be reduced, legal authority must be found which will permit the courts to deal with parents of illegitimate children.

"Otherwise, illegitimate children are wholly dependent upon public assistance, and the state is left without recourse against the parents."

of it for the hungry Egyptian people.

"The United States is aiming to starve us," he said, "while the Soviet Union is aiming to help us."

He accused the United States of talking about freedom of navigation but not "about freedom of the refugees" of the Palestine war in the Gaza Strip whom Israel refuses to take in.

EGYPTIANS BITTER

Egyptians were bitter, he said, when they read between the lines of American newspapers that Americans were "happy to see us in trouble."

He added that he receives 30,000 sympathetic letters a month from people in the United States and answers all of them.

The Egyptian President, said Egypt would be willing to take up the overall Mideast problem with the West but "if they want to deal only with Israel rights and not the rights of refugees then we will not accept it."

"No cold war pressure against Egypt would change that," he said.

"They say Nasser is a dictator but I believe in our rights and don't care."

He summed up his argument with the sentence. "We want to keep Egypt as an independent nation."

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP) — The United States Saturday rushed preparation of a note countering Egypt's go-it-alone Suez Canal plan and urging a tighter set of rules for operation of the disputed waterway.

Officials indicated the diplomatic message might be dispatched to Cairo over the weekend, or Monday.

Ranking officials worked overtime on the problem in the face of an almost insurmountable deadline — prospective opening of the canal to heavy traffic in about 10 days. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles grappled with the problem from his Georgetown home.

Dulles conferred with Assistant Secretary of State William M. Rountree, his expert on Middle East problems, in an effort to establish a U.S. position on the Egyptian plan and word a reply to Cairo. Officials said the note will be coordinated with those of Britain, France, Norway and perhaps the Netherlands.

TOLD TO AVOID CANAL

The question bothering Dulles was how Egypt will carry out the points in her plan.

The State Department has advised American shippers to avoid the canal for the time being but has issued no order to that effect.

The Egyptian plan was delivered to the United Nations and governments of six countries, including the United States, earlier this week. The "draft memorandum" said the canal will be "operated and managed by the autonomous Suez Canal Authority" set up by Egypt after she seized the canal last summer.

CAUTIOUS ATTITUDE

It also declared that Egypt would respect the 1888 Constantinople treaty guaranteeing free access to the canal, and provides for arbitration of disputes in the international court of justice.

American officials looked at the plan with reserve but said it might be a basis for further negotiations.

The note to Egypt apparently will state what changes the United States thinks must be made. Informed sources said the United States wants a "tighter, more definite" set of canal rules.

Embassy Sees Hope For Safety

group," he said.

The Pakistan government alerted police and armed forces to be on the lookout for the Iranian bandits, a Foreign Office spokesman in Karachi announced.

The spokesman said it was certain the gang has not yet crossed the frontier into Pakistan.

Earlier today a desert tribesman told of seeing a white-faced foreign woman riding on muleback with the women and children of a nomad bandit band, presumably the one which captured Mrs. Carroll last Sunday—presumably for sale as a slave—after murdering her husband and another American in the desolate reaches of southeastern Iran.

There was talk that she already had been freed, but there was no confirmation from search headquarters at Iranshahr in the desert.

The latest report from the search area continued to speak of the hunt closing in on Mrs. Carroll's kidnapers. The U. S. Embassy was informed that one of five police columns pursuing the bandits was "close to a group of tribal women believed to have a non-Iranian woman with them."

Light planes criss-crossed the sky over the desert today to assist the ground parties and give some assurance to the American woman that help was on the way.

Police came across the witness as they followed a trail of paper and clothing presumably left by Mrs. Carroll on the desolate Tangeorkheh Desert near the Pakistan border.

The bodies of Mrs. Carroll's husband, Kevin, 37, a Point Four official in Iran, and Brewster A. Wilson, 35, of Portland, Ore., a Near East Foundation official, have been brought to Tehran for return to the United States.

The U. S. Embassy said the police found Mrs. Carroll's empty suitcase and then the witness who "claimed to have seen a foreign lady on a mule, traveling along with the women and children of the bandits in the desert toward the southeast Iran-Pakistan border."

"The blonde white-faced foreigner did not have any difficulty and had no signs of injury," the witness said.

He added that the woman he saw was not tied and was "not looking sick."

His story indicated the band was heading toward Pakistan, as police already had suspected. Extra guards have been placed on the border and Pakistani authorities have been asked to keep a lookout.

Iranian authorities believe the gang will try to smuggle the Issaquah, Wash., woman to the slave markets on the Persian Gulf or the Gulf of Oman, where a white woman would fetch a high price.

Dr. M. Oswalt Will Address BSU Session

Dr. Macon Oswalt, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hammond, Friday will address the Baptist Student Union at the organization's spring banquet, Lonnie Penton, BSY director, announced.

The event is scheduled at the Baptist Student Center, College Avenue, on Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Installation ceremonies for officers of the coming year will be in charge of Miss Virginia Currey, assistant state BSU director.

Reservations are currently on sale and may be made by contacting Penton, or the following Northeast State students: Eddie Bobo, Ruth Collins, Marilyn Gilmore, Jon Barker, Tommy Coleman and Sybil Perkins.

The Baptist Center will be transformed into a mass of rainbows and celestial bodies in developing the banquet theme, "Somewhere Over the Rainbow." The speaker's address will underscore this idea.

Dr. Oswalt, who is considered an outstanding youth lecturer, recently completed an evangelistic tour of Jamaica under sponsorship of the Baptist Foreign Mission Board.

He is a graduate of the University of Alabama and holds a master of theology degree from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Fort Worth, Texas.

Geology Prof Dies At Austin

AUSTIN, March 30 (UP)— Dr. Hal P. Bybee, University of Texas professor of geology, died Saturday at his home. He was 69.

Death came to the popular professor just three days before he was to receive one of hie profession's highest honors — honorary membership in the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

The award had been announced in recognition of the "standard of ethics which he imparted to so many of his former students who are now leaders in the petroleum industry, and for his great effort in building the university permanent endowment fund by developing oil and gas production on university land."

Bybee joined the university faculty in 1914.

YOUNG REPUBLICAN VS. 17 DEMOCRATS

Tuesday's Senate Race In Texas To Decide Party Control For Senate

DALLAS, March 30 (AP)—A vigorous young Republican takes on field of 17 Democrats Tuesday and on the outcome rests the balance of political power in the U. S. Senate.

The battle is for the Senate seat vacated by Price Daniel when he became Texas governor last January.

It's a winner-take-all election. There will be no runoff.

Should the Republican, Thad Hucheson, be elected, the GOP could reorganize the Senate, taking over the committee chairmanships.

The balance now is 49-47 in favor of the Democrats. Election of the 41-year-old Houston attorney would create a 48-48 deadlock. Vice President Nixon would be expected to break the tie by voting with the Republicans.

Sen. Knowland (R-Calif) has said he will move to reorganize the upper House anytime the GOP has the strength to take control.

Actually, there are two Republicans running, but only Hutcheson has staged a statewide campaign. The other is Herbert J. Antoine Sr., real estate dealer.

The ballots will carry 20 Democrats names. Three withdrew after ballots were printed.

At least half a dozen of the Democrats possess proven vote attracting power.

But in Texas' mixed-up politics, it is not a simple case of Democrats killing each other off and allowing Hutcheson to win.

For instance, Hutcheson is expected to receive the votes of most Republicans estimated at 14 per cent of the electorate, plus a good many conservative votes. President Eisenhower did this when he swept the normally Democratic state in his two campaigns.

On the other hand, Hutcheson's conservative drawing power probably will be shortcircuited by such conservatives of varying political shades as U. S. Rep. Martin Dies and State Sen. Searcy Bracewell.

James P. Hart, former Texas Supreme Court justice and ex-chancellor of the University of Texas, is expected to draw some conservative votes, as well as others from the opposite side of the political fence.

Ralph Yarborough, Austin attorney and three times a candidate for governor without making the grade, still bears the label in many voters' minds as the strong Democratic party loyalist. He pitched his campaigns for governor on that issue but it has not been a factor in this special Senate election campaign.

Yarborough also has been considered the Liberal candidate, although his liberalism is of a relatively moderate variety.

Expected to cut into Yarborborough's vote is State Agriculture Commissioner John C. White. The commissioner, like Yarborough, refused to bolt to the GOP as did many Democratic leaders in the Eisenhower campaigns.

Absentee voting has been light, and local political experts predict the voter turnout at anywhere from 20 to 75 per cent of potential, depending on whether interesting local issues also are on the ballots. The Texas Election Bureau, unofficial vote tabulating agency, estimates a turnout of 800,000-900,000, compared to 1,827,922 in the general election last fall.

Expected to give Hutcheson some advantage is the relatively heavy poll tax and exemption registration in the vote-heavy larger cities—which in recent years have given the GOP its greatest strength.

President Eisenhower has endorsed Hutcheson. There have been no other candidates endorsed by major national figures. Lyndon Johnson, Senate majority leader and a power in Texas Democratic circles, specifically refused to take a hand in the campaigns.

Texas newspapers which have announced support of any candidate almost universally have endorsed Rep. Dies, congressman at large, who became nationally known as head of the Dies Un-American Activities Committee before World War II. One exception is the Houston Chronicle, which endorsed State Sen. Bracewell, and the Houston Post, which endorsed both Bracewell and Hutcheson.

Polls open and close at 7. By Texas law, no results may be announced by election officials until 7 p.m.

The junior senator from Texas now is William Blakley, Dallas multimillionaire attorney and businessman, a Democrat. He was appointed by Allan Shivers just before Shiver's term as governor ended. Blakley is not a candidate in Tuesday's election.

Hart is 52, Bracewell 38, Yarborough 53, Dies 56, White 32 and Antoine 65.

The other candidates are Walter Scott McNutt, 59, educator; Hugh Wilson, 43, refinery worker; the Rev. M. T. Banks, 62, Negro evangelist; Ralph W. Hammonds, 50, insurance man; Elmer Adams, 65, insurance man; J. Perrin Willis, 67, agricultural economist; C. O. Forester Jr., 43, horticulturist; Clyde R. Orms, 53, businessman; Frank G. Cortez, 50, mortician; and John C. Burns Sr., 64 clerk.

Expect U. S. To Offer $75 Million In Aid To Poles

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP)—The United States is expected to offer Poland $75 million worth of economic aid soon, government officials disclosed Saturday.

This would be only a fraction of the $300 million the Red regime has been seeking in negotiations which began here Feb. 26. Some U. S. authorities doubt the Poles will accept so much less while risking Moscow's wrath.

The negotiations have been at standstill for the past two weeks while the United States prepared its offer. Administration sources said a program of about $75 million is now up for final study by President Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

An announcement of the offer may come next week.

Almost any offer is sure to run into some congressional opposition. Senate GOP Leader William F. Knowland (Calif.) has repeatedly argued against assistance for the Poles.

However, Rep. Thomas S. Gordon (D-Ill.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs committee, and several Democratic senators have declared themselves in favor of aid for the new Polish regime of Wladyslaw Gomulka.

Gomulka's government, which is seeking to loosen Moscow's trip on Poland, wants $200 million worth of surplus farm products at cut-rate prices. The list includes cotton, wheat, corn, barley, rye fats and oils.

In addition, Poland wants U.S. credit to finance purchase of $100 million in coal-mining and farm machinery.

Salk Vaccine Supply Perilously Low, U. S. Surgeon General Says

By LOUIS CASSELS

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP)—Surgeon General LeRoy E. Burney reported Saturday the nation's supply of Salk polio vaccine dropped to a perilous low of 3.2 million shots this week.

At the same time he held out hope that the shortage will be eased soon by increased shipments from manufacturers who expect to turn out 35 million to 40 million more shots between now and July 1 when polio usually reaches epidemic proportions.

While the supply on hand was falling to 3.2 million shots this week, 4 million additional shots were being released into the supply pipeline.

Dr. Burney disclosed the figures at an all-day conference on the vaccine situation attended by representatives of the American Medical Association, National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, and other polio-fighting organizations.

UP-AND-DOWN

He sought their recommendations on balancing out demand for Salk shots which has followed a roller coaster pattern in the past year. Supplies fell off sharply in the fall and winter and rose to an extreme peak during the spring and summer.

Burney also asked the group for advice on both short-range measures to insure fair distribution of available supplies during the current shortage, and a long-range program to "sustain future demand and assure prompt and efficient use of vaccine."

Conference sentiment seemed against a return to the voluntary allocation system in effect last year. That plan gave priority to youths under 20 and pregnant women—the groups most susceptible to polio.

The National Foundation announced in advance of the conference that it does not believe allocations are necessary.

LATEST FIGURES

While Dr. Burney did not press the rationing idea, he gave the meeting latest figures showing that large numbers of children have yet to receive the full protection of three shots. His figures showed:

Of 19.7 million children under five, 15.1 million have received one or more shots.

Of 15.9 million in the 5-to-9 age group where the crippling disease hits hardest, 14.3 million have had at least one injection.

Of the 13.4 million in the 10-to-14 groups, 11.1 million have had at least one shot.

In the high school age group, 15-to-19, the production level drops only 3.3 million have even had sharply. Of 12.7 million youths, one shot.

Of the entire 108 million Americans under 40, 56 million have received one or more shots.

Union Officers Urge Members To Await Trial

SEATTLE, March 30 (UP) —Officers of Local 174 of the teamsters union Saturday urged a meeting of some 1,000 members to reserve judgement of President Dave Beck and other top officials until they have "had their day in court."

A spokesman for 174, the home local of Beck and teamster Vice President Frank Brewster, said a few members asked questions and made "some caustic remarks" about Beck and Brewster, who also is head of the western conference of teamsters.

However, the spokesman said the members generally consented to the idea of withholding judgement of their top leaders. No formal motion was made along that line.

George Cavano, secretary-treasurer of the local, emphasized the meeting was called to discuss contracts coming up for negotiation and to explain steps taken for an audit of the local's books.

Cavano, who has been indicted under the name of Nugent La-Loma for contempt of Congress, has scheduled other meetings for Sunday for the rest of the local's 000 members.

Rural Roads Study Slated In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss., March [illegible] — An Arkansas [illegible] highway study committee will make a two-day study of Mississippi's developing rural roads system beginning Monday.

The inspection will begin with conferences in the Mississippi Highway Commission office here, state aid engineer Ben T. Collier said today. Accompanied by a Mississippi legislative group, the visitors then will make on-the-spot inspections of what Mississippi believes is one of the nation's most successful rural road programs.

In addition, conferences have been arranged with both the Yazoo and Hinds county boards of supervisors to give the visitors a view of the co-operative program between county and state agencies.

Field visits to representative projects both complete and under construction will be made.

A Mississippi legislative highway study committee in vacation, headed by Rep. Blaine Eaton of Smith County, will also be on hand for the inspections. Other members of the group are Sen. Hugh Boren of Tupelo, Rep. Brown Williams of Neshoba County, Sen. R. E. L. Gentry of Mount Olive, Sen. W. F. Martin of Bentonia, Rep. Alton Phillips of Noxubee County and Rep. Dennis Baker of Panola County.

The Arkansas group is making the tour under an act sponsored by the Arkansas Farm Bureau Federation and enacted by the Legislature a few days ago.

Three Savings, Loan Groups To Close Saturdays

Beginning next Saturday, April 6, all three savings and loan associations in the Twin Cities will close on Saturdays.

This policy, which was announced jointly by First Federal Savings and Loan Association, Monroe Builders and Loan Association and People's Homestead and Savings Association, is in line with custom observed in all larger cities throughout the State.

In announcing Saturday's closing, it was also stated that these associations would greatly reduce the number of holidays observed during the year. Business will be transacted as usual on minor holidays while closings will be observed only on New Year's Day, Independence Day — July 4th, Labor Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

W.M. Parking Ban Case Will Be Heard Here

A case against the City of West Monroe on the Cypress Street parking ban will come to court again here Monday in the Second Court of Appeals.

A Fourth District ruling last year upheld the city's ban, but a group of West Monroe merchants led by Eugene B. Scott appealed to the higher court.

Passed March 7, 1955, the West Monroe ordinance banned parking from Cypress Street to become effective May 1, 1955. The suit was filed two days prior to the effective date of the ban.

MERCHANTS' VIEW

The merchants allege that they have been deprived of their property rights by not being able to use the street for parking for business purposes.

They also claim that the city did not have the authority to pass the ordinance.

West Monroe City Attorney John McCormick will charge that the city passed the ordinance upon recommendation of the State Department of Highways.

It has been pointed out that the traffic count on Cypress in 1950 was 18,000 vehicles daily and 21,000 vehicles per day in 1955.

The City of Monroe recently put into effect a similar ban on Louisville Avenue.

Filing suit with Scott were E. L. Davidson, Joe Ford, J. F. Block, Bob Demitry, O. L. Hortman, Carey Holmes and DeWitt Hogan.

When Arizona became a state in 1912, it had only 200,000 population.

$13 Million In School Projects Are Approved

JACKSON, Miss., March 30 (AP) — The State Educational Finance Commission has authorized more than 13 million dollars worth of school construction projects during the 14 months since funds became available.

Director of Finance Bill Neal said today the commission approved $13,074,902.24 worth of school construction projects between Jan. 31, 1956 and March 31, 1957.

He estimated 80 per cent of the projects approved under the education equalization program has been for Negro schools and 20 per cent for white schools.

He said approvals were for projects in 29 school districts in 23 counties. "By the time we complete our job of approving school re-organizing plans of all 82 counties," Neal said, "there will be about 154 school districts in Mississippi."

The 154 compares with more than 2,000 in 1953—the year the program was enacted—and more than 5,000 in 1947, he said.

The commission is authorized to issue a maximum of 60 million dollars in bonds at any one time for school construction. The bonds would be retired with $555,000 a month in sales taxes earmarked for that purpose.

So far, Neal said, no bonds have been issued because the commission has had no trouble providing the money through the monthly sales tax receipts.

This $555,000 a month, he said, provides school buildings and equipment geared to meet a certain minimum standard. However, counties or municipalities may supplement state funds with local funds to provide higher standards in their schools.

Lexington, a historic name, is also the name of communities in Kentucky, Massacusetts, Missouri, North Carolina and West Virginia. The Massachusetts Lexington is where the first battle of the revolution took place on April 19, 1775.

Surtax Fight Gains Support In Mississippi

JACKSON, Miss., March 30 (AP) —Legislative sentiment for removal of the 14 per cent surtax, described as a temporary and emergency measure when it was imposed, is mounting in Mississippi.

When the 1958 session is convened, the surtax, which produces an estimated seven million dollars each biennium, probably will be wiped off the books.

Former Gov. Hugh White, who fathered the surtax program when the state treasury was running low and demands for equalized schools were eating up revenue, is among those favoring its repeal.

White, a longtime advocate of a tax structure favoring the state's industrialization, pointed out in a speech this week the surtax was "an emergency measure only."

Sen. Earl Evans Jr., Canton, president pro tempore of the state Senate and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee when the surtax was enacted, also favors letting it die a natural death. The surtax became effective in April 1955.

"I'm not in favor of any more tax increases," Evans said, "and we could all engage in a healthy trend to show industry we are traveling in the right direction by reducing taxes as much as possible."

The State Budget Commission, with the advice of statistician Joe B. Keith, has estimated the state will enjoy a seven million dollar surplus at the close of the present biennium June 30, 1958.

Rep. Hilton Waits of Leland, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and chairman of the Legislative Tax Study Committee, which has been hearing evidence on the surtax, doesn't think the surtax will be re-enacted in 1958.

Hinds County Sen. Hayden Campbell says, "the surtax has served its purpose and it ought to be removed."

Sen. Bill Burgin of Columbus, present chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is a bit more cautious. He said he would favor its removal if revenues hold up, if the surplus in the treasury does materialize, and if the budget can be balanced without the surtax.

Reds Moving To Modest Chicago Flat

By IRA LURVEY

CHICAGO, March 30 (UP)—The Communist party, whose stated aim is to achieve a "workers' paradise," is moving to a carpetless, partitioned room on the eighth floor of a dimly lit, old-fashioned office building.

The building directory lists the group only as "Worker, The." The word "Communist" is nowhere to be found.

"I don't think there will be enough room here to house all the national business," Illinois party chief Claude Lightfoot said. "We'll probably have to find other space."

At the moment, however, no additional space has been contracted for.

"We haven't even started to look," Lightfoot, who disapproves of the move, said.

Officially, the Illinois party shares space with the state's edition of the Daily Worker. Both groups frequently lend office facilities to fly by night left-wing organizations formed for one specific cause or another.

"We have had no trouble with our landlord in this building," Lightfoot said. "But we have had difficulty in other places."

Communist officials in New York said they were moving to Chicago, where the party originally was founded, because the city is the "industrial heart" of the nation.

The Gazette said the increase will be the first in 6½ years. The Democrat said its boost will be the first in 8½ years.

The price of single copies of both newspapers remain unchanged.

FOURFOLD INCREASE

Russia Multiplies Trade With India

NEW DELHI, March 30 (AP) — Russia's drive to cash in on India's friendly foreign policy is beginning to have some success. Trade between the two countries increased fourfold in 1956.

During the first 10 months of last year Indian imports from Russia totaled 120,700,000 rupees ($25,347,000) and exports to Russia were valued at 70,100,000 rupees ($14,721,000).

This exchange of 190,800,000 rupees ($40,068,000) worth of goods compared with a total of 50,520,000 rupees ($10,609,200) during 1955.

Steel was the major item India imported from Russia during the 10-month period last year. This amounted to 90,900,000 rupees ($19,089,000). Wheat came next with value of 10,500,000 rupees ($2,25,000), then paper and stationery, 58,000 rupees, and machinery and mill work, 35,000 rupees. Most of the latter items were for the Bhilai steel mill Russia has loaned India money to build.

Indian exports to Russia consisted mostly of tea, raw wool, hides and skins, jute goods, pepper and shellac.

The Soviet Union began a campaign to build up Indian trade in 1955 when the Russians had a big exhibit at the Indian industrial fair here. Russia and satellites overshadowed the Western nations in that fair.

But even with the fourfold increase in Indo-Russian trade, the Soviet Union ranks far down the list of traders with India. Only about 2 per cent of India's foreign trade was with Russia during the 10-month period last year, Indian government figures showed.

Britain, United States, West Germany, Japan, Italy and Belgium were all well ahead of the Soviet Union as a source of Indian imports. Britain and the United States were also far out in front as India's best customers.

Former Gov. Hugh White, who fathered the surtax program when the state treasury was running low and demands for equalized schools were eating up revenue, is among those favoring its repeal.

White, a longtime advocate of a tax structure favoring the state's industrialization, pointed out in a speech this week the surtax was "an emergency measure only."

Sen. Earl Evans Jr., Canton, president pro tempore of the state Senate and chairman of the Senate Finance Committee when the surtax was enacted, also favors letting it die a natural death. The surtax became effective in April, 1955.

"I'm not in favor of any more tax increases," Evans said, "and we could all engage in a healthy trend to show industry we are traveling in the right direction by reducing taxes as much as possible."

The State Budget Commission, with the advice of statistician Joe B. Keith, has estimated the state will enjoy a seven million dollar surplus at the close of the present biennium June 30, 1958.

Rep. Hilton Waits of Leland, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and chairman of the Legislative Tax Study Committee, which has been hearing evidence on the surtax, doesn't think the surtax will be re-enacted in 1958.

Hinds County Sen. Hayden Campbell says, "the surtax has served its purpose and it ought to be removed."

Sen. Bill Burgin of Columbus, present chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is a bit more cautious. He said he would favor its removal if revenues hold up, if the surplus in the treasury does materialize, and if the budget can be balanced without the surtax.

Reds Moving To Modest Chicago Flat

By IRA LURVEY

CHICAGO, March 30 (UP)—The Communist party, whose stated aim is to achieve a "workers' paradise," is moving to a carpetless, partitioned room on the eighth floor of a dimly lit, old-fashioned office building.

The building directory lists the group only as "Worker, The." The word "Communist" is nowhere to be found.

"I don't think there will be enough room here to house all the national business," Illinois party chief Claude Lightfoot said. "We'll probably have to find other space."

At the moment, however, no additional space has been contracted for.

"We haven't even started to look," Lightfoot, who disapproves of the move, said.

Officially, the Illinois party shares space with the state's edition of the Daily Worker. Both groups frequently lend office facilities to fly by night left-wing organizations formed for one specific cause or another.

"We have had no trouble with our landlord in this building," Lightfoot said. "But we have had difficulty in other places."

Communist officials in New York said they were moving to Chicago, where the party originally was founded, because the city is the "industrial heart" of the nation.

FOURFOLD INCREASE

Russia Multiplies Trade With India

NEW DELHI, March 30 (AP) — Russia's drive to cash in on India's friendly foreign policy is beginning to have some success. Trade between the two countries increased fourfold in 1956.

During the first 10 months of last year Indian imports from Russia totaled 120,700,000 rupees ($25,347,000) and exports to Russia were valued at 70,100,000 rupees ($14,721,000).

This exchange of 190,800,000 rupees ($40,068,000) worth of goods compared with a total of 50,520,000 rupees ($10,609,200) during 1955.

Steel was the major item India imported from Russia during the 10-month period last year. This amounted to 90,900,000 rupees ($19,089,000). Wheat came next with value of 10,500,000 rupees ($2,25,000), then paper and stationery, 58,000 rupees, and machinery and mill work, 35,000 rupees. Most of the latter items were for the Bhilai steel mill Russia has loaned India money to build.

Indian exports to Russia consisted mostly of tea, raw wool, hides and skins, jute goods, pepper and shellac.

The Soviet Union began a campaign to build up Indian trade in 1955 when the Russians had a big exhibit at the Indian industrial fair here. Russia and satellites overshadowed the Western nations in that fair.

But even with the fourfold increase in Indo-Russian trade, the Soviet Union ranks far down the list of traders with India. Only about 2 per cent of India's foreign trade was with Russia during the 10-month period last year, Indian government figures showed.

Britain, United States, West Germany, Japan, Italy and Belgium were all well ahead of the Soviet Union as a source of Indian imports. Britain and the United States were also far out in front as India's best customers.

THEODORE NADLER'S ASTOUNDING MIND

Quiz Contestant Remembers Everything He Sees In Books

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK, March 30 (AP) — One of the most fascinating minds which the current television quiz program fad has brought to light, is that of Theodore Nadler of St. Louis, who thus far won $1Q2,000 on The $64,000 Challenge (CBS-TV).

On Sunday he will return to the program to compete against Mrs. Lowell Thomas Jr. on the subject of geography for $16,000 more. For nine weeks Nadler has been competing against experts in a great variety of fields of knowledge. Who is he?

Well, he's a small, dark-haired, tense man of 47, with a wife and three children, who until recently was working as a civilian for the Army at the St. Louis Area Support Center for take-home pay of $67 a week. Although he was highly esteemed as a clerical employe, his job rating (he says) was that of a laborer.

Although he has only a grammar school education, he has surpassed and confounded an amazing array of experts in such diverse fields as history, baseball, music and geography. One obviou.. question is why a man with so retentive and agile a mind has been willing to remain in such a poorly paid job.

"You don't understand what it is to be very poor," Nadler said. "My mother was an invalid and my father could only work part time. I grew up partly in an orphanage. My brothers and sisters and I all had to go to work early. I never even thought of going to high school. My parents were good people, but there was no one to guide me. They didn't think of things like education, such as are thought of in even an average American family. Nobody ever evaluated anything."

Nadler read everything he could find. He discovered, without surprise, that he remembered what he read. It did not seem unusual to him; he presumed that everyone remembered. He is still somewhat mystified that they don't.

After questioning Nadler almost to the point of our mutual exhaustion, I believe he has one of the most extraordinary minds I've ever met. He has almost total recall and an amazingly free association of ideas.

This is a quite different type of mentality from one that recalls simply the words of a printed page. It is typical of many of the world's best minds. It is similar, for example, to the way that the late Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes once described the working of his phenomenal memory.

What is Theodore Nadler going to do with the great gift of his mind? Apparently not much. He won't take another regular job this year. He'd like a better job in the field of statistics, but he hasn't been offered one in St. Louis — his native city which he refuses to leave. He's bought a new home and his family is living better than it ever has.

About two thirds of his winnings will go in taxes — a subject that troubles him g r e a t l y. The remainder he plans to put in a savings account and draw interest. He replied that that would only result in more income which the government would tax.

Has he any theories as to why his abilities weren't better recognized as a civil service employe?

"I was known as capable and dependable," he said, "but that doesn't necessarily help you get ahead. To get ahead you have to play politics and I don't know how to do it."

A modest man with simple tastes, all the public attention troubles him. "I wouldn't like to live under this tension all the time," he said. "I'm grateful to everybody, but when it's all over I hope they all forget about it."

WIFE WOUNDED

Texan Charged In Slaying De Soto Parish Deputy

DEADWOOD, Tex., March 30 (UP)—Raymond Baker, a 32-year-old Texas man who had settled differences with his wife after a short separation, was charged Saturday with murdering a Louisiana deputy sheriff and seriously wounded Mrs. Baker.

Sheriff Johnny Spradley of Panola said Baker cut down Deputy Sheriff Walter O. Wheeles, 40, a deputy sheriff from DeSota Parish Friday night after the deputy had called at the Bakers' home.

Baker also shot his wife with a 12-gauge shotgun. She was hit in the chest and was in serious condition in a hospital at Carthage but was expected to survive.

Spradley said Baker brought his wounded wife to the hospital Friday night and then called at the sheriff's office to give himself up. Baker was charged with trying to kill her, too.

According to Spradley, Baker and his wife separated about two weeks ago, but reconciled their differences and she returned home. He indicated that the separation was reponsible but declined to go into details.

The sheriff said Baker shot his wife first and then shot Wheeles who was 10 feet away.

The Louisiana deputy left a wife and six children in Louisiana when he crossed the line to visit the Bakers.

Ike Inspects Farm Acreage At Gettysburg

GETTYSBURG, Pa., March 30 (UP)— President Eisenhower inspected his farm acreage and livestock Saturday in brisk, windy weather which kept him off the golf course.

He had planned to play golf at the nearby Gettysburg Country Club if the temperature hit 65. But the spring sun lost out to a stiff, cold wind from the north.

The President was joined for a tour of his estate Saturday morning by Gettysburg neighbors George E. Allen and Gen. Arthur S. Nevins (USA Ret.), who with their wives, spent a quiet evening at the estate Friday night.

They first stopped at the President's property across the road from his main farm to chat with overseer Bob Hartley and look at cattle and other livestock.

Then the trio drove around to another piece of presidential property managed by farmer Ivan Feister. They saw more cattle and horses as well as a new shed now being built.

The President, Nevins and Allen then drove down the highway to Allen's farm and looked at his livestock. Then they returned to the President's farm for an afternoon and evening of relaxation.

KING COLE

Artillery Unit Wiped Out In 'War'

FT. POLK, La., March 30—UP—An artillery battery was annihilated by a simulated paper atomic blast today as the Army's giant war maneuver, Exersice King Cole, prepared to move into its second phase of operations in western Louisiana.

A second U. S. "friendly" unit suffered 50 per cent casualties from the simulated blast as units of the 18th airborne corps moved into assembly positions along Red river to capture bridgeheads.

King Cole headquarters officers at Ft. Polk said aggressor forces were silent during the closing hours of phase one of the field training exercise in "pentomic" warfare now being staged in a 13,000 square mile maneuver territory in western Louisiana and eastern Texas.

Army officials directing the 25,000 troops, who are participating in the Army's largest war games this year, said a unit is considered out of action for six hours when it is hit by the enemy. Headquarters said this is the normal time it would take to replace a unit actually destroyed.

Guerrillas and aggressor forces set a U. S. unit division headquarter kitchen on fire to cut telephone lines shortly before phase one of the operations ended at midnight Friday.

The airborne, infantry, and armored units taking part in maneuvers took a one-day break before entering the second of the five phases of the 21-day Exercise King Cole tomorrow.

18th Airborne Corps Poised To Begin Exercise

FT. POLK, La., March 30 (AP)—Eighteenth Airborne Corps units today poised in positions along the Red River to await the beginning of the second phase of Exercise King Cole.

The second phase begins Sunday after a one-day break.

The corps moved from a northern concentration area under light ground opposition, while elements of a paper unit, the U. S. 23rd Corps, held a position north of the river.

King Cole is the Army's latest field maneuvers.

Officers at King Cole headquarters said aggressor forces remained relatively silent during the final hours of the exercise's opening phase last night. That phase ended at midnight.

Aggressor artillery hit throughout U. S. held territory in light and spasmodic shelling.

As U. S. forces moved forward, an aggressor's simulated atomic blast destroyed one artillery battery and caused 50 per cent casualties in another.

Under rules of the war games, a unit is out of action when it is "knocked out."

Officers said the six-hour interval is a compromise of normal time it would take to replace a unit actually destroyed. They said leaving troops out of action longer would unnecessarily cause them to lose valuable training and experience.

Texas Dollar Sales Decline

AUSTIN, March 30 (UP)—Dollar sales during February fell off from the brisk pace set in January, but still held slightly better than the same period last year in Texas, the Bureau of Business Research reported Saturday.

Nondurable goods, such as food and clothing, showed the greatest slackening. Sales of nondurable goods during February declined 7 per cent from January levels and 1 per cent from February of last year.

Sales of durable goods, such as automobiles, refrigerators and building materials, declined 2 per cent from January figures and showed no change from February, 1956.

Live Polio Virus Vaccine May Be Weapon On Cancer

CINCINNATI, March 30 (UP)—The "live" virus polio vaccine developed by Dr. Albert Sabin, University of Cincinnati scientist, may one day prove a potent weapon in the battle against cancer.

The live polio virus is one of several viruses which have proven destructive to cancer cells in experimental animals.

Dr. Sabin told the Cincinnati Post Saturday that several studies were being carried on to determine the reaction of various viruses on cancer cells. He pointed out the experiments still were in preliminary stages.

But, said Sabin, there was nothing so far to indicate the polio virus would destroy cancer cells in humans.

Scientists at Johns Hopkins University and the University of Texas reported earlier this month that live polio viruses apparently were capable of destroying cancer cells.

However, Dr. Sabin, who has predicted lifetime immunity may be possible through his oral vaccine, said he would coocentrate on polio.

Rules Given In Morehouse Beauty Show

BASTROP, March 30, (Special)—Entrance in a beauty contest does not merely include submission of the contestants' names. The official rules and regulations for each pretty entrant in the Miss Morehouse Pageant, sponsored by the Mer Rouge Jaycees hae been released.

The winner will compete for the Miss Louisiana title at Lake Providence in June, and the girl who secures highest state honors will have the opportunity to try for the crown of Miss America at Atlantic City in September.

A basic requirement is that each contestant has been a resident of the parish for the last six months. Each lass must possess poise, personality, intelligence, charm and beauty of face and figure, and be of good character.

Not limiting the requirements to charm and personality, the judges will also require "three-minutes of talent," and there is almost unlimited opportunity to display this, since the talent may be singing, dancing, playing a musical instrument, dramatic reading, art display, dress designing, or a talk on th career which the contestant desires to follow.

The girls who enter will agree that if they win the Miss Morehouse title, they will not become involved in any commercial or advertising agreements, or sign a management contract with any individual or corporation, unless they have permission of the Miss America Pageant.

Since the entire contest organization is on the "Miss" basis, each entrant must be single, and never have been married, divorced, or have had a marriage annulled.

Final provisions of the rules state that each entrant must be a high school graduate by September of 1957, and must be no less than 18 years old, nor more than 23, by September 1.

There're the rules — showing that it's not an easy thing to win the Miss Morehouse pageant.

Rationing Of Polio Vaccine Is Ruled Out

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP)—The U.S. Public Health Service and other polio - fighters agreed Saturday that a government allocation system is not needed to cope with the current shortage of Salk vaccine.

A strategy conference called by Surgeon General Leroy E. Burney also agreed to embark on a "year-round" drive to promote "all-out use" of the vaccine as soon as it is manufactured.

The group decided the goal of the drive should be full protective vaccination for all persons up to age 40. But first call on the vaccine should go to pregnant women and persons under 20, the groups most susceptible to the crippling disease.

This definitely ruled out talk of vaccine rationing.

The day - long conference a concluded that "special attention" should be given to the earliest possible vaccination of children under five and to children of low income families.

Like wooden ships of sailing days with their carved figureheads, some modern steel ships now carry bronze figureheads.

SECOND EDITION

NE Beauty Pageant Scheduled April 11

Second edition of the Miss Northeast beauty pageant is set for April 11 at 8:15 p.m. in Brown Auditorium on the Northeast State campus.

The pageant, which last spring was initiated by the college Student Council, is scheduled to become an annual event, Bobby Joe Oden, student body president announced.

Oden, who directed the first Miss Northeast contest, has been selected by the Student Council to be in charge of the April affair. He will be assisted by Miss Sarah Batton, of Monroe, who was one of the first coeds to hold the Miss Northeast title.

Reception of last year's festival of beauty and talent was the deciding factor in Student Council plans to enlarge the scope of the forthcoming production.

Twelve contestants will vie for top honors in the pageant. The winner will be eligible to represent the college at the Miss Louisiana pageant at Lake Providence. Last year's title was won by Miss Barbara West, a freshman from Grayson.

Competing in the current show will be the following coeds: Miss Betsy Benton, home economics freshman from Monroe; Miss Kathie Jan Fleischmann, sophomore speech major from Start; Miss Glenda Bennett, freshman health and physical education major from Winnsboro; Miss Gwen Henry, junior business education major from Columbia; Miss Peggy Louise Hines, freshman secretarial science student from Monroe.

Miss Linda Smith, business education major, Monroe; Miss Ann Nichols, health and physical education freshman, Monroe; Miss Doris Kitchens, music education major, Vicksburg; Miss Jeanne Renfrow, art student from Monroe; freshman, Monroe; Miss Doris Kitchens, music education major, Vicksburg; Miss Jeanine Renfrow, art student from Monroe; Miss Carol Ann Goodman, art education freshman from Tallulah; Miss Faye Hopkins, freshman student in business education, Jonesboro; Miss Gerry Kenny, medical technology sophomore from Monroe.

All entrants have been active in high school and college affairs and several have captured places in such contests as Miss Monroe-West Monroe, Miss Franklin Parish, Miss Bienville Parish, FFA State Sweetheart, Cotton Festival, and Miss Northeast.

Judging at the April festival will be done by local civic leaders and winners of state beauty pageants, Oden announced.

THEODORE NADLER'S ASTOUNDING MIND

Quiz Contestant Remembers Everything He Sees In Books

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK, March 30 (AP) — One of the most fascinating minds which the current television quiz program fad has brought to light is that of Theodore Nadler of St. Louis, who thus far won $1Q2,000 on The $64,000 Challenge (CBS-TV).

On Sunday he will return to the program to compete against Mrs. Lowell Thomas Jr. on the subject of geography for $16,000 more. For nine weeks Nadler has been competing against experts in a great variety of fields of knowledge. Who is he?

Well, he's a small, dark-haired, tense man of 47, with a wife and three children, who until recently was working as a civilian for the Army at the St. Louis Area Support Center for take-home pay of $67 a week. Although he was highly esteemed as a clerical employe, his job rating (he says) was that of a laborer.

Although he has only a grammar school education, he has surpassed and confounded an amazing array of experts in such diverse fields as history, baseball, music and geography. One obvious question is why a man with so retentive and agile a mind has been willing to remain in such a poorly paid job.

"You don't understand what it is to be very poor," Nadler said. "My mother was an invalid and my father could only work part time. I grew up partly in an orphanage. My brothers and sisters and I all had to go to work early. I never even thought of going to high school. My parents were good people, but there was no one to guide me. They didn't think of things like education, such as are thought of in even an average American family. Nobody ever evaluated anything."

Nadler read everything he could find. He discovered, without surprise, that he remembered what he read. It did not seem unusual to him; he presumed that everyone remembered. He is still somewhat mystified that they don't.

After questioning Nadler almost to the point of our mutual exhaustion, I believe he has one of the most extraordinary minds I've ever met. He has almost total recall and an amazingly free association of ideas.

This is a quite different type of mentality from one that recalls simply the words of a printed page. It is typical of many of the world's best minds. It is similar, for example, to the way that the late Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes once described the working of his phenomenal memory.

What is Theodore Nadler going to do with the great gift of his mind? Apparently not much. He won't take another regular job this year. He'd like a better job in the field of statistics, but he hasn't been offered one in St. Louis — his native city which he refuses to leave. He's bought a new home and his family is living better than it ever has.

About two thirds of his winnings will go in taxes — a subject that troubles him g r e a t l y. The remainder he plans to put in a savings account and draw interest. He replied that that would only result in more income which the government would tax.

Has he any theories as to why his abilities weren't better recognized as a civil service employe?

"I was known as capable and dependable," he said, "but that doesn't necessarily help you get ahead. To get ahead you have to play politics and I don't know how to do it."

A modest man with simple tastes, all the public attention troubles him. "I wouldn't like to live under this tension all the time," he said. "I'm grateful to everybody, but when it's all over I hope they all forget about it."

WIFE WOUNDED

Texan Charged In Slaying De Soto Parish Deputy

DEADWOOD, Tex., March 30 (UP)—Raymond Baker, a 32-year-old Texas man who had settled differences with his wife after a short separation, was charged Saturday with murdering a Louisiana deputy sheriff and seriously wounded Mrs. Baker.

Sheriff Johnny Spradley of Panola said Baker cut lown Deputy Sheriff Walter O. Wheeles, 40, a deputy sheriff from DeSota Parish Friday night after the deputy had called at the Bakers' home.

Baker also shot his wife with a 12-gauge shotgun. She was hit in the chest and was in serious condition in a hospital at Carthage but was expected to survive.

Spradley said Baker brought his wounded wife to the hospital Friday night and then called at the sheriff's office to give himself up. Baker was charged with trying to kill her, too.

According to Spradley, Baker and his wife separated about two weeks ago, but reconciled their differences and she returned home. He indicated that the separation was reponsible but declined to go into details.

The sheriff said Baker shot his wife first and then shot Wheeles who was 10 feet away.

The Louisiana deputy left a wife and six children in Louisiana when he crossed the line to visit the Bakers.

Ike Inspects Farm Acreage At Gettysburg

GETTYSBURG, Pa., March 30 (UP)— President Eisenhower inspected his farm acreage and livestock Saturday in brisk, windy weather which kept him off the golf course.

He had planned to play golf at the nearby Gettysburg Country Club if the temperature hit 65. But the spring sun lost out to a stiff, cold wind from the north

The President was joined for a tour of his estate Saturday morning by Gettysburg neighbors George E. Allen and Gen. Arthur S. Nevins (USA Ret.), who with their wives, spent a quiet evening at the estate Friday night.

They first stopped at the President's property across the road from his main farm to chat with overseer Bob Hartley and look at cattle and other livestock.

Then the trio drove around to another piece of presidential property managed by farmer Ivan Feister. They saw more cattle and horses as well as a new shed now being built.

The President, Nevins and Allen then drove down the highway to Allen's farm and looked at his livestock. Then they returned to the President's farm for an afternoon and evening of relaxation.

KING COLE

Artillery Unit Wiped Out In 'War'

FT. POLK, La., March 30—UP—An artillery battery was annihilated by a simulated paper atomic blast today as the Army's giant war maneuver, Exersice King Cole, prepared to move into its second phase of operations in western Louisiana.

A second U. S. "friendly" unit suffered 50 per cent casualties from the simulated blast as units of the 18th airborne corps moved into assembly positions along Red river to capture bridgeheads.

King Cole headquarters officers at Ft. Polk said aggressor forces were silent during the closing hours of phase one of the field training exercise in "pentomic" warfare now being staged in a 13,000 square mile maneuver territory in western Louisiana and eastern Texas.

Army officials directing the 25,000 troops, who are participating in the Army's largest war games this year, said a unit is considered out of action for six hours when it is hit by the enemy. Headquarters said this is the normal time it would take to replace a unit actually destroyed.

Guerrillas and aggressor forces set a U. S. unit division headquarter kitchen on fire to cut telephone lines shortly before phase one of the operations ended at midnight Friday.

The airborne, infantry, and armored units taking part in maneuvers took a one-day break before entering the second of the five phases of the 21-day Exercise King Cole tomorrow.

18th Airborne Corps Poised To Begin Exercise

FT. POLK, La., March 30 (AP)—Eighteenth Airborne Corps units today poised in positions along the Red River to await the beginning of the second phase of Exercise King Cole.

The second phase begins Sunday after a one-day break.

The corps moved from a northern concentration area under light ground opposition, while elements of a paper unit, the U. S. 23rd Corps, held a position north of the river.

King Cole is the Army's latest field maneuvers.

Officers at King Cole headquarters said aggressor forces remained relatively silent during the final hours of the exercise's opening phase last night. That phase ended at midnight.

Aggressor artillery hit throughout U. S. held territory in light and spasmodic shelling.

As U. S. forces moved forward, an aggressor's simulated atomic blast destroyed one artillery battery and caused 50 per cent casualties in another.

Under rules of the war games, a unit is out of action when it is "knocked out."

Officers said the six-hour interval is a compromise of normal time it would take to replace a unit actually destroyed. They said leaving troops out of action longer would unnecessarily cause them to lose valuable training and experience.

Texas Dollar Sales Decline

AUSTIN, March 30 (UP)—Dollar sales during February fell off from the brisk pace set in January, but still held slightly better than the same period last year in Texas, the Bureau of Business Research reported Saturday.

Nondurable goods, such as food and clothing, showed the greatest slackening. Sales of nondurable goods during February declined 7 per cent from January levels and 1 per cent from February of last year.

Sales of durable goods, such as automobiles, refrigerators and building materials, declined 2 per cent from January figures and showed no change from February, 1956.

Live Polio Virus Vaccine May Be Weapon On Cancer

CINCINNATI, March 30 (UP)—The "live" virus polio vaccine developed by Dr. Albert Sabin, University of Cincinnati scientist, may one day prove a potent weapon in the battle against cancer.

The live polio virus is one of several viruses which have proven destructive to cancer cells in experimental animals.

Dr. Sabin told the Cincinnati Post Saturday that several studies were being carried on to determine the reaction of various viruses on cancer cells. He pointed out the experiments still were in preliminary stages.

But, said Sabin, there was nothing so far to indicate the polio virus would destroy cancer cells in humans.

Scientists at Johns Hopkins University and the University of Texas reported earlier this month that live polio viruses apparently were capable of destroying cancer cells.

However, Dr. Sabin, who has predicted lifetime immunity may be possible through his oral vaccine, said he would coocentrate on polio.

Rules Given In Morehouse Beauty Show

BASTROP, March 30, (Special)—Entrance in a beauty contest does not merely include submission of the contestants' names The official rules and regulations for each pretty entrant in the Miss Morehouse Pageant, sponsored by the Mer Rouge Jaycees hae been released.

The winner will compete for the Miss Louisiana title at Lake Providence in June, and the girl who secures highest state honors will have the opportunity to try for the crown of Miss America at Atlantic City in September.

A basic requirement is that each contestant has been a resident of the parish for the last six months. Each lass must possess poise, personality, intelligence, charm and beauty of face and figure, and be of good character.

Not limiting the requirements to charm and personality, the judges will also require "three-minutes of talent," and there is almost unlimited opportunity to display this, since the talent may be singing, dancing, playing a musical instrument, dramatic reading, art display, dress designing, or a talk on th career which the contestant desires to follow.

The girls who enter will agree that if they win the Miss Morehouse title, they will not become involved in any commercial or advertising agreements, or sign a management contract with any individual or corporation, unless they have permission of the Miss America Pageant.

Since the entire contest organization is on the "Miss" basis, each entrant must be single, and never have been married, divorced, or have had a marriage annulled.

Final provisions of the rules state that each entrant must be a high school graduate by September of 1957, and must be no less than 18 years old, nor more than 23, by September 1.

There're the rules — showing that it's not an easy thing to win the Miss Morehouse pageant.

Rationing Of Polio Vaccine Is Ruled Out

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP)—The U.S. Public Health Service and other polio - fighters agreed Saturday that a government allocation system is not needed to cope with the current shortage of Salk vaccine.

A strategy conference called by Surgeon General Leroy E. Burney also agreed to embark on a "year-round" drive to promote "all-out use" of the vaccine as soon as it is manufactured.

The group decided the goal of the drive should be full protective vaccination for all persons up to age 40. But first call on the vaccine should go to pregnant women and persons under 20, the groups most susceptble to the crippling disease.

This definitely ruled out talk of vaccine rationing.

The day - long conference a concluded that "special attention" should be given to the earliest possible vaccination of children under five and to children of low income families.

Like wooden ships of sailing days with their carved figureheads, some modern steel ships now carry bronze figureheads.

NE Beauty Pageant Scheduled April 11

Second edition of the Miss Northeast beauty pageant is set for April 11 at 8:15 p.m. in Brown Auditorium on the Northeast State campus.

The pageant, which last spring was initiated by the college Student Council, is scheduled to become an annual event, Bobby Joe Oden, student body president announced.

Twelve contestants will vie for top honors in the pageant. The winner will be eligible to represent the college at the Miss Louisiana pageant at Lake Providence. Last year's title was won by Miss Barbara West, a freshman from Grayson.

Competing in the current show will be the following coeds: Miss Betsy Benton, home economics freshman from Monroe; Miss Kathie Jan Fleischmann, sophomore speech major from Start; Miss Glenda Bennett, freshman health and physical education major from Winnsboro; Miss Gwen Henry, junior business education major from Columbia; Miss Peggy Louise Hines, freshman secretarial science student from Monroe.

All entrants have been active in high school and college affairs and several have captured places in such contests as Miss Monroe-West Monroe, Miss Franklin Parish, Miss Bienville Parish, FFA State Sweetheart, Cotton Festival, and Miss Northeast.

Julging at the April festival will be done by local civic leaders and winners of state beauty pageants, Oden announced.

SMALLEST ACREAGE SINCE YANKEE MARCH LOOMS

COTTON ECONOMY AGE PASSING IN MISSISSIPPI

By TIM PARKER

JACKSON, Miss., March 30 — The "land o' cotton" is changing into a land of beef cattle, dairy cows, sorghums, fruits, small grains, vegetables—and factories.

Scars left by the Yankee army which burned and ravaged its way through the South, were still fresh when Mississippi last contemplated such a small cotton acreage as she expects to plant this year.

In the rich alluvial Delta, where cotton fields once met the horizon on all sides, less than 30 per cent of cultivated land is going into cotton this year.

The state's expected 1,383,554 cotton acres for 1957 is the lowest total since 1868's 1,290,000.

The cry is raised that "cotton is no longer king" and that its fall from grace, like the destruction wrought during the Civil War, is the work of the North. Neither is true, because:

1. Every year, the Mississippi farmer does a better job of growing cotton. This increased yield per acre is directly related to the acreage controls.

2. The farmers themselves vote whether to accept the federal program — whether to swap their promise to limit their acreage in exchange for the government's promise to support prices. Mississippi farmers have never voted against the program.

This year the farmers winced when the government set Mississippi's cotton acreage at 1,673,183. The average acreage for the 10 years ending in 1954 was 2,331,000.

They winced again when Secretary of Agriculture Benson reduced the price support from 82.5 to 77 per cent of parity.

The soil bank applied the coup de grace. Final figures this week showed more than a quarter million acres—253,704—have been put in the soil bank reserve.

Under the soil bank, farmers are paid in cash a proportion of the money they might have made from the cotton-allotment acreage which they agree to leave unplanted. The goal is to reduce surpluses without putting the farmer out of business.

Most public office holders in the state don't like it. Money paid directly to a farmer is different from money circulating in the purchase of seed, fertilizer, farm machinery and paid for farm labor.

The farmer's response, often, is to try to produce as much cotton on the acreage left as he might have produced on his whole allotment. He also turns to corn, wheat, vegetable, cattle and poultry.

But the big push is to pour on fertilizer, possibly irrigate, improve drainage, and fight the insects—anything to boost production per acre. Quality is upgraded.

In 1935, Mississippi produced 1,542,000 bales from 2,740,000 acres. In 1940, acreage slipped to 2,500,000 but production rose to 1,532,000 bales. In 1955, acreage plummeted to 1,700,000—and a bountiful 2,000,000-bale crop was gathered.

WILL OF A SALESMAN

Meter Reader Unsung Hero

Often Targets Of Both Man And Canine

By SAM HANNA
Staff Writer

Their legs are prime menus for a dog—an animal that can't speak—but worse yet, their shoulders are strong enough to carry the burdens of the public—a creature that can and does speak.

They have the patience of the diplomat and the eyes of the flyer. Their stamina is like that of a fullback and their will to succeed is not to be bypassed by that of a salesman.

OFTEN UNNOTICED

Yet in most cases they're unseen unheard of and unknown. It is only when they are recognized that the above characteristics are called upon for mere survival.

For the task of reading your water and light meter is not just a job. It's downright artistic.

To a great many people, he—the unsung meter reader — is a schmoe who sneaks about their house only when he feels like it and he makes their monthly bill at whatever his fancy may choose.

But contrary to widespread belief, reading meters for the city of Monroe is a highly organized operation that sends five readers over two routes a day and 40 every month. Only every five months does the reader squint at meters over a route he traveled before.

He reads them through screens, digs them out of the ground, wipes mud off them and sometimes wades water and fights brush to reach them.

MISPLACED BLAME

Some think it was the meter reader who raised the garbage fee and increased the utility rates; and if your bill is higher this month than it was last month, don't call the office of the utiliti commission, cuss the meter reader.

But the truth of the matter is he had nothing to do with any increased rate.

What's more, your bill to him is a series of five numbers as recorded from the meter and as far as he is concerned he's through when the office takes them and an electric machine tabulates them.

The worst blow to his pride, however, is the accusation that he doesn't even read the meter. "Why, he just glanced at it from yards away," the complaints go.

But therein lies one beauty of the job. The skilled reader can read your meter like looking at the hands of a watch. And he can do it as far away as 20 feet.

He carries a flashlight for reading light meters through screens into dark rooms and a sharp hunting knife is standard equipment for cutting grass around the wate. meter and often for digging to reach it.

RECORD NUMBERS

He records the numbers from the meter on a pad.

But then all is not stormy in the life of a meter reader, for reading meters in the nicer residential sections of town is a nice job.

The lawns are well groomed, the flowers are in bloom and the meters are easy to reach. They're sometimes invited in to inspect a new home and their acquaintances increase with the growth of the city.

But in cases where the meters are found next to some buildings at the back of the lot; well, as one reader put it: "It gets rough in the summertime."

Yet, the meter reader is only human and like all humans he makes mistakes and is faced with some jobs that are almost impossible.

In both cases, it's the troubleshooter that comes to his rescue.

When a bill appears too high or too low, the sixth man of the staff—the troubleshooter — checks the meter and queries the water or light user to make double sure his bill is correct.

ONLY ROUTINE

But that is only routine. It's when a meter can't be found that puts the troubleshooter in his own element.

Water meters are located atop the water main; and if the manhole is built beneath a scrubby bush in an alley the meter will be found there also. Spring rains add more kicks to the job.

Time doesn't allow the regular reader the oportunity to seek out the meter and dig to uncover its face. The sixth man in a jeep and with a shovel, axe and hoe completes the job.

And like in any other profession, meter reading has its own way of operating.

The reader generally works down the front of a street, reading all the light meters as he goes, catching the water meters as he comes up the back, through the alleys, over the fences, past the dogs and by the setting, hissing geese.

As a result, some complain: "He read my water meter but didn't read the light meter," or vice versa.

SOME CONFUSION

Other misconceptions include his being confused with the gas reader, the sewer clean out box being mistaken for the water meter and the fact that the bills are based on a sliding scale and not a straight rate.

To all the afore mentioned, he has the answers and is instructed to expound freely and cordially.

So if it's all so confusing, painstaking and unappreciated, why then would any man want the job?

For material reasons, the pay's not bad, the hours are good (they work only in good weather, but 40 hours a week) and the job offers a two weeks vacation. They get no cut on their own bills either.

It's easy to see, however, that there are better jobs to be had.

The real reason? Perhaps determined Victor Moore, the city's senior reader, explained it best.

"Most of the people are nice," he said. "It's only those few gripes and cranks — like in anything else —that give us trouble."

"Besides," he said, "somebody has to do it."

EYES OF A FLYER
Reading meters is not always as easy a job as reader David Malone is having here. This meter is easily reached and above the surface of the ground, but many are so concealed that a troubleshooter has to seek them out. A good reader can squint a meter 20 feet away. (Staff Photo by Greg Hare)

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Schedule Drafted For Summer Camp

Dates for the Girl Scout Day Camp at Pine Wood have been set for July 8-19, inclusive, according to Mrs. N. L. Huckabee, day camp chairman for the Silver Waters Council. This will be the eighth consecutive day camp for the girls of Monroe and West Monroe. The camp this year will include ten days of the fun of camping by the day under the tall pines of the Girl Scout camp.

Fun and adventure await the girls who attend. Divided into units according to age, campers make a home in the woods, lashing a table, stringing up a line on which to pin their nosebag lunches, rolling up logs to sit upon, making a bulletin board, setting up handwashing facilities.

Divided into patrols for unit housekeeping the girls follow kape charts which make a fair division of jobs. At unit meetings the group decides on activities, with emphasis on simple outdoor skills for Brownie Scouts, badge activities in the out - of - doors for intermediates. Archery, crafts, singing, hikes, outdoor cooking, lashing, firebuilding, nature snoops are included in the program.

Camp is open to all girls who next September will be in grades 3-9, inclusive. Camp registration will be open to registered Scouts first, with non - Scouts being allowed to register beginning May 1st. The small fee charged covers bus transportation to and from camp, something to drink for lunch each day, food for a cookout in each unit, all program materials; there are no extras. The camp committee stresses the fact that no girl who wants to attend will be refused because of inability to pay the fee. There is some campership money available to take care of such cases.

Folders giving details on the camp are now being distributed through the troups to all Scouts. Parents are asked to read the folder carefully and plan to sign - up on the opening day for registration, April 13. On that date members of the day camp committee will be at the Girl Scouts office, 513 Breard, from 9:00 until 4:00 to take registrations. A folder will be mailed to anyone upon request to the Scout office.

Volunteer staff, trained for their jobs, serve as staff. Senior high school girls who also receive training, serve as program aides. Miss Annis Klie, local professional worker, will direct the camp. The high standards of leadership and of health and safety common to all Girl Scout camping, will be maintained.

Serving on the committee for this year's camp are: Mrs. D. E. DeMasterson, Mrs. G. P. Jordan, Mrs. Leon Noland, Jr., Mrs. W. M. Gannaway, Mrs. L. L. Nash, Mrs. C. C. Walters, Mrs. E. M. Varnado, Mrs. Edmund Middleton, Mrs. M. A.Denoux, Mrs. B. O. Yeldell.

The Silver Waters Girl Scout Council is an agency of United Givers of Ouachita parish.

Cpt. Roberts Assures Easter Party Success

Capt. H. E. Roberts, assistant chief of the Monroe fire department, who with Chief H. L. Hales, is engaged in effecting arrangements for a big egg hunt at Forsythe park on the afternoon of Easter, announces that all is coming fine. Merchants are highly cooperative and will provide some prizes that will delight all the youngsters, he said.

Fully 100 merchants of Monroe have given hearty approval of the affair and have promised complete cooperation.

The first prize to a little girl will be a fine diamond ring. This is only one of the many prizes which are being donated by the merchants.

Music will be one feature of the affair and this part of the program will be in direct crarge of Chief Hales. It is said that there are sufficient musicians who are in the fire department that they should be able to provide excellent entertainment for the event.

While West Monroe merchants are not being solicited to donate prizes nor are merchants of towns in the immediate area of Monroe, all parents are urged to bring their children and attend the affair. It will be the first similar project that has been held here on Easter for a series of years and the public seems heartily behind the project.

HOME LIBRARY IS EXTENSIVE

Denney Family Among Monroe's Avid Readers

By MARY ANNE CORPIN
Staff WRITER

"Mama —"

"Go get a book and read, Terry."

So Terry Denney, aged 3, goes off and reads during the evening.

This is not an unusual situation in the E. E. Denney home at 1212 South 2nd Street, since the family has one of the largest personal libraries, at least in magazines, in the city of Monroe and this area of the state.

In this day of television, movies, and other "futuristic" modes of spending leisure time, it's a 20th century discovery to find a family that not only prefers to read, but has a diversified library including several hundred books covering more than 30 different topics, and subscriptions to 47 magazines, plus the Wall Street Journal.

RESIDENT PHYSICIAN

Dr. Denney, who is a resident physician at Conway Memorial Hospital, and his wife Lorene, who is a homemaker, mother, and 12-hour student at Northeast (I get bored just staying home, she explains) have compiled the printers' ink and paper collection in the last four years.

Twenty - four of the magazines are of personal interest to Dr. Denney, twenty - six are enjoyed by his wife, and one is mainly for the baby-sitter.

"We generally read from about 7 in the evening until midnight, both for our own enjoyment in knowing about various things, and also to be able to discuss a wide range of topics with people who have different interests," he revealed.

Pretty blonde Teresa Susan (the 3-year-old) reads (looks) at books and magazines almost constantly, and Deborah, who is 4 and in kindergarten, also is a book scanner, although "now she is more interested in painting than reading," Mrs. Denney stated.

BROAD RANGE

Interests in painting, drama, business, homemaking, and medicine are only a few of those revealed by the magazine subscriptions.

The list of magazines covers just about every possible topic. It includes "American Artist, which is concerned with painting, Theatre Arts, mainly filled with art exhibits and fantasy, Cosmopolitan, Redbook, Mademoiselle, Seventeen (for our baby sitter, Mrs. Denney noted) Good Housekeeping, Family Circle, Ladies Home Journal, Look, Saturday Evening Post, Life, Esquire, Fortune (which Dr. Denney pointed out as the best in business magazines), and Sports Illustrated (he plays golf and tennis).

Sky and Telescope magazine is of interest to the family, since they have their own 4¼" diameter, 3½ foot long telescope. "We've used it mainly to observe the craters of the moon, Mars, the planets, the rings around Saturn — we haven't had time for just scanning the sky to search for the unusual, but we have looked at the well - known objects," Mrs. Denney revealed.

OTHER MAGAZINES

Their other magazines include Scientific American, U. S. News and World Report, Newsweek, Holiday, Geriatrics (concerned with the medical treatment of old people) the Exchange Bulletin of the New York Stock Exchange, Medical Economics, Modern Medicine, the VFW Magazine, Journal of the American Medical Association, American Practitioner, Texas State Journal of Medicine, World Medical Journal, Psychiatric Bulletin, The Farm, Nation's Business, Bulletins of the Mason Clinic in Seattle, Physicians' Bulletin, Therapeutic Notes, and Antibiotic Medicine and Clinical Therapy.

Mrs. Denney is interested in writing, and is currently taking four courses in journalism at Northeast State College. The family lived for three years in Matador, Texas, where Dr. Denney was in private practice, and while there, Mrs. Denney wrote to the University of Texas library and asked for suggestions on the best in college publications.

As a result, the family also subscribes to the magazine of the English Department of the University of Chicago, Georgia Review, Yale Review, Writer, Folio, Poetry, Sewanee Review (from the University of the South), Prairie Schooner (U. of Nebraska), Southwest Review (SMU, Ft. Worth) Colorado Quarterly (U. of Colorado at Boulder), and the Writers Guide.

EMORY GRADUATE

A graduate of Emory University at Atlanta, Ga., Dr. Denney spent two years with the U. S. Army as a medical officer, stationed in Michigan, Sault Ste. Marie, and Colorado Springs, Colo.

Currently doing surgery at Conway Hospital, Dr. Denney is one of eight resident physicians, all of whom put in several years of practice before coming to Conway.

"The turnover of patients is terrific out there, though," Mrs. Denney revealed. She burst into laughter at the mention of his "hours" — "he goes out in the morning, and comes in at night, that's about it," she stated. "He really enjoys his work though and we're very happy here," she revealed.

Mrs. Denney not only does a lot of reading, she now is turning author. She recently won first place in the one act play division sponsored by the College Writers' Society of Louisiana. As one of her friends remarked, "Something was bound to result from all that reading."

Meter Reader Unsung Hero

Often Targets Of Both Man And Canine

By SAM HANNA
Staff Writer

Their legs are prime menus for a dog—an animal that can't speak—but worse yet, their shoulders are strong enough to carry the burdens of the public—a creature that can and does speak.

They have the patience of the diplomat and the eyes of the flyer. Their stamina is like that of a fullback and their will to succeed is not to be bypassed by that of a salesman.

OFTEN UNNOTICED

Yet in most cases they're unseen unheard of and unknown. It is only when they are recognized that the above characteristics are called upon for mere survival.

For the task of reading your water and light meter is not just a job. It's downright artistic.

To a great many people, he—the unsung meter reader — is a schmoe who sneaks about their house only when he feels like it and he makes their monthly bill at whatever his fancy may choose.

But contrary to widespread belief, reading meters for the city of Monroe is a highly organized operation that sends five readers over two routes a day and 40 every month. Only every five months does the reader squint at meters over a route he traveled before.

He reads them through screens, digs them out of the ground, wipes mud off them and sometimes wades water and fights brush to reach them.

MISPLACED BLAME

Some think it was the meter reader who raised the garbage fee and increased the utility rates; and if your bill is higher this month than it was last month, don't call the office of the utiliti commission, cuss the meter reader.

But the truth of the matter is he had nothing to do with any increased rate.

What's more, your bill to him is a series of five numbers as recorded from the meter and as far as he is concerned he's through when the office takes them and an electric machine tabulates them.

The worst blow to his pride, however, is the accusation that he doesn't even read the meter. "Why, he just glanced at it from yards away," the complaints go.

But therein lies one beauty of the job. The skilled reader can read your meter like looking at the hands of a watch. And he can do it as far away as 20 feet.

He carries a flashlight for reading light meters through screens into dark rooms and a sharp hunting knife is standard equipment for cutting grass around the wate. meter and often for digging to reach it.

RECORD NUMBERS

He records the numbers from the meter on a pad.

But then all is not stormy in the life of a meter reader, for reading meters in the nicer residential sections of town is a nice job.

The lawns are well groomed, the flowers are in bloom and the meters are easy to reach. They're sometimes invited in to inspect a new home and their acquaintances increase with the growth of the city.

But in cases where the meters are found next to some buildings at the back of the lot; well, as one reader put it: "It gets rough in the summertime."

Yet, the meter reader is only human and like all humans he makes mistakes and is faced with some jobs that are almost impossible.

In both cases, it's the troubleshooter that comes to his rescue.

When a bill appears too high or too low, the sixth man of the staff —the troubleshooter — checks the meter and queries the water or light user to make double sure his bill is correct.

ONLY ROUTINE

But that is only routine. It's when a meter can't be found that puts the troubleshooter in his own element.

Water meters are located atop the water main; and if the manhole is built beneath a scrubby bush in an alley the meter will be found there also. Spring rains add more kicks to the job.

Time doesn't allow the regular reader the oportunity to seek out the meter and dig to uncover its face. The sixth man in a jeep and with a shovel, axe and hoe completes the job.

And like in any other profession, meter reading has its own way of operating.

The reader generally works down the front of a street, reading all the light meters as he goes, catching the water meters as he comes up the back, through the alleys, over the fences, past the dogs and by the setting, hissing geese.

As a result, some complain: "He read my water meter but didn't read the light meter," or vice versa.

SOME CONFUSION

Other misconceptions include his being confused with the gas reader, the sewer clean out box being mistaken for the water meter and the fact that the bills are based on a sliding scale and not a straight rate.

To all the afore mentioned, he has the answers and is instructed to expound freely and cordially.

So if it's all so confusing, painstaking and unappreciated, why then would any man want the job?

For material reasons, the pay's not bad, the hours are good (they work only in good weather, but 40 hours a week) and the job offers a two weeks vacation. They get no cut on their own bills either.

It's easy to see, however, that there are better jobs to be had.

The real reason? Perhaps determined Victor Moore, the city's senior reader, explained it best.

"Most of the people are nice," he said. "It's only those few gripes and cranks — like in anything else —that give us trouble."

"Besides," he said, "somebody has to do it."

Emmanuel To Hear World Leader Talk

Emmanuel Baptist Church, in downtown Monroe, North Fifth and Breard streets, will open a revival Sunday. The evangelist is to be Dr. A. E. Prince, who was successively pastor of the West Monroe First Baptist church and of the First Baptist Church in Pineville.

While serving in this state he was president of the executive board of the Louisiana Baptist convention. He served three years as district missionary in Texas and as foreign missionary in New Zealand which is a record for a Southern Baptist missionary. The Pacific islands formed a large part of his labors.

His pastoral work has taken him half way around the world and in four states, but he has also done evangelistic work in 18 states.

He understands youth as he has been president of three colleges and pastors in nine college and university centers.

A real treat is in prospect, says Pastor Doolittle of Emmanuel Church. Services at 7:30 p.m. nightly and a nursery is available for the little fellows.

Break Ground For New Bldg.

Central Baptist Church will have "ground-breaking" services today prior to the construction of their new educational building. Tommie Clark, local contractor, submitted the lowest bid for this structure and will begin construction on the first of the week. The cost of this portion of the complete educational plant is $114,224.38. Alan Turpin is the architect who drew up all the plans and specifications for this building. It will be erected on the vacant lot adjacent to the other buildings. The old frame buildings will remain as they are until a permanent structure will replace them.

Rev. C. Roger Johnson is the pastor of Central Baptist Church and Rev. Charles B. Littleton is the associate. Fred Salley is the chairman of the building planning committee with the following members: Henry Taylor, Jack Norton, C. L. Hinton, Lee Baxter, Albert Barker, W. E. Bennett, B. D. Farr, J. J. David, B. A. Turpin and Grady Grafton.

The special activities for this day will be the ground-breaking service at 11:45 a.m. following the morning worship service. All the members of the church will go directly to the building program.

A special service, recognizing the men of the church, will be held in the evening service. The men's chorus will render the special music. To close the day's activities, there will be a time of fellowship and refreshments after the evening service. All members and friends of Central Baptist Church are urged to attend all these activities.

PROFESSOR AMACKER

MY ANSWER

By Billy Graham

QUESTION: I am so burdened over the social life of my married children. I have tried in every way to give them proper Christian training, but I know I have failed many times. They get angry when I speak to them of Christ, and I cannot bear to think of them being lost at last. Will my prayers ever be answered? A. M.

ANSWER: Yes, I believe that some day your prayers will be answered. The Bible says: "Train up a child in the way he shall go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." (Prov. 22:6) Some people awaken to their spiritual responsibilities sooner than others. It takes some longer to grow up than others. If your walk with Christ has been consistent, your children will never get away from your example and your prayers. They may be old and you may not even live to see the day, but I believe that your righteous life and your earnest prayers will bear fruit. I would suggest that you not despair, but that you add faith to your prayers. Monica, the mother of Saint Augustine, even when he fell into deep sin, never lost faith that God would bring him back, and by her faith dragged him from the mire and set him among princes. "The effectual fervent prayer of the righteous . . . availeth much."

Rev. U. Holmes Guest Preacher

The Rev. Urban T. Holmes III, Episcopal chaplain at the student center at Louisiana State University, will be the guest preacher at the regular Lenten service Wednesday night at Grace Church. The service will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. Fa. Holmes is a native of North Carolina, the son of a faculty member of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. He holds a B. A. and M. A. degree from the university, the latter being in medieval and ancient history. He received his Th. B. degree from the Philadelphia Divinity School, where he graduated with honors in history.

His first pastorate was that of curate at St. Luke's parish, Salisbury, N.C.

Emmanuel To Hear World Leader Talk

Emmanuel Baptist Church, in downtown Monroe, North Fifth and Breard streets, will open a revival Sunday. The evangelist is to be Dr. A. E. Prince, who was successively pastor of the West Monroe First Baptist church and of the First Baptist Church in Pineville.

While serving in this state he was president of the executive board of the Louisiana Baptist convention. He served three years as district missionary in Texas and as foreign missionary in New Zealand, which is a record for a Southern Baptist missionary. The Pacific islands formed a large part of his labors.

His pastoral work has taken him half way around the world and in four states, but he has also done evangelistic work in 18 states.

He understands youth as he has been president of three colleges and pastors in nine college and university centers.

A real treat is in prospect, states Pastor Doolittle of Emmanuel Church. Services at 7:30 p.m. nightly and a nursery is available for the little fellows.

DR. A. E. PRINCE

T. M. COLLINS

Parkview To Hold Revival Series Here

The Reverend T. M. Collins, pastor of the North Jacksonville Baptist Church, Jacksonville, Fla. begins a series of revival messages tomorrow night, April 1, at 7:30 at the Parkview Baptist Church, North Tenth and Forsythe Avenue. The revival will continue through Sunday night, April 7.

Jack Day, minister of music at the First Baptist Church, West Monroe, will direct the music. He will present a different music program each night to accompany Rev. Collins' sermons. Mr. Day attended Howard College, Birmingham, Ala. and studied extensively with Homer Rhodehaver in the field of gospel music.

There will be an early morning service beginning Tuesday from 7 a.m. until 7:40 a.m. for those who are employed and who must report for work at 8:00 o'clock. Coffee and doughnuts will be served preceding the morning services. The evening services will open at 7:30 o'clock, lasting one hour.

Reverend Collins is a native of Alabama, and is one of the leading Baptist preachers, theologians and scholars. He attended the University of Mississippi receiving his A. B. degree. He was a member of the Blue Key and president of the state student Y. M. C. A.

Rev. Collins is a graduate of Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth. He has held the position of state Sunday School Secretary of Florida. He pastored in Alabama and Georgia.

Rev. H. L. Sampson, pastor of Parkview Church, and Edwin W. Crowley, chairman of the evangelism committee, urge the people of the Twin Cities to attend these series of meetings.

Break Ground For New Bldg.

Central Baptist Church will have "ground-breaking" services today prior to the construction of their new educational building. Tommie Clark, local contractor, submitted the lowest bid for this structure and will begin construction on the first of the week. The cost of this portion of the complete educational plant is $114,224.38. Alan Turpin is the architect who drew up all the plans and specifications for this building. It will be erected on the vacant lot adjacent to the other buildings. The old frame buildings will remain as they are until a permanent structure will replace them.

Rev. C. Roger Johnson is the pastor of Central Baptist Church and Rev. Charles B. Littleton is the associate. Fred Salley is the chairman of the building planning committee with the following members: Henry Taylor, Jack Norton, C. L. Hinton, Lee Baxter, Albert Barker, W. E. Bennett, R. D. Farr, J. J. David, B. A. Tarver, and Grady Grafton.

The special activities for this day will be the ground-breaking service at 11:45 a.m. following the morning worship service. All the offerings of the church will go directly into the building program.

A special service, recognizing the men of the church, will be held in the evening service. The men's chorus will render the special music. To close the day's activities, there will be a time of fellowship and refreshments after the evening service. All members and friends of Central Baptist Church are urged to attend all these activities.

Eisenhower Doctrine Is Explained By Amacker

He served as an oral interpreter before President Wilson's Peace Conference Commission to draft the League of Nations, February 4-12, 1919. Professor Amacker is well qualified to present and lead a discussion on "The Eisenhower Doctrine."

The First Presbyterian Church extends a cordial invitation to the Monroe public to hear this outstanding man on such a timely topic.

PROFESSOR AMACKER

By Billy Graham

QUESTION: I am so burdened over the social life of my married children. I have tried in every way to give them proper Christian training, but I know I have failed many times. They get angry when I speak to them of Christ, and I cannot bear to think of them being lost at last. Will my prayers ever be answered? A. M.

ANSWER: Yes, I believe that some day your prayers will be answered. The Bible says: "Train up a child in the way he shall go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." (Prov. 22:6) Some people awaken to their spiritual responsibilities sooner than others. It takes some longer to grow up than others. If your walk with Christ has been consistent, your children will never get away from your example and your prayers. They may be old and you may not even live to see the day, but I believe that your righteous life and your earnest prayers will bear fruit. I would suggest that you not despair, but that you add faith to your prayers. Monica, the mother of Saint Augustine, even when he fell into deep sin, never lost faith that God would bring him back, and by her faith dragged him from the mire and set him among princes. "The effectual fervent prayer of the righteous . . . availeth much."

Rev. Dan Blake To Lead In Revival

Rev. Dan B. Blake, pastor of the First Baptist church in Simsboro, will lead a week of revival services at the Ridge Avenue Baptist church, West Monroe. He attended Louisiana College and La. Tech and his parents are Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Blake, Jonesboro, La.

This church is seeking for a new high attendance record for the revival and also for the Sunday school where the goal sought is 500.

Rev. U. Holmes Guest Preacher

The Rev. Urban T. Holmes III, Episcopal chaplain at the student center at Louisiana State University, will be the guest preacher at the regular Lenten service Wednesday night at Grace Church. The service will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. Fa. Holmes is a native of North Carolina, the son of a faculty member of the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. He holds a B. A. and M. A. degree from the university, the latter being in medieval and ancient history. He received his Th. B. degree from the Philadelphia Divinity School, where he graduated with honors in history.

His first pastorate was that of curate at St. Luke's parish, Salisbury, N.C.

The public is cordially invited to attend these services.

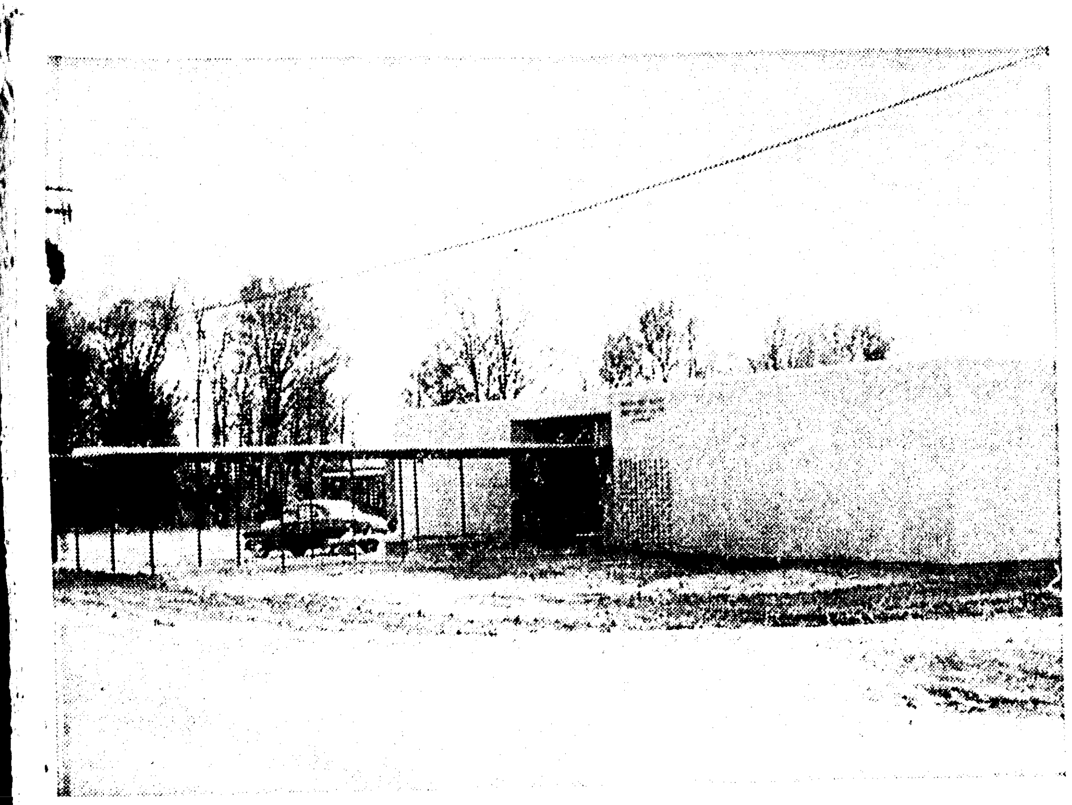
Rehabilitation Center Dedication Today



READY FOR DEDICATION TODAY
A modern streamlined building will be placed in use today to serve disabled persons in 15 northeast Louisiana parishes.

HELP FOR THE LITTLE ONES
Many persons will be served by the new rehabilitation center.

Installation Will Serve 15 Parishes

The dedication of the Carolyn Rose Strauss Rehabilitation Center will take place at 2 o'clock this afternoon, with Willis C. Gorthy, Director of the Institute for Crippled and Disabled in New York City as principal speaker, and James Womack, Winnfield attorney, giving a featured address.

The center, which will serve physically disabled out - patients from the 15 parishes in northeast Louisiana, will be staffed by a medical social worker, vocational guidance counselors, mental hygienist, sociologist, and speech therapists.

SEAL FACILITY

Constructed from a $60,000 federal grant and a donation of $560,000 from the Carolyn Rose Strauss Foundation, the modern center is located on Oliver Road, 300 yards from U. S. highway 80.

Funds for operation of the facility will come entirely from the Easter Seal drive, and services offered will eventually include all those designated for a community rehabilitation center by the office of vocational rehabilitation of the department of health, education and welfare.

The largest number of patients treated at the start will be composed of children, while adult facilities will be introduced gradually. General clinics will be held two days each month, to care for from 60 to 130 children, and approximately 15 patients will be treated at the center on all other days. Ambulatory and wheelchair patients will be cared for on a day center basis.

MORE FUNDS NEEDED

A. F. Canizaro, president of the Easter Seal drive, and Womack, leader in the drive, emphasized yesterday that although the structure is completed, additional funds will be necessary to keep it in operation. The first center primarily for rehabilitation in the south, it is owned by the Society for Crippled Children and Adults, Inc.

Gorthy, who will speak this afternoon at the center dedication, has travelled extensively, both here and in Europe, on rehabilitation work. Womack, a disabled World War II veteran, is working throughout this section of the state on the Easter Seal drive.

Miss. State's Slated Here College Choir

Word from Virginia Cook is to the effect that the Mississippi State College choir will include Monroe in their spring tour this year. They will be heard over the local TV station at 4 p.m. Tuesday, April 1.

Of local interest is the fact that Virginia is to be one of the soloists for the choir.

Virginia is the daughter of Mrs. Fred Cook, 816 St. John street. She graduated last year from Louisiana college. At this time, both she and her mother are doing postgraduate work at Mississippi State.

'Ramparts We Watch,' Topic, Dr. Archer

Dr. Glenn L. Archer, executive director of Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State, Washington, D. C., will be the distinguished guest speaker at a citizens meeting on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the First Methodist Church, Monroe, according to an announcement just released.

His subject will be: "The Ramparts We Watch."

Dr. Archer has been in the news in recent months as a central figure in several state's controversies over school bus transportation provided by public funds for the benefit of Roman Catholic Parochial Schools, the teaching of the Catholic Catechism in our public schools, the tax exemption claims of church-owned radio stations, and other breaches in the wall of separation between church and state erected in the Constitution of the United States.

A Kansas farmer and business executive, lawyer and formerly dean of Washburn University College of Law at Topeka, Kans., and for a few years the legislative counsel of the National Education Association, Dr. Archer has held his present position for the past ten years. The fervor of his patriotic eloquence has won for him the title by which thousands of people call him, — "Mr. American." He was given a tremendous ovation last year when he addressed the Southern Baptist Convention in Kansas City, and has likewise captivated vast audiences of Methodists, Presbyterians and other denominational assemblages.

The public is cordially invited to hear his message.

The largest sunspot on record occurred in 1947 when one spread 200 thousand miles across the sun's face.

TO SPEAK AT DEDICATION
State Easter Seal Chairman James Womack, left, Winnfield, greets Willis C. Gorthy, New York, who will be the principal speaker at ceremonies today dedicating the new Carolyn Rose Strauss Rehabilitation Center. The public is invited to attend the dedication of the Center, Louisiana's newest Easter Seal facility, on Oliver Road at 2 p.m. today. The dedication is a highlight of the current drive for funds to carry on the work of the Ouachita Parish Society for Crippled Children and Adults, sponsors of the project. Support Is Urged For New Facility

Dedication of the Carolyn Rose Strauss Rehabilitation Center today will highlight the 1957 Easter Seal campaign for crippled children and adults in Ouachita and surrounding parishes. The ceremonies, to which the public is invited, will be held at 2 p.m. at the modern new facility on Oliver Road.

Two speakers here for the opening Saturday stressed the fact that delication of the $150,000 plant is just the beginning of what can be a "truly significant" program aimed at restoring the physically handicapped of this area to useful and productive living.

Willis C. Gorthy, New York City, director of the Institute for the Crippled and Disabled, urged widespread community support for the Center. "A facility such as this," he declared, "costs money to operate. It will require the understanding and solid support of the community to get it going. But once it is in operation, it will be a real asset to the area, economically as well as from a humanitarian standpoint. The current Easter Seal campaign provides an excellent manner in which the public can participate in the costs. No one group can or should be expected to operate such a Center, from which the entire area will derive such benefits."

James Womack, Winnfield attorney and state Easter Seal chairman, emphasized the latter's plea for broad community support. "Easter Seal people all over the state," he said, "congratulate the Ouachita Parish Society for Crippled Children and the Strauss Foundation. We share with you something of the triumph of this moment. And I think that we envy you just a little, for the opportunity you have, now that you have come this far, to offer the handicapped of your area the help they neet to become useful, self respecting human beings."

A number of other out-of-town guests will be on hand for the dedication, which will feature the unveiling of portraits of Carolyn Rose Strauss, for whom the center is named and memorializes, and of Diane Hughes, who was Louisiana's Easter Seal child in 1954. Lucien A. Branch will serve as master of ceremonies, with local Society leaders participating in the event. The center will be open to the public from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Miss. State's Slated Here College Choir

Word from Virginia Cook is to the effect that the Mississippi State College choir will include Monroe in their spring tour this year. They will be heard over the local TV station at 4 p.m. Tuesday, April 1.

Of local interest is the fact that Virginia is to be one of the soloists for the choir.

Virginia is the daughter of Mrs. Fred Cook, 816 St. John street. She graduated last year from Louisiana college. At this time, both she and her mother are doing postgraduate work at Mississippi State.

'Ramparts We Watch,' Topic, Dr. Archer

Dr. Glenn L. Archer, executive director of Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State, Washington, D. C., will be the distinguished guest speaker at a citizens meeting on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the First Methodist Church, Monroe, according to an announcement just released.

His subject will be: "The Ramparts We Watch."

Dr. Archer has been in the news in recent months as a central figure in several state's controversies over school bus transportation provided by public funds for the benefit of Roman Catholic Parochial Schools, the teaching of the Catholic Catechism in our public schools, the tax exemption claims of church-owned radio stations, and other breaches in the wall of separation between church and state erected in the Constitution of the United States.

A Kansas farmer and business executive, lawyer and formerly dean of Washburn University College of Law at Topeka, Kans., and for a few years the legislative counsel of the National Education Association, Dr. Archer has held his present position for the past ten years. The fervor of his patriotic eloquence has won for him the title by which thousands of people call him, — "Mr. American." He was given a tremendous ovation last year when he addressed the Southern Baptist Convention in Kansas City, and has likewise captivated vast audiences of Methodists, Presbyterians and other denominational assemblages.

The public is cordially invited to hear his message.

TO SPEAK AT DEDICATION
State Easter Seal Chairman James Womack, left, Winnfield, greets Willis C. Gorthy, New York, who will be the principal speaker at ceremonies today dedicating the new Carolyn Rose Strauss Rehabilitation Center. The public is invited to attend the dedication of the Center, Louisiana's newest Easter Seal facility, on Oliver Road at 2 p.m. today. The dedication is a highlight of the current drive for funds to carry on the work of the Ouachita Parish Society for Crippled Children and Adults, sponsors of the project. Support Is Urged For New Facility

Dedication of the Carolyn Rose Strauss Rehabilitation Center today will highlight the 1957 Easter Seal campaign for crippled children and adults in Ouachita and surrounding parishes. The ceremonies, to which the public is invited, will be held at 2 p.m. at the modern new facility on Oliver Road.

Two speakers here for the opening Saturday stressed the fact that delication of the $150,000 plant is just the beginning of what can be a "truly significant" program aimed at restoring the physically handicapped of this area to useful and productive living.

Willis C. Gorthy, New York City, director of the Institute for the Crippled and Disabled, urged widespread community support for the Center. "A facility such as this," he declared, "costs money to operate. It will require the understanding and solid support of the community to get it going. But once it is in operation, it will be a real asset to the area, economically as well as from a humanitarian standpoint. The current Easter Seal campaign provides an excellent manner in which the public can participate in the costs. No one group can or should be expected to operate such a Center, from which the entire area will derive such benefits."

James Womack, Winnfield attorney and state Easter Seal chairman, emphasized the latter's plea for broad community support. "Easter Seal people all over the state," he said, "congratulate the Ouachita Parish Society for Crippled Children and the Strauss Foundation. We share with you something of the triumph of this moment. And I think that we envy you just a little, for the opportunity you have, now that you have come this far, to offer the handicapped of your area the help they neet to become useful, self respecting human beings."

A number of other out-of-town guests will be on hand for the dedication, which will feature the unveiling of portraits of Carolyn Rose Strauss, for whom the center is named and memorializes, and of Diane Hughes, who was Louisiana's Easter Seal child in 1954. Lucien A. Branch will serve as master of ceremonies, with local Society leaders participating in the event. The center will be open to the public from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

DESPITE TROUBLESOME SIGNS

Business Activity Near Record Levels

NEW YORK, March 30 (AP)—Costs up, production down, competition fiercer than ever. But total economic activity still close to a record high.

That's how business stacked up this week at the finish of the year's first quarter.

There were signs that the boom was getting tired, but there were [illegible] back strong after a [illegible].

[illegible] several ways.

New car dealers were still waiting for that spring upturn. Sales for March compared unfavorably with a year ago.

[illegible] was the lowest since last [illegible] the lowest for any week since August.

Appliance manufacturers announced new layoffs. At least two, Frigidaire and General Electric, were reported to have slashed wholesale prices—Frigidaire on refrigerators and GE on electric stoves.

The federal government's top economic planners were described as worrying less about inflation—for the time being, at least—and more about deflation. There were hints that the pinch on credit had eased a little here and there.

Best news was the U.S. Labor Department's forecast of a spring upsurge in employment in most of the United States.

Construction, especially road building, was expected to set the pace. F. W. Dodge Corp. reported a decline in contracts awarded in February for private construction but a strong pickup in public works awards.

The Labor Department said plenty of jobs would be opening up, too, in the trade and service industries, food processing, and lumber.

Other good spots to look for a job: aircraft, shipbuilding, chemicals, fabricated metals.

The department said engineers and scientists are still wanted by industry as badly as ever. Also in demand in many parts of the country: skilled metal workers, draftsmen, mechanics, typists and stenographers, secretaries, nurses.

Seasonal declines in employment were envisioned, however, in such industries as textiles, apparel, shoes, tobacco.

Meanwhile the nation's biggest railroad announced plans for laying off 1,800 maintenance workers Monday.

A. J. Greenough, the Pennsylvania Railroad's vice president of transportation and maintenance, said business has fallen off and the outlook for improvement is "uncertain." Said he: "With the railroads strictly regulated, the margin between income and outgo is so small that when business drops off we are compelled to move quickly to cut expenses, a large part of which is wages."

In another cost cutting move, Anaconda Co. took steps to halt production at two [illegible] mines in Montana "until copper prices will again be attractive." American [illegible] Corp., a leading manufacturer of synthetic textile fabrics, said it would hold production to a five-day week for the rest of the year. The textile industry normally operates on a six-day basis.

Biggest question mark on the business scene this week hovered over the motor capital of Detroit.

Although auto sales executives were bursting with optimism, sales charts told a somewhat different story — a baffling decline for the first three weeks of March.

From March 1 through March 20, dealers sold 329,000 new cars. That's 8 per cent less than they sold in the first 20 days of March last year, when sales were supposedly in the doldrums.

This week Chevrolet, Buick and Mercury trimmed production sharply while fast-stepping Ford and Plymouth cut down on overtime. The industry's output—about 131,000 cars—was only a shade higher than in the like week of 1956 when many auto workers took a day off on Good Friday.

Business in many of the nation's department stores showed a rising trend this week as shoppers stepped up their Easter buying. Easter falls on April 21 this year, three weeks later than in 1956. Merchants hope the later date will boost sales.

With home building down sharply from last year, Uncle Sam took steps this week to spur sales of houses under the FHA mortgage program. If you finance the purchase of a home with an FHA-insured mortgage, you won't need quite as much cash for the down payment. What you "save" on the down payment has to be added to the mortgage, of course, and paid back—with interest—later. But the government's action here may be an important step toward loosening the strings on credit.

Briefly over the business scene: Sears, Roebuck reported record sales and profits for 1956, although profits did not climb as fast as sales. Emil Schram, former president of the New York Stock Exchange was elected chairman of Butler Bros., midwest retail chain. Herman D. Ruhm resigned as president of Burlington Industries Inc. Castro Convertible Corp., New York furniture manufacturer, introduced a new product—a sofa covered with mink.

GM MEDIUMS LAG; FORD AHEAD

Plymouth Pushes Chrysler's Drive; Sales Up 15 Per Cent

By JIM KLOCKENKEMPER

DETROIT, March 30 (UP) — Auto production forecasts for the second quarter of 1957 show Chrysler will increase its comeback while the surprising slide of General Motors may continue.

General Motors division executives, like politicians, have been touring the grass roots with predictions of a rosy future. But these trips and the offering of several dealer and salesmen contests by the factory, indicate the nation's No. 1 automaker is concerned about sales declines.

Future production schedules throughout the industry show none of the automakers were quite as confident of the "big spring market" as they were a month ago.

FORD, CHRYSLER UP

Ward's Automotive Reports said the industry a few weeks ago planned to build 1,729,000 cars in April-June. Now this has gone down to 1,600,000, Ward's said.

But the 1.6 million total would still be 10.3 per cent above the 1,450,000 units built in the second quarter of 1956.

The plans show Ford, Chrysler and even the smaller auto makers will build bigger percentages of cars in the next three months. General Motors still will build 44.5 per cent, by far the biggest share, but this will be 8.3 per cent less than the GM share in the same quarter of 1956.

FORD OVER CHEVROLET

Chrysler, which built an estimated 20.5 per cent in the first three months, plans to build 22.2 per cent in the next three months. Ford expects to up its share from 30.4 to 30.9 per cent. The smaller manufacturers — Studebaker-Packard and American Motors — would increase from 2.5 to 2.6 per cent.

The latest sales picture—or new car registration—show Ford with a solid lead over Chevrolet in a race for the number one spot. But the GM medium priced lines—which were completely restyled for 1957 models—have taken a worst pasting.

Plymouth, last year fighting to stay ahead of Oldsmobile for fourth place, has moved into third ahead of Buick for the first time since 1953. But while Plymouth sales are up from 1956 by nearly 15 per cent, none of the three medium-price GM lines has been able to boost sales.

IMPERIAL PICKED

Only Cadillac, among the General Motors cars, has increased its sales in 1957 over 1956.

All Chrysler Corp car sales are up, and although the Chrysler line shows a bare increase, the graduation of the Imperial—probably the "hottest" selling auto item in the country—into a full-fledged line of its own, more than offsets this.

The Imperial, with curved side windows and a softly-sloping rear deck, so far has the best public styling acceptance for the year. Nearly three times as many have been sold so far this year than were sold in 1956.

Rail, Utilities Delegates Meet For Conference

JACKSON, Miss., March 30 (AP) — Ten states have indicated they will send a total of 400 delegates to the three-day spring conference of the Southeastern Assn. of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners opening Wednesday at Biloxi.

Chairman Rubel Phillips of the host Mississippi Public Service Commission, said states to be represented are Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia.

Problems of telephone regulation will be discussed by Cayce L. Pentecost of Tennessee, Chairman Matt L. McWhorter of the Georgia Public Service Commission, and Commissioner John J. McKeithen of the Louisiana Public Service Commission.

Other speakers on telephone issues will be E. C. O'Rear, chief engineer for the Kentucky Public Service Commission; James H. Brown, chief accountant for the Virginia State Corporation Commission; A. L. Hutchinson executive assistant for the Kentucky Public Service Commission; and A. L. Mac of the Federal Communications Commission.

STOCK AVERAGE CLIMBS

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks climbed for the fifth week in a row when it closed Friday at 174.2 from 173.9 a week earlier. For the second straight week the commodity index declined, closing at 175.7, the lowest point since July 13. A week ago the index was 176.8. Industrials showed substantial losses. (AP Wirephoto Chart.)

Technical Rallies Perk Up Markets

NEW YORK, March 30 (AP)—The stock market almost woke up this week. It was a near miss.

A series of technical rallies in mid-week perked up volume and it looked as if the market had a chance of breaking out of the narrow trading range which has confined it for a month and a half.

But the week ended with profit-taking and a falling off in volume, leaving things just about where they have been—sluggish.

For the fifth straight week, however, there was a very slight rise in overall prices.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 30 cents to $174.20.

Considering how far the market has fallen from its all-time bull market high of last April and even from its intermediate highs of the yearend, however, such movements are more flutters.

Nevertheless, the market did reach to challenge the recovery high of early March. This was the point where prices were boosted by the Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza and Aqaba areas after steadily declining prices earlier in the year.

The market attained this small pinnacle on Thursday. It did it on vastly increased volume compared with the laggard sessions which have prevailed lately. The Thursday volume of 1,930,000 shares was the biggest since Feb. 15. Since it came on a rise in prices, and since there had been a slight day-by-day boost in volume and prices in prior sessions it looked as if this time perhaps the market might pierce the upside barrer.

For the first hour yesterday, when trading was even brisker than in the first hour Thursday, and prices were rising generally, it seemed as if the challenge had been successful.

But soon became apparent that there was plenty of stock for sale at that level. Prices faltered, bids dried up and the market declined in slow trading. Profit-taking had skimmed what there was of the cream.

The five most active issues on the New York Stock Exchange this week were:

Bethlehem Steel, up ¾ at 42¾ on 165,800 shares; General Motors, off ½ at 38⅞; Lukens Steel, up 4⅛ at 62⅞; U.S. Hoffman Machinery, off ⅛ at 10⅝ and Shell Transport & Trading, up ½ at 23¾.

Both corporate and U. S. government bonds drifted lower this week in rather desultory trading in the bond market.

Magnolia Unveils Octane Increase

To meet the anti-knock requirements of today's high compression engines, George J. Gregor, vice-president in charge of marketing of Magnolia Petroleum Company, Saturday announced another boost in octane in his company's premium grade gasoline. Magnolia is the Southwestern affiliate of Socony Mobil Oil Company, Inc.

In announcing another octane boost in Magnolia's premium gasoline, Gregor stated that Magnolia would continue to market only two grades of gasoline. He explained that "octane is the ability of a gasoline to perform without knocks or pings in an engine. With another big octane boost plus chemical additives to help high compression engines utilize this anti-knock power, our new premium gasoline fully meets the needs of the highest compression engines in the '57 cars."

Cotton Future Prices Firm During Week

NEW YORK, March 30 (AP) — Cotton futures prices were firm this week. After some irregularity, all deliveries finished on the upside with the distant months scoring the largest gains.

Active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange closed at prices ranging from 5 cents to $1.80 a bale higher than at the end of the week before.

The new crop months were aided by expectations that the 1957 loan rate would be above the previously announced guaranteed minimum for the coming season. Other bullish factors included the high level of sales of government-held cotton under the surplus export program and a substantial rise in acreage pledged to the soil bank.

Considerable interest was aroused in trade quarters by the large volume of government-held cotton sold for export against bids opened at the latest auction March 19. At this sale, the government disposed of 820,000 bales of 1955 and prior crop upland cotton for export on or before next Aug. 15, and an additional 238,000 bales for export on or after Aug. 16.

The amount which has to be ported by Aug. 15 was considerably larger than many in the trade had looked for, while the volume of cotton sold for export after that date was below expectations, it was pointed out. Average price of cotton sold for export before mid-August was 27.42 cents a pound, middling one-inch basis, while cotton earmarked for export after that date commanded an average price of 27.47 cents a pound, middling one-inch basis.

It was noted that the total amount of cotton sold by the Commodity Credit Corporation for export on or before next Aug. 15 exceeds 7 million bales. This makes it virtually certain that exports for the current season will equal the 6½ million bales estimated by the U. S. Department of Agriculture last October. The season ends July 31.

Exports of U. S. cotton for the week ended Tuesday were estimated by the New York Cotton Exchange Service Bureau at 248,000 bales, vs. 203,000 the previous week and only 74,000 in the like week last year. For the current season through March 26, exports were estimated at 5,516,000 bales against 1,100,000 at approximately the same time last season.

Wheat Futures Close Week Up

CHICAGO, March 30 (AP) —Wheat futures got a fair rally going this week on the Board of Trade for the first time in nearly a month.

Only the May contract showed substantial gain for the week, but strength in the May delivery helped the new crop contracts also. Soybeans also showed good gains, and corn, oats and rye mostly were somewhat higher.

Wheat closed the week 2¾ higher to ⅝ lower than a week ago.

Senate Rejects Efforts To Slash Depletion Rates

By CHARLES HASLET

WASHINGTON, March 30 (AP)—The Senate rejected this week two attempts to reduce the 27½ per cent depletion allowance now granted oil and gas producers for income tax purposes.

Sen. Williams (R-Del) offered an amendment to reduce the allowance to 20 per cent. It was turned down on a voice vote.

Sen. Douglas (D-Ill) then proposed an amendment to cut the rate to 21 per cent on taxable incomes from one million to five million dollars a year and to 15 per cent on taxable incomes exceeding five million a year. His proposal would not have changed the 27½ per cent allowance on incomes under one million.

The Douglas amendment also was rejected on a voice vote. Unsuccessful requests were made for roll call votes on each amendment.

The amendments were offered to a bill, later passed, extending the present corporation income and excise tax rates.

Williams, who tried last year to cut the 27½ per cent rate to 15 per cent, told the Senate that the present depleton allowance "obviously gives special tax advantages to this industry (oil and gas) above that enjoyed by other taxpayers."

He said that under the present formula "the oil companies can each year deduct from their net income, before the computation of taxes, an amount equal to 27½ per cent of the gross sales from the wells, subject only to the 50 per cent clause. . . ."

The deduction, he said, is computed as a percentage of income from each property "without regard to the amount of the investment or to the amount of prior depletion deductions; provided, however, that the deduction does not exceed 50 per cent of the net income from the property."

Williams said the staff of the joint committee on internal revenue taxation had advised him that if the depletion rate were reduced from 27½ to 20 per cent, the gain in revenue would be between 200 and 250 million dollars a year.

This increase in revenue, Williams told the Senate, would provide an amount sufficient to give small business a 20 per cent tax reduction on incomes below 25,000.

Douglas said he believed the "small driller is entitled to a larger depletion allowance than is the big driller, because he does not have an adequate distribution of risk within his own drillings."

Sen. Carson (R-Kan) said in reply that he doubted Williams "has given any consideration to how many millions of dollars the Treasury would lose if we reduced the depletion rate and thereby stopped exploration for oil in this country."

"We can readily see what would happen in the Midcontinent Field where exploration costs are increasing because it is necessary to go deeper and deeper for oil," Carlson said. "I should like to say also that if ever the 27 per cent depletion rate for oil was needed, it is needed now."

He said members of Congress who have sought to reduce the rate "have no knowledge of the risk involved in the petroleum producing industry or the tremendous amounts of capital necessary to keep this country not only self-sufficient in oil but also with a ready reserve in times of emergency."

Sen. Barrett (R-Wyo) said the allowance is necessary for a strong industry.

Sen. Monroney (D-Okla) declared the depletion allowance saves natural resources which otherwise would never be developed.

Sen. Anderson (D-NM) suggested the question should "be dealt with in a special hearing and I think in prolonged hearings."

FPC Changes Rules On Gas Rate Filings

By HARRY WILSON SHARPE

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP) — Beginning Monday independent natural gas producers must file three copies of rate schedule changes with the Federal Power Commission instead of two.

They almost must file three copies of notices of cancellation or termination of service.

In each instance the third copy "will be open to public inspection." The commission hopes the rule, an amendment to its natural Gas Act regulations, will correct a situation in which pipelines and distributing companies have had difficulty checking up on applications for rate changes.

Open To All

Heretofore, under the two-copy rule, the two copies usually were pre-empted — and necessairly — by the commissioners and their staffs. This has forced distributors and other interested parties to get information of urgent importance on a catch-as-catch-can basis.

"These filings," the commission said, "are frequently of interest and concern to others than the customers directly affected, and the additional copy will be more quickly available for public inspection."

A spokesman said a special file will be set up "open to all comers."

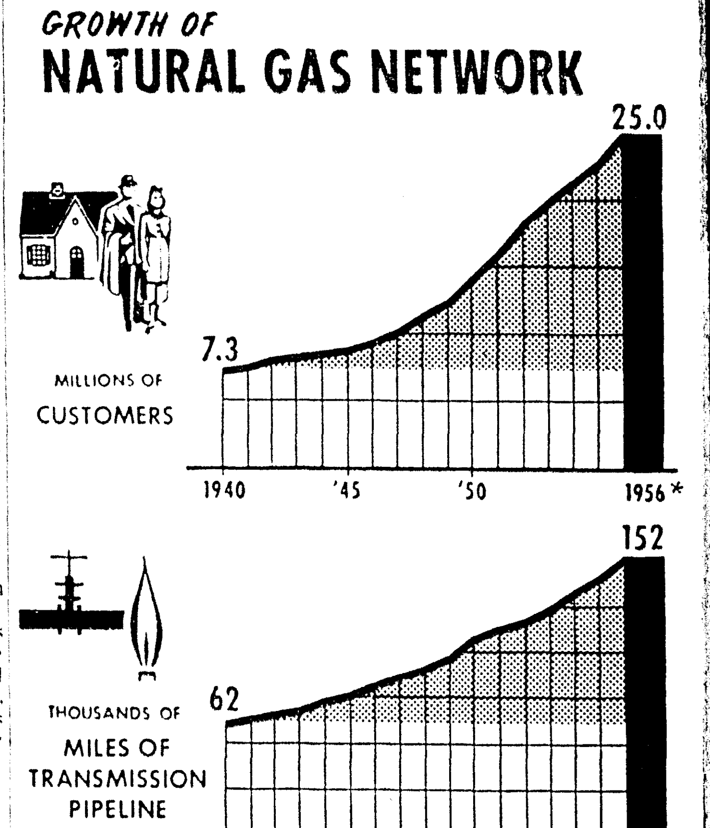
Neccessary Procedure

As many as 50 companies are sometimes affected by a change in rate schedules or notices of abandonment of service. The extra copies will keep them abreast of such changes and take a big work load off the commission staff.

The commission adopted the regulation "as a necessary procedure not requiring public hearings. It reads:

"Three copies of any rate schedule, or part thereof, and material required to be filed herewith, and notices of cancellation or termination submitted for filing, must be supplied to the commission."

The rule is in line with the commission's continuing drive to streamline its operations and speed up consideration of a big backlog of cases. In the past is has simplified other rules and eliminated a lot of paper work.



GAS NETWORK GROWING

The nation's expanding natural gas pipeline system added two million customers and 10,000 miles of transmission facilities in 1956. Customers have more than tripled since 1940 and service has been extended to 13 more states to bring the total to 46 states. Meanwhile, proved gas reserves reached an all-time high of 223.7 trillion cubic feet at the beginning of 1956.

Offshore Oil Glamour Wanes As Costs Rise

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, March 30 (AP)— An oil executive says the glamour is wearing off in Gulf of Mexico offshore explorations despite an impressive record.

"Back breaking work to make back breaking investments pay off is the order of the day," said Ira Cram, senior vice president of Continental Oil Co.

Cram said a far higher percentage of the Louisiana offshore discoveries are giant fields or probably will turn out to be but that payout time is far down the road.

"All operators, whether pioneers or newcomers, whether lucky, unlucky but hopeful, or just hopeful, know they have at least one problem in common—doing everything more cheaply," he said.

Cram said in a speech the industry is running very fast offshore despite taking one of its longest gambles.

He said Middle East oil reserves still dwarf those found so far off the Louisiana and Texas coasts but that offshore discoveries in the future probably will aid greatly in balancing supply wth domestc demand.

"The history of discovery in this country reveals that periodically a new area or deeper horizon providing a number of major fields had to be opened up to supply the demand," he said.

Cram said an industry investment of at least $1,700,00,000 so far has realized a return of only about 250 million dollars but that 35 oil fields and 47 gas fields have been discovered offshore. Of the 82 fields, 74 are off the Louisiana coast.

The federal government's top economic planners were described as worrying less about inflation—for the time being, at least—and more about deflation. There were hints that the pinch on credit had eased a little here and there.

Best news was the U.S. Labor Department's forecast of a spring upsurge in employment in most of the United states.

Contruction, especially road building was expected to set the pace. F. W. Dodge Corp. reported a decline in contracts awarded in February for private construction but a strong pickup in public works awards.

The Labor Department said plenty of jobs would be opening up, too, in the trade and service industries, food processing, and lumber.

Other good spots to look for a job: aircraft, shipbuilding, chemicals, fabricated metals.

The department said engineers and scientists are still wanted by industry as badly as ever. Also in demand in many parts of the country: skilled metal workers, draftsmen, mechanics, top-grade typists and stenographers, secretaries, nurses.

Seasonal declines in employment were envisioned, however, in such industries as textiles, apparel, shoes, tobacco.

Meanwhile the nation's biggest railroad announced plans for laying off 1,600 maintenance workers Monday.

A. J. Greenough, the Pennsylvania Railroad's vice president of transportation and maintenance, said business has fallen off and the outlook for improvement is "uncertain." Said he: "With the rail.oads strictly regulated, the margin between income and outgo is so small that when business drops off we are compelled to move quickly to cut expenses, a large part of which is wages."

In another cost cutting move, Anaconda Co., took steps to halt production at two high cost mines in Montana "until copper prices will again be attractive." Amerotron Corp., a leading manufacturer of synthetic textile fabrices, said it would hold production to a five-day week for the rest of the year. The textile industry normally operates on a six-day basis.

Biggest question mark on the business scene this week hovered over the motor capital of Detroit.

Although auto sales executives were bursting with optimism, sales charts told a somewhat different story — a baffling decline for the first three weeks of March.

From March 1 through March 20, dealers sold 329,000 new cars. That's 8 per cent less than they sold in the first 20 days of March last year, when sales were supposedly in the doldrums.

This week Chevrolet, Buick and Mercury trimmed production sharply while fast-stepping Ford and Plymouth cut down on overtime. The industry's output—about 131,000 cars—was only a shade higher than in the like week of 1956 when many auto workers took a day off on Good Friday.

Business in many of the nation's department stores showed a rising trend this week as shoppers stepped up their Easter buying. Easter falls on April 21 this year, three weeks later than in 1956. Merchants hope the later date will boos' sales.

Wit'i home building down sharply from last year, Uncle Sam took steps this week to spur sales of houses under the FHA mortgage program. If you finance the purchase of a home with an FHA-insured mortgage, you won't need quite as much cash for the down payment. What you "save" on the down payment has to be added to the mortgage, of course, and paid back—with interest—later. But the government's action here may be an important step toward loosening the strings on credit.

Briefly over the business scene: Sears, Roebuck reported record sales and profits for 1956, although profits did not climb as fast as sales. Emil Schram, former president of the New York Stock Exchange was elected chairman of Butler Bros., midwest retail chain. Herman D. Ruhm resigned as president of Burlington Industries Inc. Castro Convertible Corp. New York furniture manufacturer, introduced a new product—a sofa covered with mink.

GM MEDIUMS LAG; FORD AHEAD

Plymouth Pushes Chrysler's Drive; Sales Up 15 Per Cent

By JIM KLOCKENKEMPER

DETROIT, March 30 (UP)—Auto production forecasts for the second quarter of 1957 show Chrysler will increase its comeback while the surprising slide of General Motors may continue.

General Motors division executives, like politicians, have been touring the grass roots with predictions of a rosy future. But these trips, and the offering of several dealer and salesmen contests by the factory, indicate the nation's No. 1 automaker is concerned about sales declines.

Future production schedules throughout the industry show none of the automakers were quite as confident of the "big spring market" as they were a month ago.

FORD, CHRYSLER UP

Ward's Automotive Reports said the industry a few weeks ago planned to build 1,729,000 cars in April-June. Now this has gone down to 1,600,000, Ward's said.

But the 1.6 million total would still be 10.3 per cent above the 1,450,000 units built in the second quarter of 1955.

The plans show Ford, Chrysler and even the smaller auto makers will build bigger percentages of cars in the next three months. General Motors still will build 44.3 per cent, by far the biggest share, but this will be 8.3 per cent less than the GM share in the same quarter of 1956.

FORD OVER CHEVROLET

Chrysler, which built an estimated 20.5 per cent in the first three months, plans to build 22.2 per cent in the next three months. Ford expects to up its share from 30.4 to 30.9 per cent. The smaller manufacturers — Studebaker-Packard and American Motors—would increase from 2.5 to 2.6 per cent.

The latest sales picture—or new car registration—show Ford with a solid lead over Chevrolet in a race for the number one spot. But the GM medium priced lines—which were completely restyled for 1957 models—have taken a worst pasting.

Plymouth, last year fighting to stay ahead of Oldsmobile for fourth place, has moved into third ahead of Buick for the first time since 1953. But while Plymouth sales are up from 1956 by nearly 15 per cent, none of the three medium-price GM lines has been able to boost sales.

IMPERIAL PICKED

Only Cadillac, among the General Motors cars, has increased its sales in 1957 over 1956.

All Chrysler Corp car sales are up, and although the Chrysler line shows a bare increase, the graduation of the Imperial—probably the "hottest" selling auto item in the country—into a full-fledged line of its own, more than offsets this.

The Imperial, with curved side windows and a softly-sloping rear deck, so far has the best public styling acceptance for the year. Nearly three times as many have been sold so far this year than were sold in 1956.

Chairman Rubel Phillips of the host Mississippi Public Service Commission, said states to be represented are Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia.

Problems of telephone regulation will be discussed by Cayce L. Pentecost of Tennessee. Chairman Matt L. McWhorter of the Georgia Public Service Commission, and Commissioner John J. McKeithen of the Louisiana Public Service Commission.

Other speakers on telephone issues will be E. C. O'Rear, chief engineer for the Kentucky Public Service Commission; James H. Brown, chief accountant for the Virginia State Corporation Commission; A. L. Hutchinson executive assistant for the Kentucky Public Service Commission; and A. L. Mac of the Federal Communications Commission.

Offshore Oil Glamour Wanes As Costs Rise

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, March 30 (AP)— An oil executive says the glamour is wearing off in Gulf of Mexico offshore explorations despite an impressive record.

"Back breaking work to make back breaking investments pay off is the order of the day," said Ira Cram, senior vice president of Continental Oil Co.

Cram said a far higher percentage of the Louisiana offshore discoveries are giant fields or probably will turn out to be but that payout time is far down the road.

"All operators, whether pioneers or newcomers, whether lucky, unlucky but hopeful, or just hopeful, know they have at least one problem in common—doing everything more cheaply," he said.

Cram said in a speech the industry is running very fast offshore despite taking one of its longest gambles.

He said Middle East oil reserves still dwarf those found so far off the Louisiana and Texas coasts but that offshore discoveries in the future probably will aid greatly in balancing supply wth domestc demand.

"The history of discovery in this country reveals that periodically a new area or deeper horizon providing a number of major fields had to be opened up to supply the demand," he said.

Cram said an industry investment of at least $1,700,00,000 so far has realized a return of only about 250 million dollars but that 35 oil fields and 47 gas fields have been discovered offshore. Of the 82 fields, 74 are off the Louisiana coast.

STOCK AVERAGE CLIMBS

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks climbed for the fifth week in a row when it closed Friday at 174.2 from 173.9 a week earlier. For the second straight week the commodity index declined, closing at 175.7, the lowest point since July 13. A week ago the index was 176.8. Industrials showed substantial losses. Technical Rallies Perk Up Markets

NEW YORK, March 30 (AP)—The stock market almost woke up this week. It was a near miss.

A series of technical rallies in mid-week perked up volume and it looked as if the market had a chance of breaking out of the narrow trading range which has confined it for a month and a half.

But the week ended with profit-taking and a falling off in volume, leaving things just about where they have been—sluggish.

For the fifth straight week, however, there was a very slight rise in overall prices.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 30 cents to $174.20.

Considering how far the market has fallen from its all-time bull market high of last April and even from its intermediate highs of the yearend, however, such movements are mere flutters.

Nevertheless, the market did reach to challenge the recavery high of early March. This was the point where prices were boosted by the Israeli withdrawal from the Gaza and Aqaba areas after steadily declining prices earlier in the year.

The market attained this small pinnacle on Thursday. It did it on vastly increased volume compared with the laggard sessions which have prevailed lately. The Thursday volume of 1,930,000 shares was the biggest since Feb. 15. Since it came on a rise in prices, and since there had been a slight day-by-day boost in volume and prices in prior sessions it looked as if this time perhaps the market might pierce the upside barrer.

For the first hour yesterday, when trading was even brisker than in the first hour Thursday, and prices were rising generally, it seemed as if the challenge had been successful.

But soon became apparent that there was plenty of stock for sale at that level. Prices faltered, bids dried up and the market declined in slow trading. Profit-taking had skimmed what there was of the cream.

The five most active issues on the New York Stock Exchange this week were:

Bethlehem Steel, up ¾ at 42¾ on 165,800 shares; General Motors, off ½ at 38⅞; Lukens Steel, up 4⅛ at 62⅞; U.S. Hoffman Machinery, off ⅛ at 10⅜ and Shell Transport & Trading, up ½ at 23¾.

Both corporate and U. S. government bonds drifted lower this week in rather desultory trading in the bond market.

Cotton Future Prices Firm During Week

NEW YORK, March 30 (AP) — Cotton futures prices were firm this week. After some irregularity, all deliveries finished on the upside with the distant months scoring the largest gains.

Active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange closed at prices ranging from 5 cents to $1.80 a bale higher than at the end of the week before.

The new crop months were aided by expectations that the 1957 loan rate would be above the previously announced guaranteed minimum for the coming season. Other bullish factors included the high level of sales of government-held cotton under the surplus export program and a substantial rise in acreage pledged to the soil bank.

Considerable interest was aroused in trade quarters by the large volume of government-held cotton sold for export against bids opened at the latest auction March 19. At this sale, the government disposed of 820,000 bales of 1955 and prior crop upland cotton for export on or before next Aug. 15, and an additional 238,000 bales for export on or after Aug. 16.

The amount which has to be-ported by Aug. 15 was considerably larger than many in the trade had looked for, while the volume of cotton sold for export after that date was below expectations, it was pointed out. Average price of cotton sold for export before mid-August was 27.42 cents a pound, middling one-inch basis, while cotton earmarked for export after that date commanded an average price of 27.47 cents a pound, middling one-inch basis.

It was noted that the total amount of cotton sold by the Commodity Credit Corporation for export on or before next Aug. 15 exceeds 7 million bales. This makes it virtually certain that exports for the current season will equal the 6½ million bales estimated by the U. S. Department of Agriculture last October. The season ends July 31.

Exports of U. S. cotton for the week ended Tuesday were estimated by the New York Cotton Exchange Service Bureau at 248,000 bales, vs. 203,000 the previous week and only 74,000 in the like week last year. For the current season through March 26, exports, were estimated at 5,516,000 bales against 1,100,000 at approximately the same time last season.

Magnolia Unveils Octane Increase

To meet the anti-knock requirements of today's high compression engines, George J. Gregor, vice-president in charge of marketing of Magnolia Petroleum Company, Saturday announced another boost in octane in his company's premium grade gasoline. Magnolia is the Southwestern affiliate of Socony Mobil Oil Company, Inc.

In announcing another octane boost in Magnolia's premium gasoline, Gregor stated that Magnolia would continue to market only two grades of gasoline. He explained that "octane is the ability of a gasoline to perform without knocks or pings in an engine. With another big octane boost plus chemical additives to help high compression engines utilize this anti-knock power, our new premium gasoline fully meets the needs of the highest compression engines in the '57 cars."

Wheat Futures Close Week Up

CHICAGO, March 30 (AP) —Wheat futures got a fair rally going this week on the Board of Trade for the first time in nearly a month.

Only the May contract showed substantial gain for the week, but strength in the May delivery helped the new crop contracts also. Soybeans also showed good gains, and corn, oats and rye mostly were somewhat higher.

Wheat closed the week 2¾ higher to ⅝ lower than a week ago.

Senate Rejects Efforts To Slash Depletion Rates

By CHARLES HASLET

WASHINGTON, March 30 (AP)—The Senate rejected this week two attempts to reduce the 27½ per cent depletion allowance now granted oil and gas producers for income tax purposes.

Sen. Williams (R-Del) offered an amendment to reduce the allowance to 20 per cent. It was turned down on a voice vote.

Sen. Douglas (D-Ill) then proposed an amendment to cut the rate to 21 per cent on taxable incomes from one million to five million dollars a year and to 15 per cent on taxable incomes exceeding five million a year. His proposal would not have changed the 27½ per cent allowance on incomes under one million.

The Douglas amendment also was rejected on a voice vote. Unsuccessful requests were made for roll call votes on each amendment.

The amendments were offered to a bill, later passed, extending the present corporation income and excise tax rates.

Williams, who tried last year to cut the 27½ per cent rate to 15 per cent, told the Senate that the present depleton allowance "obviously gives special tax advantages to this industry (oil and gas) above that enjoyed by other taxpayers."

He said that under the present formula "the oil companies can each year deduct from their net income, before the computation of taxes, an amount equal to 27½ per cent of the gross sales from the wells, subject only to the 50 per cent clause. . . ."

The deduction, he said, is computed as a percentage of income from each property "without regard to the amount of the investment or to the amount of prior depletion deductions; provided, however, that the deduction does not exceed 50 per cent of the net income from the property."

Williams said the staff of the joint committee on internal revenue taxation had advised him that if the depletion rate were reduced from 27½ to 20 per cent, the gain in revenue would be between 200 and 250 million dollars a year.

This increase in revenue, Williams told the Senate, would provide an amount sufficient to give small business a 20 per cent tax reduction on incomes below 25,000.

Douglas said he believed the "small driller is entitled to a larger depletion allowance than is the big driller, because he does not have an adequate distribution of risk within his own drillings."

Sen. Carson (R-Kan) said in reply that he doubted Williams "has given any consideration to how many millions of dollars the Treasury would lose if we reduced the depletion rate and thereby stopped exploration for oil in this country."

"We can readily see what would happen in the Midcontinent Field where exploration costs are increasing because it is necessary to go deeper and deeper for oil," Carlson said. "I should like to say also that if ever the 27 per cent depletion rate for oil was needed, it is needed now."

He said members of Congress who have sought to reduce the rate "have no knowledge of the risk involved in the petroleum producing industry or the tremendous amounts of capital necessary to keep this country not only self-sufficient in oil but also with a ready reserve in times of emergency."

Sen. Barrett (R-Wyo) said the allowance is necessary for a strong industry.

Sen. Monroney (D-Okla) declared the depletion allowance saves natural resources which otherwise would never be developed.

Sen. Anderson (D-NM) suggested the question should "be dealt with in a special hearing and I think in prolonged hearings."

FPC Changes Rules On Gas Rate Filings

By HARRY WILSON SHARPE

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP) — Beginning Monday independent natural gas producers must file three copies of rate schedule changes with the Federal Power Commission instead of two.

They almost must file three copies of notices of cancellation or termination of service.

In each instance the third copy "will be open to public inspection." The commission hopes the rule, an amendment to its natural Gas Act regulations, will correct a situation in which pipelines and distributing companies have had difficulty checking up on applications for rate changes.

Open To All

Heretofore, under the two-copy rule, the two copies usually were pre-empted — and necessarily — by the commissioners and their staffs. This has forced distributors and other interested parties to get information of urgent importance on a catch-as-catch-can basis.

"These filings," the commission said, "are frequently of interest and concern to others than the customers directly affected, and the additional copy will be more quickly available for public inspection."

A spokesman said a special file will be set up "open to all comers."

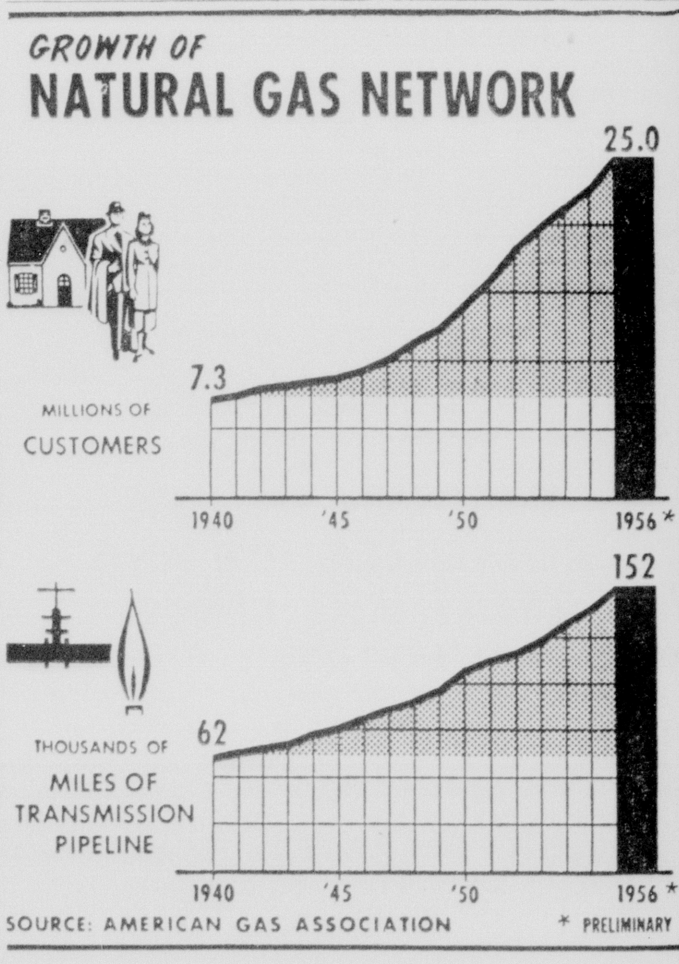
Neccessary Procedure

As many as 50 companies are sometimes affected by a change in rate schedules or notices of abandonment of service. The extra copies will keep them abreast of such changes and take a big work load off the commission staff.

The commission adopted the regulation "as a necessary procedure not requiring public hearings. It reads:

"Three copies of any rate schedule, or part thereof, and material required to be filed herewith, and notices of cancellation or termination submitted for filing, must be supplied to the commission."

The rule is in line with the commission's continuing drive to streamline its operations and speed up consideration of a big backlog of cases. In the past is has simplified other rules and eliminated a lot of paper work.



GAS NETWORK GROWING

The nation's expanding natural gas pipeline system added two million customers and 10,000 miles of transmission facilities in 1956. Customers have more than tripled since 1940 and service has been extended to 13 more states to bring the total to 46 states. Meanwhile, proved gas reserves reached an all-time high of 223.7 trillion cubic feet at the beginning of 1956.

Palmer Forges Azalea Lead

BOWLING
With Tommy Higgins

The following poem was submitted by Lorraine McNabb, who bowls in the Tuesday night Ladies League:

Another year has come and gone
Another season's past.
It seem I've only just begun
The weeks have gone so fast

Each Tuesday night throughout the year
With gleeful anticipation,
I rush down to the bowling lanes
To try my concentration.

I get my ball, I chalk my hand
And try hard not to dally,
I'm always sure I'll get 'em
As I fire it down the alley.

Now in this game of bowling
300 is our aim,
There aren't many bowlers
Who've reached that score and fame

Everyone strives for 200 games
Its like reaching for a star,
Just when I think I've got mine
I up and miss a spar.

A 175's not bad I say
So I roll it down the lane,
It sure looks good, a perfect hit,
Oh! Gosh - A split again.

So I say, well a 150's fine
Its above my average — so what?
I guess my team will understand
I've given them all I've got.

So I'll settle for a 125 I guess
But is sure is a heck of a note,
That I can't even bowl a blind
It really gets my goat

I'll hang my head and say a prayer
To make this next throw it,
I've got to bowl a 700
And it'll take a perfect hit.

I get my spot, I take good aim
I throw, I really rock it,
I stand and watch the ball
As it plows into the pocket.

When all the clutter clears
And I can stand to look,
I gaze upon the ten pin
And know that I've been "took."

So be satisfied girls
With any pins that should fall.
And I'll be down this summer
To practice for next fall.

Finsterwald Tumbles Two Blows Behind

By DON MARTIN

WILMINGTON, N.C., March 30 (UP)—Arnold Palmer, former National Amateur champion from Latrobe, Pa., the second leading money winner on the winter golf circuit, fired a two-under par 70 Saturday to take a two-stroke lead in the $12,500 Azalea Open with a three-round total of 207.

Palmer, a former Wake Forest College star passed halfway leader Dow Finsterwald of Jupiter, Fla., when the Floridian banged a three-wood out of bounds on the 11th hole to take a double-bogey six. He had a 209 after Saturday's round.

Palmer chopped two strokes off par on the front nine. He shot five straight pars on the back nine before hitting a tremendous two-iron to the flag on the long par five 15th. He holed the putt for an eagle three. This fine shooting put him four under regulation and four shots ahead of Finsterwald who was playing in the last threesome behind him.

But Palmer's putting was unsteady on the final greens. He knocked a 12-footer six feet past the pin on 17 and missed it coming back. He three-putted the 18th when his approach shot left him just below a steep elevation on the green.

Fred Wampler of Indianapolis, Ind., who eagled the long par five sixth with two booming woods and a 12-foot putt, took third place all for himself at 211 with a one-under 71 Saturday. He birdied the second but bogeyed the next two, then came the eagle on the sixth and pars to the turn for a one-under 35 on the front. He shot even par on the back nine.

Paul O'Leary, the burley pro from Bismarck, N.D., also nicked par by a stroke for fourth place at 212. Then came Bob Rosburg of San Francisco, and Shelley Mayfield of Westbury, N.Y., who shot the best round Saturday with a three - under 69, with 214's.

Ed Furgol of St. Andrews, Ill., playing despite a bone chip in his right elbow, shot a six-over-42 on the front side and came home in par for a 78 which zoomed him to 219 — way above the leaders.

Palmer, who consistently boomed his tee shots more than 250 yards, was depressed when he walked off the 18th green despite his lead.

"I just threw that eagle away with those two three-putters," he said.

Sunday's final probably will see Palmer and Finsterwald dueling for the $1,700 first money.

Finsterwald started the third round with a one-stroke lead over Palmer. Finsterwald birdied the second with a 10-footer and rollel in an 18-footer on the fourth for another birdie. He flubbed a five-footer or the uphill seventh and closed with two pars to make turn one over par.

He parred the short 10th and then came the disastrous 11th when he pulled his three - wood drive out-of-bounds into the back yard of a home enroaching upon the Cape Fear country club.

Finsterwald parred the 12th and birdied the 13th with another 18-footer. He made regulation on the next three holes but his second shot on 17 was bunkered and he took a bogey wren his explosion was long. He parred the 18th.

Peele Boomed As Growing Heavyweight Challenger

By ED TUNSTALL

NEW ORLEANS, March 30 (AP)—Few fight fans across the nation have heard of him, but it's not stretching the imagination to envision slugging Crowe Peele as the heavyweight very likely to succeed.

The 187-pound former NCAA heavyweight champion from Louisiana State University faces the stiffest test of his budding career Monday night against seasoned Joey Rowan of Philadelphia in a 10-rounder.

Peele has done all asked of him so far, and has even gone beyond expectations with 12 knockouts in 13 professional outings. But he's yet to meet a fighter with Rowan's ability and the outlook may be more clearly defined after Monday's meeting.

The sponsoring Louisiana Boxing Club has high hopes for the bout with matchmaker Bonny Geigerman predicting a gate of $5,000 or more with most of the fans coming in from Baton Rouge, where Peele ruled as kingpin on the always-talented LSU team.

J. T. Owen, promoter for the LBC and Peele's tutor in his collegiate days, has higher hopes for Peele and looks for the heavy-armed puncher to make up quickly.

Peele buzzed through his amateur period and lost only two fights, both on split decisions, one to Flody Patterson, who needs no introduction, and the other to Harold Carter, the Linden, N. J., belter now rated No.3 contender for Patterson's heavyweight crown.

Rowan boasts 29 victories in his 41 pro bouts, but the Pennsylvanian has taken on some of the top heavy men in the business. He lost two close ones to Willie Pastrano of New Orleans, ranked fourth in the heavyweight division, and dropped other nods to Carter, Johnny Holman and Chuck Sueiser, the latter chief contender for the light heavyweight title.

The bout may or may not break Peele, and a victory won't jump Rowan up in the rankings. But it ranks as the severest test for Peele, who's had his eye on Patterson ever since losing that split decision.

$100,000 Hole For Columbus' Homer Hitters

COLUMBUS, Ohio, March 30 (UP)—International League batters at Columbus Jets stadium will have a $100,000 "incentive" to smack home runs this season.

Some hard swinger may be able to match Ted Williams' annual salary with one solid 396-foot blast to a certain spot in right center field.

The Jets have constructed a "target" at the 396-foot mark about 10 feet from the ground. In the center is a hole one-half inch in diameer larger than an official league baseball.

The Buckeye Union Casualty Co. will pay $100,000 in cash to any player on either team succeeding in hitting a pitched baseball through the hole while taking part in a regulation International League game.

Since the hole is slightly higher than the fence, ground rules will stipulate the drive to be a heme run.

There is a cage behind the target with a trap to prevent the ball from bouncing out once hit through the hole.

"An offer will check the cage before the game to make sure no baseball has been through the hole prior to the game," the Jets said.

The team management said a local auto dealer will pay $100 to any member of the Jets' team who hits any part of the 10-foot target during a league game.

Hawks Beat Celts In Two Overtimes

BOSTON, March 30 (UP) — Old pro Jack Coleman sank an off-balance basket with 28 seconds remaining in the second overtime period to give the St. Louis Hawks a 125-123 victory over the Boston Celtics Saturday in the opening game of the National Basketball Association championship pla-effs. offs.

After the ex-Rochester player sank his going - away two-hander from 20 feet out, the two teams fought nervously and carelessly for possession of the ball. St. Louis missed four chances from the foul line to blow an opportunity of clinching it, while Boston lost control on an out - of-bounds in the waning seconds to finish off its chance of tying the game again.

Scoring ace Bob Pettit shared the hero's role with Coleman, the brilliant St. Louis forward tallying 10 points in the two five-minute extra sessions to keep pulling the Hawks out of hot hot water.

It was a personal duel between Pettit, who was high man in the game with 37 points, and Boston rookie Tommy Heinsohn who ended up with 26 points, 10 of them during the overtime periods. Sharman led the Boston scorers with 36 points.

A crowd of 5,976 and a National television audience witnessed the exciting first game of the best-of-seven series. The two teams play here again Sunday afternoon.

Delicate Nips Third Brother For Nose Win

BOWIE, Md., March 30 (UP)—Mrs. Jan Burke's Dedicate, beaten a nose by Christopher T. Chenery's third brother in the Bowie Handicap, turned the tables Saturday in winning the $100,000 added John B. Campbell Memorial Handicap before a closing day crowd of 21,550 at Bowie.

The five-year-old son of Princequillo, with Bill Boland up, outlegged Third Brother to the fire in the mile and one-sixteenth even to win by a head as the Chenery Colt's rally missed. Outsider Akbar Khan from the Cockfield Stable was third in the field of eight handicap stars.

With less than a sixteenth of a mile to go Dedicate, under top weight of 124 pounds, held a length lead while Third Brother trailed in sixth position. Angel Valenzuela, who booted Third Brother to a come from behind triumph over Dedicate in the Bewie, tried the same tactics Saturday and they just missed.

Dedicate, a three-time stakes winner last year, hustled the distance in 1:44 3-5 and returned $4.20, $2.80 and $2.40 as the 11 to 10 favorite. Third Brother paid $4.00 and $3.60, while Akbar Khan returned $7.40.

Palmer Forges Azalea Lead

BOWLING With Tommy Higgins

The following poem was submitted by Lorraine McNabb, who bowls in the Tuesday night Ladies League:

Another year has come and gone
Another season's past.
It seem I've only just begun
The weeks have gone so fast

Each Tuesday night thrughout the year
With gleeful anticipation,
I rush down to the bowling lanes
To try my concentration.

I get my ball, I chalk my hand
And try hard not to dally,
I'm always sure I'll get 'em
As I fire it down the alley.

Now in this game of bowling
300 is our aim,
There aren't many bowlers
Who've reached that score and fame

Everyone strives for 200 games
Its like reaching for a star,
Just when I think I've got mine
I up and miss a spar.

A 175's not bad I say
So I roll it down the lane,
It sure looks good, a perfect hit,
Oh! Gosh - A split again.

So I say, well a 150's fine
Its above my average — so what?
I guess my team will understand
I've given them all I've got.

So I'll settle for a 125 I guess
But is sure is a heck of a note,
That I can't even bowl a blind
It really gets my goat

I'll hang my head and say a prayer
To make this next throw it,
I've got to bowl a 700
And it'll take a perfect hit.

I get my spot, I take good aim
I throw, I really rock it,
I stand and watch the ball
As it plows into the pocket.

When all the clutter clears
And I can stand to look,
I gaze upon the ten pin
And know that I've been "took."

So be satisfied girls
With any pins that should fall,
And I'll be down this summer
To practice for next fall.

A GLANCE AT THE LEAGUES

INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE—Slage-Johnson is leading by 2½ points over the L&B Athletic Association. CSC Peak is four points from the top spot in third place.

INDUSTRIAL EQUIPMENT LEAGUE—Southwest Gas, captained by Art Smith who by the way is leading the league in average, has bowled the highest game—a 257 and holds high series with 663, is way out in front by 16 points. Bucyrus Erie holds second with a two-point lead over Southern Equipment.

BOWLING CHATTER

Schlitz Beer, captained by T. J. Canizaro, came up with the season's highest single team game, turning in a big 1147 score. Their 3116 team series, bowled the same night, tied Henderson Curb Market for high team series in the Pioneer League.

The News-Star—World girls' bowling team moved into fifth place in the annual state women's tourney being held in Monroe. Not a single member of the team had bowled before this season in league play. This is a fine achievement. Congratulations!

Finsterwald Tumbles Two Blows Behind

By DON MARTIN

WILMINGTON, N.C., March 30 (UP)—Arnold Palmer, former National Amateur champion from Latrobe, Pa., the second leading money winner on the winter golf circuit, fired a two-under par 70 Saturday to take a two-stroke lead in the $12,500 Azalea Open with a three-round total of 207.

Palmer, a former Wake Forest College star passed halfway leader Dow Finsterwald of Jupiter, Fla., when the Floridian banged a three-wood out of bounds on the 11th hole to take a double-bogey six. He had a 209 after Saturday's round.

Palmer chopped two strokes off par on the front nine. He shot five straight pars on the back nine before hitting a tremendous two-iron to the flag on the long par five 15th. He holed the putt for an eagle three. This fine shooting put him four under regulation and four shots ahead of Finsterwald who was playing in the last threesome behind him.

But Palmer's putting was unsteady on the final greens. He knocked a 12-footer six feet past the pin on 17 and missed it coming back. He three-putted the 18th when his approach shot left him just below a steep elevation on the green.

Fred Wampler of Indianapolis, Ind., who eagled the long par five sixth with two booming woods and a 12-foot putt, took third place all for himself at 211 with a one-under 71 Saturday. He birdied the second but bogeyed the next two, then came the eagle on the sixth and pars to the turn for a one-under 35 on the front. He shot even par on the back nine.

Paul O'Leary, the burley pro from Bismarck, N.D., also nicked par by a stroke for fourth place at 212. Then came Bob Rosburg of San Francisco, and Shelley Mayfield of Westbury, N.Y., who shot the best round Saturday with a three - under 69, with 214's.

Ed Furgol of St. Andrews, Ill., playing despite a bone chip in his right elbow, shot a six-over-42 on the front side and came home in par for a 78 which zoomed him to 219 — way above the leaders.

Palmer, who consistently boomed his tee shots more than 250 yards, was depressed when he walked off the 18th green despite his lead.

"I just threw that eagle away with those two three-putters," he said.

Sunday's final probably will see Palmer and Finsterwald dueling for the $1,700 first money.

Finsterwald started the third round with a one-stroke lead over Palmer. Finsterwald birdied the second with a 10-footer and rollel in an 18-footer on the fourth for another birdie. He flubbed a five-footer on the uphill seventh and closed with two pars to make turn one over par.

He parred the short 10th and then came the disastrous 11h when he pulled his three - wood drive out-of-bounds into the back yard of a home enroaching upon the Cape Fear country club.

Finsterwald parred the 12th and birdied the 13th with another 18-footer. He made regulation on the next three holes but his second shot on 17 was bunkered and he took a bogey wren his explosion was long. He parred the 18th.

Delicate Nips Third Brother For Nose Win

BOWIE, Md., March 30 (UP)—Mrs. Jan Burke's Dedicate, beaten a nose by Christopher T. Chenery's third brother in the Bowie Handicap, turned the tables Saturday in winning the $100,000 added John B. Campbell Memorial Handicap before a closing day crowd of 21,550 at Bowie.

The five-year-old son of Princequillo, with Bill Boland up, outlegged Third Brother to the fire in the mile and one-sixteenth even to win by a head as the Chenery Colt's rally missed. Outsider Akbar Khan from the Cockfield Stable was third in the field of eight handicap stars.

With less than a sixteenth of a mile to go Dedicate, under top weight of 124 pounds, held a length lead while Third Brother trailed in sixth position. Angel Valenzuela, who booted Third Brother to a come from behind triumph over Dedicate in the Bewie, tried the same tactics Saturday and they just missed.

Dedicate, a three-time stakes winner last year, hustled the distance in 1:44 3-5 and returned $4.20, $2.80 and $2.40 as the 11 to 10 favorite. Third Brother paid $4.00 and $3.60, while Akbar Khan returned $7.40.

Perez Kayoes Dower In 1st To Keep Title

BUENOS AIRES, March 30 (AP)—Pascual Perez retained his world flyweight championship tonight by knocking out challenger Dai Dower of Wales in the first round of their scheduled 15-round title fight. Perez, fighting in his native Argentina, weighed 107, Dower 111½.

The end came with startling suddenness with just two minutes of the round gone. Perez connected with a right cross to the chin and Dower couldn't get up.

The outdoor crowd of about 30,000 had hardly settled in its seats when Perez went to work.

This was the fourth defense of his title—and the easiest—since winning the crown on points from Japan's Yoshio Shirai late in 1954.

When Dower went down, he was absolutely unconscious. He fell on his back and was motionless for a few seconds. Then he regained his senses and tried to get up.

But the referee all the while was tolling the count. Dower still was struggling to get to his feet when the referee intoned:

"Out."

The crowd went wild and Perez leaped in the air in joy. Then he hurried over to aid the stricken challenger.

'DESTRUCTION RA CE'

Stock Cars Offer Top Show

Stock car racers promise their best card of the season at Twin City Speedway this afternoon with about 20 automobiles reported ready to run and the addition of a "destruction race" to the usual card.

Gerald Greenway, speedway manager, last night announced a chemical has been secured to place on the track, thus eliminating all dust, and a week of rainless weather has conditions nearer perfect for this fourth meeting of the spring.

Time trials begin at 1 o'clock. After heat races and the consolation, the feature is due to begin about 3 o'clock. A special event will also run for the four fastest cars.

Greenway said the "destruction race" will complete the day's card with six to eight cars participating. After five laps, the machines will be permitted to travel either direction on the field, at driver's choice, and it will be the purpose of the drivers to wreck all other machines on the speedway. Last car in action after the melee of smashups will be the winner.

The featured race also is being increased to 25 laps, making it a twelve and a half mile race. The heat races and consolation will be for six laps.

Lennon Motor Company of Monroe also is introducing trophies to be presented the feature winner and the special event winner.

Drivers already registered for today are Dewayne Richardson, No. 88; Bob Shoemaker, No. A-1; Don Barron, No. 222; H. L. Hale, No. 3; A. J. Whitlock, No. 2; Joe Mallard, No. 33; Cecil Stevens, No. 99; Royce Whitlock, No. 13; James Futch, No. 4; "Sonny" Brumfield, No. 64; and Charles Ray Anding, No. 9. Greenway said at least four or five more drivers are expected to be ready at race time.

Runner Struck By Batted Ball Saves Indians

By LEMMIE HIGHTOWER

The freakish occurence of a runner being hit by a batted ball saved the day for the Northeast State Indians here yesterday as moundsmen "Bo" Laird and Lyle Dorsey combined their talents in a 3-1 victory over the Louisiana College Wildcats.

The rare incident happened in the ninth inning and came off the bat of 'Cat shortstop "Red" Wells to hit Gene Southern, who was sprinting from first base toward second. Well's rap appeared to be a certain single and with the bases loaded probably would have tied the affair. Instead, Southern was called out on the fair ball rule to mark the final out of the game and give the Indians their third straight win of the season.

Though the visitors outhit the Redskins 6-5, a total of four of their safe blows came in the two final frames when Dorsey pitched himself out of trouble, leaving the bases loaded on both occasions.

Dorsey, seeing his first year with the N.L.S.C. baseballers, replaced Laird on the hill at the start of the sixth inning. He sat the Wildcats down in order for the first stanzas before running into difficulties.

Laird, a veteran of Coach George Luffey's crew, was credited with the victory. Except for wildness in the third frame when he allowed the only Wildcat run to score, the righthanded fireball ace kept the visitors in almost complete check, striking out 11 of the 20 batters he faced while giving up only two hits.

Second baseman Jack Brooks scored the Tribe's initial run of the game in the first inning when he walked, stole second base, advanced to third on a wild pitch, and galloped home on a single by Ike McMullen.

The LC outfit deadlocked the tilt in the top of the third on a run by Donald Sexton, who was running for pitcher Cecil Raggio. Raggio was shaken up when a throw to first by Laird hit him back of the head. Laird had fielded Raggio's punt down the first base line and was attempting to throw the opposing hurler out when the accident occurred. Sexton moved to second when the following batter was hit by a pitched ball, advanced to third on a single by Southern, and was allowed to tally on a wild pitch.

In the bottom of the fourth round Redmen Jim Laudadio, Homer Rouse, and Zeke Estep combined three consecutive singles with a passed ball to produce two runs and send the Maroons-and-Golds out front to stay.

The loss brought the Wildcats' record to one win against two losses. Northeast dropped Delta State of Cleveland, Miss., twice in their only other games of the year.

Bengal Great, Tad Thrash, Directing Alumni Affairs

BATON ROUGE, March 30 (AP)—Louisiana State University today selected a former great athlete, Edsel E. (Tad) Thrash, as the university's first full-time director of alumni affairs.

Techmen Shut Out By Texans, 7 To 0

RUSTON, La., March 30 (Special)—Abilene Christian College gave Louisiana Tech baseballers their first shut out of the season by dumping the Bulldogs, 7-0, here this afternoon.

The Wildcats from Abilene, Tex., made the most of eight hits to put across two runs in the second, three in the fourth, and two more in the ninth. Tech managed to get seven scattered hits, but the Canines could get only one man as far as third the entire afternoon.

Leading the Abilene crew at the bat was third baseman Jim Armstrong who hit a home run and two singles in four times up. His homer came in the fourth with one man on base. Tech's hitting was topped by outfielders Melvin Colvin and Bobby Shores with two singles apiece.

Abilene's hurler, Harold Green, who worked the entire contest and struck out ten Techmen, got credit for the win. Losing pitcher was Tech starter J. W. Mercer.

Abilene Christian meets another Louisiana team Monday afternoon when the 'Cats play Northwestern at Natchitoches. Next battle for Tech will be their Gulf States Conference opener here Friday with Southeastern Louisiana.

BATON ROUGE, La., March 30 (AP)—Mississippi swept a doubleheader from Louisiana State 4-0 and 6-5 today with Buddy Wittichen holding the Tigers to one hit in the opener.

Perez Kayoes Dower In 1st To Keep Title

BUENOS AIRES, March 30 (AP)—Pascual Perez retained his world flyweight championship tonight by knocking out challenger Dai Dower of Wales in the first round of their scheduled 15-round title fight. Perez, fighting in his native Argentina, weighed 107, Dower 111¼.

The end came with startling suddenness with just two minutes of the round gone. Perez connected with a right cross to the chin and Dower couldn't get up.

The outdoor crowd of about 30,000 had hardly settled in its seats when Perez went to work.

This was the fourth defense of his title—and the easiest—since winning the crown on points from Japan's Yoshio Shirai late in 1954

When Dower went down, he was absolutely unconscious. He fell on his back and was motionless for a few seconds. Then he regained his senses and tried to get up.

But the referee all the while was tolling the count. Dower still was struggling to get to his feet when the referee intoned:

"Out."

The crowd went wild and Perez leaped in the air in joy. Then he hurried over to aid the stricken challenger.

'DESTRUCTION RA CE'

Stock Cars Offer Top Show

Stock car racers promise their best card of the season at Twin City Speedway this afternoon with about 20 automobiles reported ready to run and the addition of a "destruction race" to the usual card.

Gerald Greenway, speedway manager, last night announced a chemical has been secured to place on the track, thus eliminating all dust, and a week of rainless weather has conditions nearer perfect for this fourth meeting of the spring.

Time trials begin at 1 o'clock. After heat races and the consolation, the feature is due to begin about 3 o'clock. A special event will also run for the four fastest cars.

Greenway said the "destruction race" will complete the day's card with six to eight cars participating. After five laps, the machines will be permitted to travel either direction on the field, at driver's choice, and it will be the purpose of the drivers to wreck all other machines on the speedway. Last car in action after the melee of smashups will be the winner.

The featured race also is being increased to 25 laps, making it a twelve and a half mile race. The heat races and consolation will be for six laps.

Lennon Motor Company of Monroe also is introducing trophies to be presented the feature winner and the special event winner.

Drivers already registered for today are Dewayne Richardson, No. 88; Bob Shoemaker, No. A-1; Don Barron, No. 222; H. L. Hale No. 3; A. J. Whitlock,No. 2; Joe Mallard, No. 33; Cecil Stevens, No. 99; Royce Whitlock, No. 13; James Futch, No. 4; "Sonny" Brumfield, No. 64; and Charles Ray Anding, No. 9. Greenway said at least four or five more drivers are expected to be ready at race time.

Runner Struck By Batted Ball Saves Indians

By LEMMIE HIGHTOWER

The freakish occurence of a runner being hit by a batted ball saved the day for the Northeast State Indians here yesterday as moundsmen "Bo" Laird and Lyle Dorsey combined their talents in a 3-1 victory over the Louisiana College Wildcats.

The rare incident happened in the ninth inning and came off the bat of 'Cat shortstop "Red" Wells to hit Gene Southern, who was sprinting from first base toward second. Well's rap appeared to be a certain single and with the bases loaded probably would have tied the affair. Instead, Southern was called out on the fair ball rule to mark the final out of the game and give the Indians their third straight win of the season.

Though the visitors outhit the Redskins 6-5, a total of four of their safe blows came in the two final frames when Dorsey pitched himself out of trouble, leaving the bases loaded on both occasions.

Dorsey, seeing his first year with the N.L.S.C. baseballers, replaced Laird on the hill at the start of the sixth inning. He sat the Wildcats down in order for the first stanzas before running into difficulties.

Laird, a veteran of Coach George Luffey's crew, was credited with the victory. Except for wildness in the third frame when he allowed the only Wildcat run to score, the righthanded fireball ace kept the visitors in almost complete check, striking out 11 of the 20 batters he faced while giving up only two hits.

Second baseman Jack Brooks scored the Tribe's initial run of the game in the first inning when he walked, stole second base, advanced to third on a wild pitch, and galloped home on a single by Ike McMullen.

The LC outfit deadlocked the tilt in the top of the third on a run by Donald Sexton, who was running for pitcher Cecil Raggio. Raggio was shaken up when a throw to first by Laird hit him back of the head. Laird had fielded Raggio's punt down the first base line and was attempting to throw the opposing hurler out when the accident occurred. Sexton moved to second when the following batter was hit by a pitched ball, advanced to third on a single by Southern, and was allowed to tally on a wild pitch.

In the bottom of the fourth round Redmen Jim Laudadio, Homer Rouse, and Zeke Estep combined three consecutive singles with a passed ball to produce two runs and send the Maroons-and-Golds out front to stay.

The loss brought the Wildcats' record to one win against two losses. Northeast dropped Delta State of Cleveland, Miss., twice in their only other games of the year.

Bengal Great, Tad Thrash, Directing Alumni Affairs

BATON ROUGE, March 30 (AP)—Louisiana State University today selected a former great athlete, Edsel E. (Tad) Thrash, as the university's first full-time director of alumni affairs.

The LSU board of supervisors named Thrash, NCAA boxing champion for two years, at the recommendation of the joint alumni and board of supervisors committee in a step toward strengthening LSU contacts with alumni.

Frank G. Carroll Jr., associate professor of mechanical engineering, was chosen to take over as director of university college July 1. When Dr. Fred H. Fenn becomes dean of the college of engineering.

The 32-year-old Thrash, now an economics instructor while working toward a PH. D., will succeed Thomas K. McKnight, presently serving both as alumni secretary and director of the office of student employment and scholarships. McKnight will devote full time to the latter post.

Thrash, who served one year as boxing coach before the sport was abandoned last year, was chosen for the $9,000 per year job after a two year study by the committee of LSU policy toward organized alumni activities.

A native of Lake, Miss., he received bachelor's and master's degrees in business administration from LSU and was named to the LSU Athletic Hall of Fame in 1950 after winning his second straight NCAA boxing crown.

Carroll joined the LSU faculty in 1946 as an instructor in mechanical engineering after World War Two service in the Air Force.

A registered rofessional engineer, the 37-year-old professor now serves as assistant to the dean of the college of engineering. He received his bachelor of science and master of science degrees from LSU.

The university college was established in 1951 to offer persons in the Baton Rouge area a chance to take college courses leading to a bachelor of general studies degree. About 100 courses are offered in the evenings, late afternoons and Saturday.

1. Accepted the low bid of $654,500 by Allison and Holland for housing construction under the south stands of the LSU football Stadium.

2. Approved a site on college of agriculture land for a new LSU golf course to replace Westdale Golf Club. Construction cost, estimated at $505,000, will be paid for from $700,000 received in sale of Westdale to the city of Baton Rouge.

4. Accepted gifts and grants totaling $463,943.

Techmen Shut Out By Texans, 7 To 0

RUSTON, La., March 30 (Special)—Abilene Christian College gave Louisiana Tech baseballers their first shut out of the season by dumping the Bulldogs, 7-0, here this afternoon.

The Wildcats from Abilene, Tex, made the most of eight hits to put across two runs in the second, three in the fourth, and two more in the ninth. Tech managed to get seven scattered hits, but the Canines could get only one man as far as third the entire afternoon.

Leading the Abilene crew at the bat was third baseman Jim Armstrong who hit a home run and two singles in four times up. His homer came in the fourth with one man on base. Tech's hitting was topped by outfielders Melvin Colvin and Bobby Shores with two singles apiece.

Abilene's hurler, Harold Green, who worked the entire contest and struck out ten Techmen, got credit for the win. Losing pitcher was Tech starter J. W. Mercer.

Abilene Christian meets another Louisiana team Monday afternoon when the 'Cats play Northwestern at Natchitoches. Next battle for Tech will be their Gulf States Conference opener here Friday with Southeastern Louisiana.

Big Name Vets Of Golf Trail Are Favorites

By WILLIAM TUCKER

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 30 (UP)—Bigger, better and reputedly tougher with new hazards installed on Heartbreak Hill in the backstretch, the Masters golf championship founded by Bobby Jones comes up for the 21st time this week with four days of sharpshooting starting Thursday.

For once, even the sponsors say the event is "wide open," though that means it is wide open just so far as it's an even bet the winner will be a veteran with a name like Hogan, Snead, Middlecoff, Mangrum or Demaret.

"For our part, we have been watching Jimmy Demaret, our first three - time champion with exceptional interest," said C'ff Roberts, chairman of the tournament committee. "He has had an extremely good winter."

Dapper Jimmy, whose costumes pale the riot of color on the flowered boundaries of the Augusta National Course, has won two tournaments this year and rates among the money leaders at the ripe old age of 46. He'll be 47 in May.

A record invitation list of 125 has gone out for this year's tournament and about 70 were expected to compete. The Masters mean just that — it's a unique get-together of golfdom's greats.

All past U.S. Open and Amateur champions who still are able to get around a golf course are included in the invitation list and a surprising number turns up annually.

This year, however, the field will be cut to the low 40 scorers and ties after the second round. This gives the real old-timers an opportunity to withdraw with honor and further enables the tournament directors to streamline the scheduled for the last two days when the larges galleries appear.

Major change in the course architecture is the toughening up of hole No. 13. The tee has been moved back five yards to make it a 475-yard par five and a trap has been goughed out back to the left of the green.

This spot in years past has been a favorable target for a long second iron shot because there usually is a crowd around the green and it presented a good chance to get in close without overshooting.

Little League Tryouts Open Next Saturday

First Little League tryouts of the season in Monroe area scheduled for next Saturday afternoon at Lions Field, home of Little League activity near Legion Memorial Stadium, Jack Hesketh, league secretary, announced yesterday.

The Northside League's prospects will work from a 1 p.m. start, and the Southside League's talent will take over on the field at 3:30 p.m. Meanwhile, registrations of boys between eight and 12 years of age who want tryouts will continue to be taken until Wednesday at the Community Center on Catalpa street.

After three consecutive Saturdays of tryouts, team managers will select the boys needed to complete their rosters. Boys who are not drafted for Little League will be placed with Minor League clubs.

Jack Freeman Resigns Tribe Coaching Post

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., March 30 (AP)—Jack Freeman, head football coach and athletic director at the College of William and Mary since 1952, resigned today, effective June 30.

Just a little over two weeks ago, the faculty athletic committee had recommended that Freeman be re-employed, despie considerable alumni pressure for his removal.

The resignation was announced by W and M president Alvin Duke Chandler, who said he had received a letter from Freeman expressing his desire to resign. Chandler said the resignation had been accepted with regrets and with an expression of appreciation for Freeman's services.

Some alumni pressure to Freeman had been building the past two years, and it reached a climax this winter after the Indians experienced their worst football season in history last fall, nine defeats and a tie. Freeman's only winning campaign was 1953 when the Indians were 5-4-1.

1960 OLYMPIAN?

Troutman Looms As Track Prospect

ROANOKE, La., March 30 (UP)—"One-man" track team, Don Troutman, may get a crack at the 1960 Olympics if he keeps up his brilliant performances around the cinder circuits.

For the second straight year the star of Roanokes Little high school was handed the trophy as the outstanding trackman for his brilliant times, distances, and yardage in high school division of the 19th annual Northwestern State college relays yesterday.

Troutman was clocked in the Class C division high and low hurdles and the 100-yard dash ahead of his opponents.

All of the officials shook their heads and agreed that the high school trackman will be "worth watching."

In his performances, the high school student from Roanoke, population 625, in southwestern Louisiana, set five new records in the broad jump, shot put, 100-yard dash, 120-yard high hurdles and 180-yard low hurldes.

In the broad jump, he measured 23 feet, 5¼ inches. He paced a new 10.1 second record for the 100-yard dash and covered the 120-yard high hurdles in a spectacular 15.6 seconds, and leaped oer the 180-yard low hurldes in 20.3 seconds.

Troutman hurled the shot for a distance of 48 feet, 5¾ inches.

In addition to individual honors, the easy-striding Troutman carried the baton on two record-breaking relay teams to give Roanoke high school an easy championship in the Class C competition.

Coaches attending the meet agreed Troutman "is an all - around trackman."

Teammates said he races to school to get in extra sprinting practice.

TENSAS' DEER PROBLEM

How To Cull Growing Herd Debated By Parish, State

By SAM HANNA

As controversial as the difference of estimates of the population, the deer situation in Tensas and in some sections of Madison has come to the point where something has to be done.

Even the officials of Tensas parish, who took a scrawny herd following the '27 high waters and built it into the state's largest, are now pondering killing the doe.

Seemingly they would be the last to want this sad, but realistic step, for the fields of ole Tensas are graced by the beauty of the grazing deer.

Not so pretty, however, is the scene of droves of marauders feeding in farmers' fields of oats, corn and even cotton, the latter of which is described by biologists as a starvation food, indicating that the herd in Tensas has outgrown the range.

The grey facts are clear and cut — that the herd has outgrown both the good of the farmer and itself.

So with this utmost in mind, Tensas and the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission have negotiated. To date they have been unable to come to terms.

Illustrating the differences of opinions concerning the situation, Tensas estimates 15,000 deer in the parish; the commission, 27,000 head.

It is not the intent of the Morning World to create a controversy between the people of Tensas towarc the officials of the commission, or vice versa; nor is it intended to point a finger of guilt at any one individual.

On the contrary, the publication of the details of plans to solve the problem is hoped to shed a light of sincerity over the efforts of both parties involved and foster an open - minded attitude in the bringing the good of all — both man and animal — as the ultimate goal.

According to Sheriff E. D. Coleman of Tensas, the commission first suggested sending into Tensas parish 1,000 hunters from throughout the state.

These hunters were to be picked by lottery, Sheriff Coleman said, and deputized by the sheriff's department of Tensas parish. Each hunter would be allowed to kill one doe.

Tensas officials responded with a suggestion that skilled, expert riflemen be hired to kill approximately 1,000 deer.

The following is a copy of the plan submitted to Director F. Lamar Clement:

"Have does taken in overpopulated areas, beginning with the maiden does; these does to be taken by skilled riflemen with rifles equipped with telescope sights, riflemen to be selected by the officials of the parish of Tensas and the Department of Wild Life and Fisheries Commission; the deer killed to be dressed immediately and put into cold storage and turned over to the various public institutions and in instances where farmers suffered loss or damage to crops to give some of the deer to htese farmers to be put into the deep freeze if they so desire. After this is done some of the older does, after weaning their fawns, could also be taken and disposed of in like manner."

Endorsing this was Judge Frank Voelker, Sixth Judicial District Court, Sheriff Coleman, Clerk James A. Kitchen, Assessor A. G. Bondurant, District Attorney Thompson L. Clarke and School Board President Fred M. Miller.

In addition, they requested that E. R. McDonald, who is both president of the Tensas Police Jury and chairman of the commission, be appointed to head the operation.

Following is a copy of the message sent to Clement, February 11, 1957:

"With reference to section twelve (12) of Act 273 of 1926, 'The commissioner is authorized in his discretion to direct any officer authorized to enforce the provisions of this act, etc.' The party selected should be thoroughly qualified and have the complete confidence of the Department of Wild Life and Fisheries and the officials and citizens of the parish he is called upon to serve. We feel that we have such a man in the person of Mr. E. R. McDonald, chairman of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission and he most certainly has the confidence of your department. He is president of the Tensas parish Police Jury — is thoroughly familiar with the situation here and will enjoy the full cooperation of our citizens and all our officials. We believe he should have the honor and privilege of serving in this important undertaking. We recommend him and urge his appointment. To succeed he must have a free hand to select his assistants and to determine the method and be afforded the means to carry on the work.

The cordial relations that have existed between the Department of Conservation and the parish of Tensas have paid off in the past and we are sure will continue to do so in the future."

It was signed by the same group of officials.

Clement gave the following answer, February 11, 1957:

"This will acknowledge receipt of your telegram of February 11th and wish to assure you that I appreciate what you have to say and thoroughly agree with you that Mr. E. R. McDonald is a fine fellow and very familiar with tae situation there and he would enjoy the cooperation of your citizens, but I have not the authority to make such an appointment as this would involve board action.

"However, you may rest assured that the department will do everything possible to relieve this situation through trapping, by the use of the dart guns (which we hope to have in operation during the early part of next week) or through the use of state - wide permits, which I am sure Mr. McDonald has explained to you."

Tensas officials differed with Director Clement on his power to select McDonald. They quoted the following act:

"Act 273 of 1926, Sec. 1 —'Commissioner' shall mean the Commissioner of Conservation. Sec. 12 — In the event that any species of wild birds or wild quadruped herein protected shall at any time in any locality become so destructive of private property as to be a nuisance the commissioner is authorized in his discretion, to direct any officer authorized to enforce the provisions of this Act, or any reputable citizen of this state, to take and dispose of such species of birds or quadrupeds (wild deer, etc.) in the manner an under the conditions specified by the commissioner in a written permit signed by him."

Both the Tensas officials and the commission have expressed their desire to trap rather than kill the deer. Although the box - type traps have been successful in restocking purposes, they have not been successful in relieving Tensas's problem.

As far as the dartgun is concerned, federal aid coordinator John D. Newsom, who heads the state deer project, said:

"Furthermore, we cannot overemphasize the belief that this method cannot be successfully used to alleviate an overpopulated situation."

Tensas officials and the commission have locked horns with the problem. At the moment, the commission is contemplating an open deer season. It's worked in other states and it look's as of it'll have to be used here.

LOP OFF ROOKIES

TAMPA, March 29 (UP)— The Washington Senators cut their squad to 31 men Friday when they sent five players back to the minors. Those optioned were pitchers Hal Griggs and Bunky Stewart, who were with the club last year, and outfielder Sam Hill and pitchers Rene Nodarse and Lazzero Rivero.

Gen. Duke Ties Record, Claims Florida Purse

MIAMI, Fla., March 30 (AP) — Gen. Duke put on a blazing stretch run today to win the $123,600 Florida Derby in world record-tying time for the mile and an eighth and soundly whipped the odds-on choice, Bold Ruler.

The brown son of Bull Lea, laying back while Federal Hill set the pace and Bold Ruler pursued him to the final turn, caught them both in the stretch and went under the wire a length and a half in front. The time was 1:46 4-5 over a lightning-fast track.

Bold Ruler finished second, a head in front of Iron Liege, stablemate of Gen. Duke. Shan Pac was fourth and Federal Hill fifth in the smallest field ever to compete in this feature.

With a gay and colorful crowd of 24,409 cheering him on, Gen. Duke charged along the palm-lined course to tie the world record and smash the track mark in this major test for three-year-olds who will be running for racing's triple crown in the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont.

The world record was held by Noor, Alidon and Swaps, all of them older than Gen. Duke when they made the mark.

Gen. Duke, owned by Calumet Farm of Lexington, Ky., earned $73,400 and his stablemate, Iron Liege, picked up $12,000 to give Mrs. Gene Markey, owner of Calumet, a record $515,845 earned by her horses in Florida this winter.

Gen. Duke, second choice in the betting, paid $5.80 and $2.10. Bold Ruler, the 3-5 choice, returned $2.10. Due to the small field, there was no show betting.

The old Gulfstream Park record for the mile and a furlong was hung up by Needles, the pride of Florida, when he won the Florida Derby last year in 1:48 3-5.

This year, however, the field will be cut to the low 40 scorers and ties after the second round. This gives the real old-timers an opportunity to withdraw with honor and further enables the tournament directors to streamline the scheduled for the last two days when the larges galleries appear.

Major change in the course architecture is the toughening up of hole No. 13. The tee has been moved back five yards to make it a 475-yard par five and a trap has been goughed out back to the left of the green.

This spot in years past has been a favorable target for a long second iron shot because there usually is a crowd around the green and it presented a good chance to get in close without overshooting.

Little League Tryouts Open Next Saturday

First Little League tryouts of the season in Monroe area scheduled for next Saturday afternoon at Lions Field, home of Little League activity near Legion Memorial Stadium, Jack Hesketh, league secretary, announced yesterday.

After three consecutive Saturdays of tryouts, team managers will select the boys needed to complete their rosters. Boys who are not drafted for Little League will be placed with Minor League clubs.

Jack Freeman Resigns Tribe Coaching Post

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., March 30 (AP)—Jack Freeman, head football coach and athletic director at the College of William and Mary since 1952, resigned today, effective June 30.

Just a little over two weeks ago, the faculty athletic committee had recommended that Freeman be re-employed, despie considerable alumni pressure for his removal.

The resignation was announced by W and M president Alvin Duke Chandler, who said he had received a letter from Freeman expressing his desire to resign. Chandler said the resignation had been accepted with regrets and with an expression of appreciation for Freeman's services.

Some alumni pressure to Freeman had been building the past two years, and it reached a climax this winter after the Indians experienced their worst football season in history last fall, nine defeats and a tie. Freeman's only winning campaign was 1953 when the Indians were 5-4-1.

1960 OLYMPIAN?

Troutman Looms As Track Prospect

ROANOKE, La., March 30 (UP)—"One-man" track team, Don Troutman, may get a crack at the 1960 Olympics if he keeps up his brilliant performances around the cinder circuits.

For the second straight year the star of Roanokes Little high school was handed the trophy as the outstanding trackman for his brilliant times, distances, and yardage in high school division of the 19th annual Northwestern State college relays yesterday.

Troutman was clocked in the Class C division high and low hurdles and the 100-yard dash ahead of his opponents.

All of the officials shook their heads and agreed that the high school trackman will be "worth watching."

In his performances, the high school student from Roanoke, population 625, in southwestern Louisiana, set five new records in the broad jump, shot put, 100-yard dash, 120-yard high hurdles and 180-yard low hurldes.

In the broad jump, he measured 23 feet, 5¼ inches. He paced a new 10.1 second record for the 100-yard dash and covered the 120-yard high hurdles in a spectacular 15.6 seconds, and leaped oer the 180-yard low hurldes in 20.3 seconds.

Troutman hurled the shot for a distance of 48 feet, 5¾ inches.

In addition to individual honors, the easy-striding Troutman carried the baton on two record-breaking relay teams to give Roanoke high school an easy championship in the Class C competition.

Coaches attending the meet agreed Troutman "is an all - around trackman."

Teammates said he races to school to get in extra sprinting practice.

DETROIT, March 29 (UP)—Bob Reynolds, sports director of a Detroit radio station (WJR), said Friday that Paul Schlisser is the "number one candidate to succeed Tex Schramm as general manager of the Los Angeles Rams of the National Football League.

"Schissler is the promoter of the annual pro bowl game and the director of special events for the Los Angeles Times and may be the one Rams' co-owner Ed Pauley and Dan Reeves can get together on," Reynolds said.

TENSAS' DEER PROBLEM

How To Cull Growing Herd Debated By Parish, State

By SAM HANNA

As controversial as the difference of estimates of the population, the deer situation in Tensas and in some sections of Madison has come to the point where something has to be done.

Even the officials of Tensas parish, who took a scrawny herd following the '27 high waters and built it into the state's largest, are now pondering killing the doe.

Seemingly they would be the last to want this sad, but realistic step, for the fields of ole Tensas are graced by the beauty of the grazing deer.

Not so pretty, however, is the scen. of droves of marauders feeding in farmers' fields of oats, corn and even cotton, the latter of which is described by biologists as a starvation food, indicating that the herd in Tensas has outgrown the range.

The grey facts are clear and cut — that the herd has outgrown both the good of the farmer and itself.

So with this utmost in mind, Tensas and the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission have negotiated. To date they have been unable to come to terms.

Illustrating the differences of opinions concerning the situation, Tensas estimates 15,000 deer in the parish; the commission, 27,000 head.

It is not the intent of the Morning World to create a controversy between the people of Tensas towarc the officials of the commission, or vice versa; nor is it intended to point a finger of guilt at any one individual.

On the contrary, the publication of the details of plans to solve the problem is hoped to shed a light of sincerity over the efforts of both parties involved and foster an open - minded attitude in the bringing the good of all — both man and animal — as the ultimate goal.

According to Sheriff E. D. Coleman of Tensas, the commission first suggested sending into Tensas parish 1,000 hunters from throughout the state.

These hunters were to be picked by lottery, Sheriff Coleman said, and deputized by the sheriff's department of Tensas parish. Each hunter would be allowed to kill one doe.

Tensas officials responded with a suggestion that skilled, expert riflemen be hired to kill approximately 1,000 deer.

The following is a copy of the plan submitted to Director F. Lamar Clement:

"Have does taken in overpopulated areas, beginning with the maiden does; these does to be taken by skilled riflemen with rifles equipped with telescope sights, riflemen to be selected by the officials of the parish of Tensas and the Department of Wild Life and Fisheries Commission; the deer killed to be dressed immediately and put into cold storage and turned over to the various public institutions and in instances where farmers suffered loss or damage to crops to give some of the deer to htese farmers to be put into the deep freeze if they so desire. After this is done some of the older does, after weaning their fawns, could also be taken and disposed of in like manner."

Endorsing this was Judge Frank Voelker, Sixth Judicial District Court, Sheriff Coleman, Clerk James A. Kitchen, Assessor A. G. Bondurant, District Attorney Thompson L. Clarke and School Board President Fred M. Miller.

In addition, they requested that E. R. McDonald, who is both president of the Tensas Police Jury and chairman of the commission, be appointed to head the operation.

Following is a copy of the message sent to Clement, February 11, 1957:

"With reference to section twelve (12) of Act 273 of 1926, 'The commissioner is authorized in his discretion to direct any officer authorized to enforce the provisions of this act, etc.' The party selected should be thoroughly qualified and have the complete confidence of the Department of Wild Life and Fisheries and the officials and citizens of the parish he is called upon to serve. We feel that we have such a man in the person of Mr. E. R. McDonald, chairman of the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries Commission and he most certainly has the confidence of your department. He is president of the Tensas parish Police Jury — is thoroughly familiar with the situation here and will enjoy the full cooperation of our citizens and all our officials. We believe he should have the honor and privilege of serving in this important undertaking. We recommend him and urge his appointment. To succeed he must have a free hand to select his assistants and to determine the method and be afforded the means to carry on the work.

The cordial relations that have existed between the Department of Conservation and the parish of Tensas have paid off in the past and we are sure will continue to do so in the future."

It was signed by the same group of officials.

Clement gave the following answer, February 11, 1957:

"This will acknowledge receipt of your telegram of February 11th and wish to assure you that I appreciate what you have to say and thoroughly agree with you that Mr. E. R. McDonald is a fine fellow and very familiar with the situation there and he would enjoy the cooperation of your citizens, but I have not the authority to make such an appointment as this would involve board action.

"However, you may rest assured that the department will do everything possible to relieve this situation through trapping, by the use of the dart guns (which we hope to have in operation during the early part of next week) or through the use of state - wide permits, which I am sure Mr. McDonald has explained to you."

Tensas officials differed with Director Clement on his power to select McDonald. They quoted the following act:

"Act 273 of 1926. Sec. 1 —'Commissioner' shall mean the Commissioner of Conservation. Sec. 12 — In the event that any species of wild birds or wild quadruped herein protected shall at any time in any locality become so destructive of private property as to be a nuisance the commissioner is authorized in his discretion, to direct any officer authorized to enforce the provisions of this Act, or any reputable citizen of this state, to take and dispose of such species of birds or quadrupeds (wild deer, etc.) in the manner an under the conditions specified by the commissioner in a written permit signed by him."

Both the Tensas officials and the commission have expressed their desire to trap rather than kill the deer. Although the box - type traps have been successful in restocking purposes, they have not been successful in relieving Tensas's problem.

As far as the dartgun is concerned, federal aid coordinator John D. Newsom, who heads the state deer project, said:

"Furthermore, we cannot overemphasize the belief that this method cannot be successfully used to alleviate an overpopulated situation."

Tensas officials and the commission have locked horns with the problem. At the moment, the commission is contemplating an open deer season. It's worked in other states and it look's as of it'll have to be used here.

LOP OFF ROOKIES

TAMPA, March 29 (UP)— The Washington Senators cut their squad to 31 men Friday when they sent five players back to the minors. Those optioned were pitchers Hal Griggs and Bunky Stewart, who were with the club last year, and outfielder Sam Hill and pitchers Rene Nodarse and Lazzero Rivero.

Gen. Duke Ties Record, Claims Florida Purse

MIAMI, Fla., March 30 (AP) — Gen. Duke put on a blazing stretch run today to win the $123,600 Florida Derby in world record-tying time for the mile and an eighth and soundly whipped the odds-on choice, Bold Ruler.

The brown son of Bull Lea, laying back while Federal Hill set the pace and Bold Ruler pursued him to the final turn, caught them both in the stretch and went under the wire a length and a half in front. The time was 1:46 4-5 over a lightning-fast track.

Bold Ruler finished second, a head in front of Iron Liege, stablemate of Gen. Duke. Shan Pac was fourth and Federal Hill fifth in the smallest field ever to compete in this feature.

With a gay and colorful crowd of 24,409 cheering him on, Gen. Duke charged along the palm-lined course to tie the world record and smash the track mark in this major test for three-year-olds who will be running for racing's triple crown in the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont.

The world record was held by Noor, Alidon and Swaps, all of them older than Gen. Duke when they made the mark.

Gen. Duke, owned by Calumet Farm of Lexington, Ky., earned $73,400 and his stablemate, Iron Liege, picked up $12,000 to give Mrs. Gene Markey, owner of Calumet, a record $515,845 earned by her horses in Florida this winter.

Gen. Duke, second choice in the betting, paid $5.80 and $2.10. Bold Ruler, the 3-5 choice, returned $2.10. Due to the small field, there was no show betting.

The old Gulfstream Park record for the mile and a furlong was hung up by Needles, the pride of Florida, when he won the Florida Derby last year in 1:48 3-5.

Clean-Up Opens In Monroe Monday

RESIDENTIAL-COMMERCIAL AREA EYESORES
One of the many eyesores in the commercial-residential areas, this particular one near a through highway, is shown in the above photograph. Garbage cans turned over and the refuse spilled out can cause many areas to become detrimental to the community.

FIRE DAMAGE REMAINS UNCLEANED
A house, destroyed by fire, leaves an unsightly and unhealthy situation as the debris remains untouched. Not only does the pile of burned timber and bricks make uninviting the surrounding property, but is a refuge for rats and other pests.

Forces Ready For Big Push In All Areas

An intensive cleanup drive throughout the entire City of Monroe begins tomorrow and will continue through the month of April. The drive is being sponsored jointly by the Monroe Beautification and Planning Board, the City of Monroe, Monroe Chamber of Commerce, and many civic clubs. The college area will be covered first.

Municipal garbage trucks will be used to haul out all rubbish and other debris piled on the neutral grounds. The trucks will operate in the various sections of the city according to a schedule which was set up at a meeting Tuesday.

Leading off the general drive will be three district, or areas, in the college area. This particular phase is expected to last two days. After this, or Wednesday, the areas around Booker T. Washington, Carroll High School and the Negro districts north of the Illinois Central railroad tracks will be the focal point for the clean up efforts.

The dates for the various districts will be subject to change, in the event there is more work to be done than anticipated at the present time. The public will be kept informed of the changes, if any, Mayor Howard pointed out.

"I would like to request of all persons," Mayor Howard said, "that they not expect the trash to be picked up immediately after it is put out. We in the city will do our utmost to remove the rubbish as fast as possible, but our facilities are limited." This, the mayor pointed out, is the main reason for setting the tentative dates for the various districts and areas.

Other districts, and the tentative schedule for pick-up of rubbish are:

Monday, April 8, Districts A, B, and J of the northside.

Wednesday, April 10, and remainder of the week, districts C, D and E of the northside.

Monday, April 16, Districts G and H of the North side, and Districts A and B of the Southside.

Friday, April 19, through April 23, Districts A, B and C of the East side and Districts C and D of the Southside.

Wednesday, April 24, through the remainder of April, the rest of the City of Monroe not already covered.

Before going to Istrouma as band director, he developed championship bands at Carr Central High School in Vicksburg, Miss., where his Class B band consistently entered and won top ratings in Class AA competition.

Ministers Ask Cut In Red Tape In Foreign Aid

By LOUIS CASSELS

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP)—Religious leaders will appeal to Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson Monday to cut some of the red tape which hampers efforts of private relief agencies to distribute surplus U.S. foods to hungry families abroad.

Spokesmen for all major protestant, Catholic and Jewish overseas relief organizations and for the non-denominational agency care will meet with Benson in his office at 10 a.m. est to present the joint plea.

They will tell him the "share our surplus" program, under which voluntary relief agencies will distribute nearly 2 billion pounds of free American food to the needy in 75 countries this year, has outgrown administrative machinery set up seven years ago.

They will urge him to support a streamlining of this machinery to facilitate cooperation between the government and the relief agencies.

They also will ask him to make available additional types of surplus foods from government storage bins to provide "better balanced diets" for the millions of undernourished who are being aided.

At present the government provides to relief agencies, without charge, surplus wheat, flour, dried milk, corn, meal, beans and cheese.

The church leaders' real grievance is that too many federal agencies have an oar in the surplus disposal program.

They would prefer to work more directly with the Agriculture Department, which is sympathetic to their program, and to be less dependent on the international cooperation administration.

ICA holds a virtual veto power over the amount of surplus food a voluntary agency may distribute in any country. Some relief officials feel that the agency has a strong bias in favor of direct government aid and that it consistently rides the brakes on expansion of the distribution programs of church and private agencies.

The church leaders do not wish to pick a public fight with ICA over this issue. They would prefer to make their case quietly to Benson and, if need be, to the White House.

Ministers Ask Cut In Red Tape In Foreign Aid

By LOUIS CASSELS

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP)—Religious leaders will appeal to Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson Monday to cut some of the red tape which hampers efforts of private relief agencies to distribute surplus U.S. foods to hungry families abroad.

Spokesmen for all major protestant, Catholic and Jewish overseas relief organizations and for the non-denominational agency care will meet with Benson in his office at 10 a.m. cst to present the joint plea.

They will tell him the "share our surplus" program, under which voluntary relief agencies will distribute nearly 2 billion pounds of free American food to the needy in 75 countries this year, has outgrown administrative machinery set up seven years ago.

They will urge him to support a streamlining of this machinery to facilitate cooperation between the government and the relief agencies.

They also will ask him to make available additional types of surplus foods from government storage bins to provide "better balanced diets" for the millions of undernourished who are being aided.

At present the government provides to relief agencies, without charge, surplus wheat, flour, dried milk, corn, meal, beans and cheese.

The church leaders' real grievance is that too many federal agencies have an oar in the surplus disposal program.

They would prefer to work more directly with the Agriculture Department, which is sympathetic to their program, and to be less dependent on the international cooperation administration.

ICA holds a virtual veto power over the amount of surplus food a voluntary agency may distribute in any country. Some relief officials feel that the agency has a strong bias in favor of direct government aid and that it consistently rides the brakes on expansion of the distribution programs of church and private agencies.

The church leaders do not wish to pick a public fight with ICA over this issue. They would prefer to make their case quietly to Benson and, if need be, to the White House.

How To Perk Up Tired Swim Suits

CHICAGO (AP)—For gals who follow the sun and wouldn't be caught wearing last year's bathing suit, here's a tip:

Give it a new look with jeweled embroidery.

Designers for a craft house of Chicago, distributors of pearls, rhinestones and other materials for do-it-yourselfers, suggest that adding dewdrop centers to flowers embroidered to a white suit does the trick.

They sewed small pink plastic roses to the ruffles of a blue one and tiny maple leaf jewels to both.

They used a rhinestone setter for the job and the redecorating took only minutes.

On others, they traced various patterns in the rhinestones that come in several colors, including black. The roses and jewels are sewn through a small bead that holds them secure.

Miss Bradley And Lt. Harrington Say Vows In Late Afternoon Rites

Of interest Saturday evening was the marriage of Miss Barbara Ann Bradley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Bradley, to Lt. William Waltmon Harrington, Jr. son of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Harrington.

The ceremony took place at 6:30 o'clock in the First Baptist Church and was celebrated by the Reverend James L. Horton. During the ceremony there were selections by Mrs. Florence Albritton, organist, and Floyd Fisher, soloist.

White gladioli, smilax, and burning tapers decorated the church and in the aisles were wrought iron candelabra entwined with smilax.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown of silk moonglow was fashioned on princess lines. The softy rounded neck line was trimmed with entricate embroidery of lace and seed pearls. A headpiece of pearls held her veil of candlelight illusion. She carried a bouquet of stephanotis centered with a white orchid, tied with satin streamers.

Mrs. Burl Eastepp was the matron of honor and Miss Jeanine Renfrow, the maid of honor. The other attendants included Miss Mary O'Dell Wood, Miss Lydia Varino, Miss Connie Pickering, and Miss Lynda Gaar. The sheath dresses of mauve lace over taffeta had net overskirts embroidered in seed pearls. In their hair they wore heart shaped headdresses of matching lace studded with pearls and carried bouquets of pink, mauve, and garnet carnations, with matching ribbons.

Jerry Wayne Frey was best man. Groomsmen included Burl Eastepp, Donald Smith and Floyd Ham.

The reception was held in the social room of the church. Mrs. Bradley received in a gown of Dior blue lace. Her shoes and bag were of matching color and her corsage was of pink rose buds.

A light blue silk suit with matching flower hat was worn by the groom's mother, who assisted Mrs. Bradley in receiving.

The tiered wedding cake embossed in white and pink blossoms centered the bride's table which was covered with a lace cloth over pink. The reflector holding the cake was banked with pale pink camellias and greenery. The lace covered punch table was trimmed with the same pink flowers. About the room were baskets of white gladioli and southern smilax garlanded the columns.

For their wedding trip to New Orleans and the Gulf Coast, the bride traveled in a costume suit of navy silk shantung. Her small hat, shoes and bag were the same shade of blue and she wore a white orchid at her shoulder. On their return they will be at home at Fort Polk, where Lt. Harrington is stationed.

Out-of-town guests here for the event were Lt. and Mrs. L. T. Crawford, Jr., Major L. S. McLaughlin, and Capt. Lillian Dole, all of Fort Polk, Larry Fortenello, Baton Rouge, Mrs. Huey Ham, Floyd Ham, of Farmerville, Mrs. H. R. Ham, Felsenthal, Ark., Miss Lydia Varino and Jerry Frey.

Young Wives Help Mates Get Degrees

One-fourth of the recently married graduates have husbands who are still attending school, and an unusually high percentage of these brides are working. This reversal results from the interruption of college by service duty and the fact that a large majority of young men either marry while still in uniform or immediately after their military service is ended.

The study also showed that an increasingly large number of married women are holding jobs outside their homes. Approximately one-third of all the 37 million married women in the nation are now going to business.

These women find it possible to run a home efficiently and still hold remunerative jobs largely because of the greater ease with which home chores can be accomplished. Canned and packaged foods make it possible for them to shop once a week where formerly it was necessary to make daily purchases of the family food. Processed foods eliminate advance preparation and so save uncounted hours of meal preparation. Mechanized household equipment reduces other household chores to a minimum.

The study showed that most of these wives are doing their part to contribute to the family budget for such serious reasons as buying a home, building an educational fund for the children or preparing for the retirement years.

With reduced hours of work and the further development of foods readied for heating and service an even larger number of wives are expected to enter the business world in 1957.

Wonderful with steak: diced cooked potatoes heated in a cheese sauce. Use cheddar cheese (or processed) for the sauce.

WHY GROW OLD

You Can Stop Cancer If You Act In Time

By JOSEPHONE LOWMAN

The American Cancer Society crusades all year against that dread disease. It crusades constantly by alerting the public against the danger signals of cancer, and also through brilliant and dedicated research.

It begs you to investigate any symptoms such as any unusual discharge or bleeding, a persistent cough or hoarseness, any unexplained lumps, persistent indigestion, a sore that does not heal or a mole or wart that changes in appearance, or any change in bowel or bladder habits.

Not so long ago I printed in this column the rewarding percentages of cancer cures which were effected because of early diagnosis and treatment. That makes all the difference! I know it is frightening to investigate a symptom which could come from cancer, but it would be much more frightening to find that you have done so too late. Usually the symptoms are due to some other condition, but do not gamble your life away because of neglect!

Can Strike Young

During April The American Cancer Society makes a special effort to bring essential information to the public. We never think of cancer as a hazard for young folks. Actually, percentage-wise, it isn't. However we, the public, are beginning to realize that cancer is not confined to older age groups but can and does strike the very young.

Leukemia is one of the most usual forms of cancer in children and young people. It seems to be an aftermath of an acute infectious illness. In the past, leukemia was swiftly fatal. Today certain treatments and drugs can bring relief and prolong life, although there is not yet a cure.

Free Booklet

Although cancer is rare in children, it happens often enough to warrant parental education concerning it.

The American Cancer Society has given me permission to offer my readers its booklet "Cancer in Children" free of charge. If you would like to have this booklet, send your name and address with your request for it to The American Cancer Society, 531 West 57th Street, New York, 19 N.Y. Remember, too, that any donation you may send will help finance further research which may save thousands of lives.

Outdoor Cooks Reject Limits Weather Sets

Outdoor cookery, fast becoming one of the most popular of American pastimes, also is growing rapidly into a year-round activity instead of something in which one fines pleasure only during the summer months.

Amateur chefs the country over, now that they have experienced the exciting difference of charcoal flavored foods, no longer are willing to limit their appetites during more than half of the year.

And, apparently modern architects are in sympathy with them.

Many families who live in homes with attached garages are using the garage as an extra kitchen, a place to cook on the brazier during all but the most frigid weather.

The garage, of course, protects the cook from the cold winds while smoke can escape out the open door. And with most homes having an entry into the kitchen from inside the garage, it is only a few steps from the brazier to the table.

Make up an extra amount of cream sauce when you are preparing it for a dish. Refrigerate and use with leftover cooked vegetables, meat or fish the next day.

Makeup Matches Dresses

By VIVIAN BROWN

Take one sprig of violets and a pearl from a wealthy oyster man, match them to a Mona Lisa smile, and you'll formulate a "paradoxical look for spring, '57." As if you didn't know. Anyway it's what you should strive for during this luminous season that is upon us, the Fashion Group stressed at a recent fashion show in New York.

The group of trend setters showed their concept of makeups all in luminescent tones, bound to generate a spark in the make-up palette of fashion-wise types.

White will be complemented by the pearly tones, the "fresh-water pearl look," the group calls it. You'll wear your lips muted in pale pink, with green eye-shadow and mascara with "a gloss of silver on the lids."

Or perhaps you'll choose "the [illegible] and bold look," described as the big surprise: scarlet lipstick, nail polish and bold eye makeup. Your hair should match your costume.

Then there is the "fresh peach look" offbeat with gray — a fresh outdoor effect of luminous skin with peach-color color accent on lips and fingertips.

If you plan to go in for the black mood, do it up brown. The look should be East Indian, the group emphasizes, with honey skin tone, russet accents and gold on the eyes that is positively "unpredictably mystical with black." Try it and see a magic carpet loom on the horizon.

Every spring should have a rosy outlook, so this is to be no exception. Pastel effects will be refreshing with young navy, and for the charming woman who has "grown up without growing old" the group suggests hair toned in blue also.

The most endearing and least withering of the Fashion Group's predictions showed up in the dewy violet look. The model's pale violet dress was worn with lipstick and eye-shadow echoing the costume color, with rouge for extra warmth, emphasizing her blue tones. The skin should be coated rosy beige for this experiment.

Far more important however, it would seem, than the six concepts of luminous makeup for spring is the importance of developing sturdy legs to support the new stiletto heels that will be worn by fair ladies who are style-bound (but not budget-bound). These are beautiful but delicate and breathtakingly fragile. (They'll give you heart failure.)

The Fashion Group looks to a revival of wide, wide waves, dipped over the ear with wisps of bangs, "the French twist."

The bidding:
South, 1 spade; West, Pass; North, 2 spades; East, Pass.
South, 4 spades; West, Pass; North, Pass; East, Pass.

Opening lead: King of hearts.

There is a natural reluctance to get down to fundamentals lest the reader feel that a patronizing attitude is being adopted toward him. But a recent case from real life prompts today's sermon, which has to do with the subject of covering honors.

Today's final contract of four spades was reached on very normal bidding. Those who came to scoff will point out that there is no reasonable play for the hand, and yet the bidding is regarded as correct.

'What is wrong with modern bidding methods?" they inquire. Nothing. No pretense has ever been made that our bidding tactics are calculated to attain perfection. In isolated cases, unmakable contracts must be reached, and no method has yet been devised, nor is one ever likely to be, to cover completely the hazards of duplication of values.

It is unfortunate that North has the same doubleton as South, the same worthless trebleton, and that the queen of diamonds happens to be a completely useless card.

South was lucky enough to overcome the obstacles of nature and bring home the contract because East was addicted to ancient bromides. Three heart tricks were cashed by the defense in quick succession.

Declarer obtained the lead, drew trumps, and led the queen of clubs from dummy. It was part of East's religion to cover; so South won with the ace and finessed the nine of clubs on the return.

East's cover of the queen of clubs in this enlightened age ranks as a major offense. There is no possible combination of cards on which East could gain by covering the first lead of clubs. The old slogan had better read: 'Don't cover an honor the first time it is led if it is just as easy to cover the next time."

Stated in a simpler form: "It is not sound practice to cover a sequence of honors until the last care of the sequence is played." East should duck on the lead of the queen of clubs, but should cover the jack, which is the last card of the sequence.

Crippled Children Board, Visitors Honored By The Clifford Strausses

Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Clifford M. Strauss entertained the out-of-town guests, members of the Board of Governors and Crippled Children Board with their wives and husbands. This occasion was prompted by the dedication of the Carolyn Rose Strauss Rehabilitation Center being held this afternoon.

The reception was given in the Cajun Room of the Rendezvous, which was beautifully decorated with arrangements of spring flowers. Silver candelabras and a silver epergne filled with flowers centered the party table.

Mr. and Mrs. James Greenbaum and Mr. and Mrs. Saul Mintz assisted their parents in greeting the guests, who included out of town visitors, members of the Board of Governors and the Crippled Children Board.

Child Gains Friends In Nursery School

By DOROTHY WHIPPLE, M. D.

"My wife has nothing to do but take care of Philip and the house. She even has a car of her own and she and the boy can go wherever they want. But what do you think she wants to do now? She wants to put the boy in a nursery school."

Mr. Caddy was having lunch with some men from the office and he went on:

"There is just no pleasing some women. Schools are O. K. I suppose, for kids whose mothers have to work, but my wife doesn't have to go out and earn money. Why can't she be satisfied to do her job, instead of palming it off on some school?"

Philip was three and a half. He was a healthy, robust little fellow. The Caddys lived in a suburb where there were no young children. He had every imaginable toy and a big backyard with a swing and a sandbox. He and his mother spent their day together. His mother was seldom out of his sight. He "helped" her with the housework in the morning, then they would go outdoors together. Phil was not content to play in the sandbox unless mother was close by to admire his cakes and his tunnels.

Mama's Boy

Phil was very much a mama's boy. Even when they went over to a friend's house Phil stuck pretty close to mother's knee and couldn't be induced to run outside and play with another child.

When a child is a baby all he needs is mother. He needs his physical requirements taken care of. When he is sufficiently grown up to walk and talk he still needs mostly a warm friendly adult to keep him safe and occupied. But the time comes when no adult no matter how perfect can supply all a child's needs.

Children need other children of about the same age. They need to learn the give and take of their peers. They need to learn how other children feel as well as how they act. It's quite impossible for a child to learn to share when he is only with an adult. But where there are several children you have real and meaningful sharing —a most important lesson to be learned.

Companionship

Playmates are important for little children, not just because they have fun together but because it's an important step in education for life.

Nursery school is an ideal way for a youngster to get the companionship. It is a place where he will be with his peers and have some trained and understanding teacher keep him safe and help him get the most from the experience. He also learns that he can be safe and comfortable away from mother.

A child who lives in a home with many brothers and sisters, or in a neighborhood with scores of other children nearby is not in as dire need of nursery school as is the only child who lives in an adult neighborhood. But a good nursery school is a valuable educational experience for any child.

Girl Scout News

Fulfilling an ambition of several years standing, the girls of Troop 18 spent two nights at Pine Wood recently. Leader Lucy Huckabee, one of the mothers, Mrs. Mary Cloninger, Marie Nelson and Yvonne Huckabee helped the girls to have a good time and to do many worthwhile activities. This group of active girls, sixth graders at Sherrouse School, hiked and hiked, cooked breadtwists and their other favorite out of door dishes. Singing and campfires and kapers were fun, but for these experienced campers, the most fun, according to the girls, was the hiking to the river, to the gravel pit, to the cypress grove, where some of the girls sawed off cypress knees to peel and polish.

The troop has recently registered for its fourth year of scouting with the following girls: Ann Adams, Margaret Barlow, Becky Blair, Sandra Cloninger, Melba Duffy, Pam Grover, Martha Guyton, Marjorie Hammons, Joan Humble, Shirley Lotlin, Sissi Loftin, Derlyn Morris, Patricia Plummer, JoAnn Pumphrey, Sage Redding, Peggy Southerland, Ronnie Lee Smith, Irvie Temple, Judy Willis, Jeanne Wroten, Mary Frances Howard.

Recent activities have included taking part in the Juliette Low Fund, the Girl Scout birthday program, the Girl Scout Week television program, and today several of the girls are assisting at the opening of the Carolyn Rose Strauss Center. The group is completely uniformed, making it available for community service.

In spite of all predictions and gray clouds all over, all the hundreds of people who took part in the play day at Pine Wood on the 23rd reached home before the downpour. Registration for the day showed that 345 people took part, but it looked like a larger crowd still, and we suspect that some late comers didn't sign up. There were leaders, at least two papas, big brothers, little brothers and sisters, mothers who furnished transportation, all having fun in the out of doors.

Each troop did what it had planned, and some things it hadn't. Troops 8 and 4 tried their hand very successfully at cooking breadtwists, Troops 42 and 44 joined together to cook pots of campfire stew, Troop 48 made campfire stew, one or two troops cooked weiners. Everybody else brought nosebag lunches. Troop 24 in deciding whether or not to cook, told the leader, "Let's take lunches so we'll have plenty of time for hiking." Evidently they did. Girls of Troop 10 practiced firebuilding, other groups laid trails. An hour before going home time the group gathered around the flag pole where they could sit on the pine needles and sang together.

The conclusion everyone agreed upon was that the fun and adventure of such a day at camp was good for everyone and that the custom should be kept up at least twice a year. Mrs. N. L. Huckabee, day camp chairman, announced day camp plans to the group, saying that the folders will be available this week and urging girls to sign up in their neighborhoods on April 13.

Miss Pilgreen Weds Hollis Raborn

MR. AND MRS. HOLLIS EUGENE RABORN, JR.

A wedding claiming widespread interest was that of Miss Patsy Nora Pilgreen and Hollis Eugene Raborn, Jr., which was solemnized in the home of the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Raborn, in Greensburg. The Rev. James Woodward performed the ceremony before a background of white gladioli and greenery in tall white baskets. Brass vases filled with white chrysanthemums decorated the mantle in the living room.

The bride wore a sheath dress of beige brocaded silk with brown and beige accessories. Her corsage was of pink carnations and her only jewelry was an antique gold necklace and earrings, a gift from the bridegroom. Mrs. Frances Pilgreen Dugdale, of Choudrant, was her cousin's matron of honor. She wore a dress identical in design to the bride's in a darker shade with a corsage of gold chrysanthemums.

Warren K. Foster, cousin of the bridegroom, was the best man.

The bride is the only daughter of Mrs. Nettie McLean, of Baton Rouge and John Henry Pilgreen, of Anniston, Ala.

Following the ceremony a reception was held. Mrs. Raborn received her guests in a suit of beige silk with brown accessories and a corsage of white camellias. She was assisted by Mrs. McLean who chose a dress of navy and matching accessories for her daughter's wedding. Pink camellias formed her corsage. Receiving with them was Mrs. H. W. Aulds, aunt of the bride.

The table in the dining room was covered with a white cut-work cloth and centered with a silver bowl filled with white camellias. The tiered wedding cake was served by Miss Betty Williams and Miss Betty Lindsey poured punch from the opposite end of the table. Miss Cammille Courtney presided over the coffee service during the reception hours.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Raborn left for a short wedding trip in Alabama. Mr. Raborn, a graduate of Greensburg High School, is now serving in the armed forces in Germany.

Among the out-of-town guests attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Kent, of Fluker, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Addison, of Denham Springs, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McLean and son, Bobby Pilgreen, of Baton Rouge, Mr. and Mrs. Hayward Aulds and Miss Linda Aulds, of Choudrant, Mrs. Emmett Womack, Mrs. Price Courtney, Mrs. E. B. McLean, Miss Cammille Courtney, Mrs. Gertrude App and Mrs. Sam Calvit, all of Darlington.

Cooking Tips

When you broil flank steak, cook it no more than four to five minutes on each side. In carving, slice diagonally across long fibers or the meat will be tough.

Your fish chowder will taste particularly good if you add a small chopped carrot to it along with the usual onion. Season with parsley and thyme.

Next time you have a jar of preserved orange slices in the house, serve them with chicken, duck or ham.

Shred celery cabbage thin and cook quickly in a little butter or margarine in a covered skillet. Add a few tablespoons of water, as necessary.

Add celery salt and ginger to a curry sauce for chicken.

Ever dip lamb chops in lemon juice and crushed garlic before broiling? Savory!

Ungiven Gifts May Be Kept

A woman writes as follows: "I was invited to a shower which was being given for my neighbor's daughter. I bought her a very nice present. One afternoon while in the midst of wrapping the present, she dropped in to see me. She admired the gift and I said that it was for Mary's shower. She said Mary was very lucky to be getting such a beautiful present. A week before the shower was to have taken place, the bride's brother passed away and the shower was postponed. The bride was married very quietly and I have heard nothing more about the shower. My husband and I sent her a wedding present. What do I do about the shower present? Since the bride's mother saw it and knows I bought it for her daughter, am I obliged to give it to her anyway, or may I keep it and give it to someone else?

Since the shower was called off and considering that you gave the bride a wedding present there is no obligation to give her an extra present.

Proposing A Man For A Club

Dear Mrs. Post: My husband is head of a large company and is often asked by business acquaintances to put their names up for membership in certain clubs. He does not think that some of these men who ask him to do this will fit in with the other members and does not feel that he can put their names up for membership. Will you please tell us how he can tactfully handle this situation?

Answer: Your husband might explain to these would-be members that he has found that to put a man's name up requires more time and work than he can afford to give and that he has therefore made it a rule never to propose anyone.

Sensitive Husband

Dear Mrs. Post: My niece recently adopted a baby. I wrote her a note telling her how happy I was to hear the news and giving her my best wishes. I addressed the note to my niece alone and did not include her husband. I am being criticized for this. Will you please tell me if I was wrong?

Answer: Although it would have been kinder to have written that you were glad to hear "your and John's news," you should not have been criticized for omitting him.

Should table linen be monogrammed? If so, where should the monogram be placed? This and many ideas on the types of linen for various occasions are included in Mrs. Post's leaflet E-32, "Table Linen." Money, Girls Highlights New Suspense Novel

THE MEGSTONE PLOT By Andrew Garve (Oxford, $2.95).

When a man has an expensive and demanding mistress (who is another man's wife), he needs money. Clive Easton had such a mistress, and he liked money himself. He and Isobel, the lady, dreamed of a marvelous way of life, free of humdrum responsibilities.

Presently they hit on a plan, and although at first they wouldn't take it seriously, it grew on them.

Finally Clive decided to try it, and the plotting progressed until a girl named Lesley got caught up in it. Then two women were one too many — or it looked as if they might be.

This is Andrew Garve right on top — in a fascinating story with terrific suspense, and well drawn, forceful characters . . . an even better Garve than the Garve before.

Add a little piece of cooked ham to that can of green beans you are heating.

Dip eggplant slices in slightly beaten egg, then in seasoned fine dry bread crumbs; fry in deep fat.

Sweet potatoes mashed (after cooking) with lots of butter and orange juice take on fine flavor.

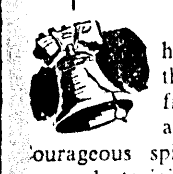
BAPTISTS BELIEVE...

FREEDOM OF THE INDIVIDUAL

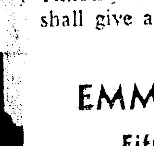


More men have sacrificed their lives for freedom than for any other cause. Courageous spirits everywhere are ready to join Patrick Henry in saying, "Give me liberty or give me death."

Our most cherished freedom is religious freedom. This includes the right of every person to choose for himself whether he shall follow God's way. To seek to prevent or compel such a choice by use of force is contrary to the spirit and will of Christ. This way of thinking Baptists call "the competency of the soul in all matters of religion" and it is a way clearly taught in the Bible.

To a lowly woman drawing water from a well Jesus spoke great truths about the nature of God, how to worship him. This face-to-face encounter demonstrates the emphasis Jesus puts on the individual (John 4:1-26).

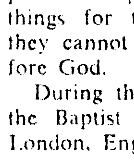
Jesus also told of a good shepherd who was not satisfied until the last lost sheep was found. Though the rest of the world should live in safety, as long as even one person is outside God's kingdom, the yearning, loving heart of God cannot be satisfied. To him the individual is of supreme importance.



The Bible points the way to this truth. "There is one God, and one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus" (1 Timothy 2:5); "Every one of us shall give account of himself to God" (Romans 14:12). "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name" (John 1:12).

To agree that the individual has a right—and ought to have freedom—to make his own religious choice raises a serious question about infant baptism because the infant can make no choice.

For a child to receive baptism without his knowledge and consent seems to Baptists to be contrary to the spirit and letter of the New Testament. It means that one of life's most sacred ceremonies is imposed upon him without his will. Baptist churches baptize only those who have believed in Christ for themselves. They believe that parents, pastors and priests may do many things for the individual, but they cannot take his place before God.



During the 1955 meeting of the Baptist World Alliance in London, England, a world-wide statement on religious freedom was adopted. Among other things, the statement said:

"A person is not physically born into a religious faith, but must of his own free will enter upon his inheritance as a child of God. A man's right to choose or change his faith must be preserved, as well as his liberty to dissent or to make objection because of conscience's sake."

It is more important to let freedom prevail today than ever before, beginning in the life of the individual.

Catahoula Schools First In State To Start Teletraining

ENTERPRISE, March 30 (Special) — The Catahoula Parish school system is the first in the state to install a new teletraining course. Equipment and materials are furnished free by Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co. Local teachers provide the instruction.

The purpose of the course is to provide guidance which will teach students to learn to use the telephone in a correct and pleasing way.

The teaching of telephone techniques has become an accepted part of the language arts as well as business education. As a familiar instrument in the management of the modern household, the use of the telephone has been included in home and family-living education.

Motion picture films are also furnished by Bell Telephone for use in the course. Arrangements can be made for teachers and for groups of students to visit various buildings and offices of the telephone company to further broaden background and improve their knowledge of this communications system.

In speaking to a group taking the course at Block High last Friday, a telephone spokesman noted that they were not guinea pigs even though they were the first in Louisiana to start the teletraining course. I has been used effectively in other states.

Catahoula has been recommended by the state board of education to initiate the new course in this state. Parish school officials are to be commended for accepting the responsibility for administration of this sign of educational progress.

Cooked chopped onion, celery and green pepper in a little butter. Add cooked leftover rice and soy sauce to taste. Reheat.

Garden Jobs Grow As Spring Comes

By Mildred Swift

Ouachita Parish is perfect picture, now. I can't begin to tell you all the directions to drive to see everything. Some camellias are still blooming. Azaleas are gorgeous. Red buds are waning. Bridal Wreath is at its height (Reeves). Crab apples are still blooming. Dogwoods, both pink and white are gorgeous. Wisteria is just coming in. Spring bulbs, some varieties are still blooming. Fringe tree will be blossoming in about ten days (depending on weather). And — the grass is growing. It does take a lawn to frame those lovely blooming plants.

Garden Jobs

When selecting fall blooming bulbs don't forget your lycoris or spider lilies. You're all familiar with the common red that makes such a lovely splash of color in the fall. They also come in yellow (L. Aurea), pink (L. Squirmagera), and white (alba). The pink are really gorgeous. The blooms are much larger than the red. All multiply fast, but we haven't found the yellow and white bulbs to be as hardy as the pink and red.

So many of you are having scale troubles on azaleas and camellias. Spray with oil emulsion or malathion. In fact, malathion is an excellent spray for so man "ailments" among plants. Miss Chautte, our Garden Specialist, recommends one tablespoon malathion, one tablespoon captan to a gallon of water for spraying roses for leaf spot and aphids.

April is the month for dividing and resetting violets. This little plant just seems to disappear unless reset every three years. Violets love plenty of humus worked in the soil, so make frequent trips to the compost pile.

Chrysanthemums may be divided the last of April or May. Remember, that your best plants come from new shoots rather than from the old central root. This plant loves a rich soil, roots not crowded. Also, they like plenty of food and water.

Healthy plants also come from Chrysanthemum cuttings. Use the healthy new shoots, about three inches long, and leave the top leaves on. Dip the cut end in one of the commercial root inducing materials. We have a leaflet on growing Chrysanthemums. Just call 3-2251.

Some seed you can plant this month are: sweet alyssium, four-o-clock, moonflower, periwinkle, portulaca, sunflower, ageratum, marigold, torenia, petunia, cosmos, zinnia, balsam. Portulara (moss rose) makes a lovely ground cover, as does sweet alyssium. Portulaca will stand lots of dry weather, will reset and comes back year after year.

More Gardening

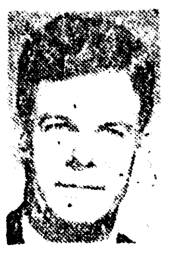
There are a few flowering cherries growing around the Twin Cities. I have a very beautiful one blooming in my garden, but generally they're not too hardy in this area. Let's concentrate our energies on plants that want to grow for us.

Watch for the web-worm on your crabapples. Thousands of the sneaking wigglers enclose themselves in a spider-like web. The limb dies and the worms keep spreading. You can burn these out like you do your pecans, but the crabapple tree is small and a badly burned limb is really not pretty. I've controlled them well with malathion. Just shoot the spray right into the web and you'll kill every one. Watch carefully and get every web as it forms.

See you next Sunday.

Save All Your Topsoil When Building A House

By William Lanier Hunt



The column would like to call the attention of people who are about to build new houses to the fact that they should save their topsoil. As soon as the area on which the house is to be built is staked off, go over your lot with the builder and designate a spot where the topsoil can be left together. Do not allow topsoil to be used in grading the lot. Do not allow topsoil to be covered up, either.

Unless your lot has been a bare field for years, with no trees nor growth of any kind on it, the top few inches, at least, will be worth keeping together. Sometimes topsoil is quite deep. It is just as easy for your builder to keep this soil together as it is to scatter it, use it for fill or cover it up carelessly where you cannot find it when he has left. Usually, it is only a matter of calling a contractor's attention to this matter to get him to save your best soil.

If you are going to have a considerable amount of driveway on your lot, the topsoil on the driveway may just as well be pushed aside as left on it. Rich leafy soil is sticky and gets ground up by delivery trucks running through it in ruts. It may well be replaced with gravel before the driveway is run over by the trucks.

The top few inches of soil are valuable if they have any humus in them at all. It is not the richness in nitrogen alone that makes them valuable but the fact that they contain the living bacteria and organisms in soil that are necessary to plant growth. Underneath the topsoil, the pure mineral dirt has few if any such organisms.

Even the small amount of topsoil removed from the area of your future house and driveway will help you with your landscaping a year from now. You will actually not cultivate a very large part of your lot. When you add the topsoil you have saved to the relatively small areas in flowerbeds and shrub borders, you are apt to have close to enough for your requirements.

While you are waiting for the house to be built, one of the things that you can do to ease that frustration every one feels about not being able to do anything to improve the lot is to order some humus of some kind and mix it with your topsoil. Decayed leaves, rotted saw dust, peat moss or (just anything except fresh saw dust will do. A big double handfull of complete fertilizer — 5-10-5, 5-8-6 or even 8-8-8 per bushel of humus used will build up a soil that will make up for the lost time in the growth of shrubs and flowers when you do get into the house.

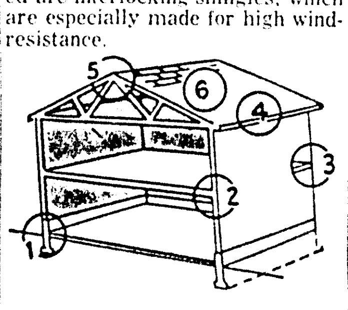
Unless you have great quantities of brush and small wood too small to use for firewood, put them in a low place and cover them with soil. A little fertilizer scattered over the pile every month or so will soon make humus for the flower beds.

Strong Winds Can't Damage Good Building

Ordinary frame or masonry farm buildings can be constructed to withstand storm winds of hurricane velocities of more than 100 miles per hour, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

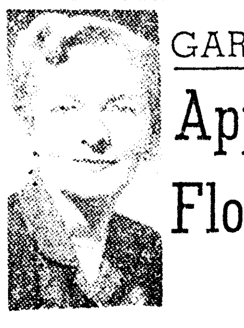
High winds would do much less damage if it weren't for weaknesses caused by poor construction. Key structural points are shown in the drawing. Improper application is the main cause of roofing damage. Asphalt shingles will resist extreme storm winds when properly applied. There are a number of cases on record where hurricanes or tornados have lifted entire roof structures off buildings without disturbing the shingles.

For application on farm buildings in windy areas, asphalt shingle manufacturers usually recommend fastening down square - butt shingles tabs with quick - setting asphalt cement. Also recommended are interlocking shingles, which are especially made for high wind-resistance.



Farm buildings and other structures will resist winds of hurricane velocities if special attention is given to construction at these key points: (1) foundation, (2) joist connections at sidewalls, (3) connection of flooring to end wall, (4) rafter and plate connection, (5) ridge connections, and (6) roofing application.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES



Applying Design In Flower Arrangement

By Mary M. Jardine

(The following article by Esther Wheeler is reprinted by permission of Plants and Gardens, The Brooklyn Botanic Garden Record.

In a fine sense, flower arrangement is one of the creative arts, and unquestionable it is an art of selection and composition. It certainly does not depend upon the dexterity of the hand, or on skill in craftsmanship for its success, but rather on the skill of selection and arrangement. To effect work of a high standard and to be outstanding as an arranger, power of imagination and of artistic synthesis are most necessary.

One must have an unerring sense of (1) just what is appropriate, (2) a clear conception of what is harmonious and beautiful relative to form and color, and with plant material. A flower arranger must be able to choose from the available supplies those things which possess fitness and beauty, and then have the ability to combine and arrange them to get a harmonious picture. This process of combination is called composition. Frankly, it requires precisely that complex of appreciation, discrimination, judgment, and knowledge connoted by the words "good taste."

As poetry combines words into phrases, lines, and stanzas so that each word and phrase helps the others, so it is with "painting pictures with flowers." Everything helps everything else. The four basic elements of good design—proportion, structure, movement, and beauty of line, must be maintained. With these four elements in mind, one takes lines, forms, colors, and textures, and arranges them in a given space so that each is helpful to the other. The harmony of the whole will vary according to individual tastes and temperaments.

A flower arranger's greatest source of inspiration is nature. Nature has unlimited and inexhaustible form and design from which to draw, and it is from these forms and designs that original ideas are formulated. The arranger also learns from nature the rhythm of movement and grace of line, which are so necessary to make a pleasing arrangement. While it is true that one must have balance, good proportion, strong structural lines, and an interesting silhouette, it is the rhythmic line which expresses beauty in the finished design.

Why is rhythm considered an essential principle in the creation of a design? It is because it expresses "living growth" and a flower arrangement to be really good, must seem "alive."

Line is in itself a mathematical abstraction, but when used by a flower arrangement artist, it is an imaginary axis to some extent and its power is indisputable. Line conveys or communicates action and life. It denotes expression through definite positions, and a line, imaginary or real in a flower composition, has a power to call into consciousness, to a greater or lesser degree, certain emotions. For example, one associates straight lines with strength and force, and curved lines with ideas of flexibility, buoyancy, and grace. Horizontal lines express calmness and repose, or activity and support. Straight lines can only vary in length and are least ornamental, while curved lines, as they vary in degrees of curvature as well as length, begin on that account to be ornamental.

WOMEN RECEIVE TRAINING

Miss Marjorie Arbour, editor of extension service at L. S. U., will train the Home Demonstration club women in reporting club news Tuesday, at 9:30. The group will meet in the Agricultural Auditorium, West Monroe. Each club reporter is urged to take advantage of this fine opportunity and bring one other interested person. The local papers have been invited to have a representative to assist with this workshop.

HOME GARDENING

An increased interest in home vegetable gardening for 1957 is expected because of high food prices, the situation in which farm families find themselves, and the fact that many people have more leisure and like to see things grow. Even though we can't have a big garden there are a few vegetables which are at their best if grown at home. This is especially true of tomatoes. To grow tomatoes, apply 10 pounds of 8-8-8 to 100 foot row, work well into the soil. Let stand ten days then plant seed two feet apart and thin out or put out plants that have been in cold frames.

Plants that have been hardened in cold frames can be easily transplanted. Those from hot beds are more difficult to transplant. Varieties recommended are: Marglobe, Rutgers, Louisiana All Season, and Vancross. Side dress with 2 pounds of nitrate per 100 foot row when first blossoms appear. You may straw the bed heavily and not stake the plants. If the soil is infested with nematodes, treat soil with Dowfume W-40 before planting. For information on growing other vegetables you may call for the Louisiana Home Gardening Guide, phone 3-2251.

LANDSCAPE GARDENING

Now is the time to plant fall blooming bulbs. Get them to fit your color scheme. Lycorus, commonly called spider or Nerine lilies, comes in several colors. L. radiant is red, L. aurea is yellow, L. squirmagera is pale pink, L. alba is white. Lycorus does best in rich soil and should be well mulched. They do better when left undisturbed. As soon as spring flowering shrubs finish blooming, prune them — bridal wreath, spirea, Van Houette and Reeve's, flowering quince, flowering almond, primrose jasmine and even slight pruning of azaleas and camellias if desired.

Rose lovers need to spray once a week for leaf spot and aphids. A good formula is one tablespoon captan, one tablespoon malathion to one gallon of water.

Authorities say — Spray azaleas and camellias with oil emulsion in early April. Cape Jasmines should also be sprayed with oil emulsion for white fly.

QUICK SHADE FOR HOT SUMMER

It takes time to grow trees — but you can have some shade by planting castor beans and vines — Morning Glory, Moon or Cypress vines can be grown quickly. Soak all these seeds over night in hot water before planting. Mrs. Charles C. Beadles, 502 Avoyelles street used castor beans to break the hot sun from the car port of her new home last summer. Don't forget to plant some vinca — the upright growing kind. Vinca requires little or no care and is beautiful until frost.

Insulation Cuts Expense Of Air Conditioning

An air-conditioned home needs thick insulation in its ceilings, walls, and floor to make air conditioning practical, economical and completely comfortable, according to one of the nation's leading researchers in the field of home comfort.

Prof. John R. Watt, of the University of Texas, told an audience of air conditioning engineers and members of the National Association of Home Builders that:

"Every dollar's worth of insulation you install will cut an equivalent amount off the cost of air conditioning equipment. A well insulated house will save about $80 on equipment costs.."

Studies have shown that thick mineral wool also reduces the costs of air conditioning by lowering operating expenses.

The effectiveness of mineral wool in making homes easier and more economical to air condition lies in the fact that tiny "dead air" spaces are trapped in the wool. This "dead" air blocks the passage of heat keeping summer warmth out of the house.

As an aid to winter comfort and economy, mineral wool works the other way around, keeping heat inside.

Owners of existing houses who plan to install air-conditioning systems, or who want to gain more economy in winter heating, can install batts or blankets of mineral wool themselves in accessible ceiling and wall areas.

THE HOME SHIFT

Garden Jobs Grow As Spring Comes

By Mildred Swift

Ouachita Parish is perfect picture, now. I can't begin to tell you all the directions to drive to see everything. Some camellias are still blooming. Azaleas are gorgeous. Red buds are waning. Bridal Wreath is at its height (Reeves). Crab apples are still blooming. Dogwoods, both pink and white are gorgeous. Wisteria is just coming in. Spring bulbs, some varieties are still blooming. Fringe tree will be blossoming in about ten days (depending on weather). And — the grass is growing. It does take a lawn to frame those lovely blooming plants.

Garden Jobs

When selecting fall blooming bulbs don't forget your lycorus or spider lilies. You're all familiar with the common red that makes such a lovely splash of color in the fall. They also come in yellow (L. Aurea), pine (L. Squirmagera), and white (alba). The pink are really gorgeous. The blooms are much larger than the red. All multiply fast, but we haven't found the yellow and white bulbs to be as hardy as the pink and red.

So many of you are having scale troubles on azaleas and camellias. Spray with oil emulsion or malathion. In fact, malathion is an excellent spray for so man "ailments" among plants. Miss Chauffe, our Garden Specialist, recommends one tablespoon malathion, one tablespoon captan to a gallon of water for spraying roses for leaf spot and aphids.

April is the month for dividing and resetting violets. This little plant just seems to disappear unless reset every three years. Violets love plenty of humus worked in the soil, so make frequent trips to the compost pile.

Chrysanthemums may be divided the last of April or May. Remember, that your best plants come from new shoots rather than from the old central root. This plant loves a rich soil, roots not crowded. Also, they like plenty of food and water.

Healthy plants also come from Chrysanthemum cuttings. Use the healthy new shoots, about three inches long, and leave the top leaves on. Dip the cut end in one of the commercial root inducing materials. We have a leaflet on growing Chrysanthemums. Just call 3-2251.

Some seed you can plant this month are: sweet alyssium, four-o-clock, moonflower, periwinkle, portulaca, sunflower, ageratum, marigold, torenia, petunia, cosmos, zinnia, balsam. Portulara (moss rose) makes a lovely ground cover, as does sweet alyssium. Portulaca will stand lots of dry weather, will reset and comes back year after year.

More Gardening

There are a few flowering cherries growing around the Twin Cities. I have a very beautiful one blooming in my garden, but generally they're not too hardy in this area. Let's concentrate our energies on plants that want to grow for us.

Watch for the web-worm on your crabapples. Thousands of the sneaking wigglers enclose themselves in a spider-like web. The limb dies and the worms keep spreading. You can burn these out like you do your pecans, but the crabapple tree is small and a badly burned limb is really not pretty. I've controlled them well with malathion. Just shoot the spray right into the web and you'll kill every one. Watch carefully and get every web as it forms.

See you next Sunday.

Save All Your Topsoil When Building A House

By William Lanier Hunt

The column would like to call the attention of people who are about to build new houses to the fact that they should save their topsoil. As soon as the area on which the house is to be built is staked off, go over your lot with the builder and designate a spot where the topsoil can be left together. Do not allow topsoil to be used in grading the lot. Do not allow topsoil to be covered up, either.

Unless your lot has been a bare field for years, with no trees nor growth of any kind on it, the top few inches, at least, will be worth keeping together. Sometimes topsoil is quite deep. It is just as easy for your builder to keep this soil together as it is to scatter it, use it for fill or cover it up carelessly where you cannot find it when he has left. Usually, it is only a matter of calling a contractor's attention to this matter to get him to save your best soil.

If you are going to have a considerable amount of driveway on your lot, the topsoil on the driveway may just as well be pushed aside as left on it. Rich leafy soil is sticky and gets ground up by delivery trucks running through it in ruts. It may well be replaced with gravel before the driveway is run over by the trucks.

The top few inches of soil are valuable if they have any humus in them at all. It is not the richness in nitrogen alone that makes them valuable but the fact that they contain the living bacteria and organisms in soil that are necessary to plant growth. Underneath the topsoil the pure mineral dirt has few if any such organisms.

Even the small amount of topsoil removed from the area of your future house and driveway will help you with your landscaping a year from now. You will actually not cultivate a very large part of your lot. When you add the topsoil you have saved to the relatively small areas in flowerbeds and shrub borders, you are apt to have close to enough for your requirements.

While you are waiting for the house to be built, one of the things that you can do to ease that frustration every one feels about not being able to do anything to improve the lot is to order some humus of some kind and mix it with your topsoil. Decayed leaves, rotted saw dust, peat moss or just anything except fresh saw dust will do. A big double handfull of complete fertilizer — 5-10-5, 6-8-6 or even 8-8-8 per bushel of humus used will build up a soil that will make up for the lost time in the growth of shrubs and flowers when you do get into the house.

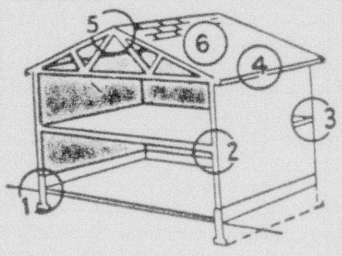
Unless you have great quantities of brush and small wood too small to use for firewood put them in a low place and cover them with soil. A littler fertilizer scattered over the pile every month or so will soon make humus for the flower beds.

Strong Winds Can't Damage Good Building

Ordinary frame or masonry farm buildings can be constructed to withstand storm winds of hurricane velocities of more than 100 miles per hour, according to the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

High winds would do much less damage if it weren't for weaknesses caused by poor construction. Key structural points are shown in the drawing. Improper application is the main cause of roofing damage. Asphalt shingles will resist extreme storm winds when properly applied. There are a number of cases on record where hurricanes or tornados have lifted entire roof structures off buildings without disturbing the shingles.

For application on farm buildings in windy areas, asphalt shingle manufacturers usually recommend fastening down square - butt shingles tabs with quick - setting asphalt cement. Also recommended are interlocking shingles, which are especially made for high wind-resistance.



Farm buildings and other structures will resist winds of hurricane velocities if special attention is given to construction at these key points: (1) foundation, (2) joist connections at sidewalls, (3) connection of flooring to end wall, (4) rafter and plate connection, (5) ridge connections, and (6) roofing application.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Applying Design In Flower Arrangement

By Mary M. Jardine

(The following article by Esther Wheeler is reprinted by permission of Plants and Gardens, The Brooklyn Botanic Garden Record.

In a fine sense, flower arrangement is one of the creative arts, and unquestionable it is an art of selection and composition. It certainly does not depend upon the dexterity of the hand, or on skill in craftsmanship for its success, but rather on the skill of selection and arrangement. To effect work of a high standard and to be outstanding as an arranger, power of imagination and of artistic synthesis are most necessary.

One must have an unerring sense of (1) just what is appropriate, (2) a clear conception of what is harmonious and beautiful relative to form and color, and with plant material. A flower arranger must be able to choose from the available supplies those things which possess fitness and beauty, and then have the ability to combine and arrange them to get a harmonious picture. This process of combination is called composition. Frankly, it requires precisely that complex of appreciation, discrimination, judgment, and knowledge connoted by the words "good taste."

As poetry combines words into phrases, lines, and stanzas so that each word and phrase helps the others, so it is with "painting pictures with flowers." Everything helps everything else. The four basic elements of good design—proportion, structure, movement, and beauty of line, must be maintained. With these four elements in mind, one takes lines, forms, colors, and textures, and arranges them in a given space so that each is helpful to the other. The harmony of the whole will vary according to individual tastes and temperaments.

A flower arranger's greatest source of inspiration is nature. Nature has unlimited and inexhaustible form and design from which to draw, and it is from these forms and designs that original ideas are formulated. The arranger also learns from nature the rhythm of movement and grace of line, which are so necessary to make a pleasing arrangement. While it is true that one must have balance, good proportion, strong structural lines, and an interesting silhouette, it is the rhythmic line which expresses beauty in the finished design.

Why is rhythm considered an essential principle in the creation of a design? It is because it expresses "living growth" and a flower arrangement to be really good, must seem "alive."

'River's Edge' Suspense Drama

Some of the most picturesque parts of Mexico and the American Southwest will provide the backgrounds for Twentieth Century Fox's CinemaScope - DeLuxe color production of "The River's Edge," which opens today at the Paramount Theatre.

"The River's Edge" combines the talents of two Academy Award winners, Ray Milland ("The Lost Weekend") and Anthony Quinn ("Viva Zapata"), co-starred together for the first time, in a suspenseful congest for the affections of one of the screen's rising young beauties, Debra Paget. Milland, one of the few top stars who can cope with comedy and drama with equal versatility, plays a smooth talking con man and vicious killer in the Benedict Bogeaus production.

Anthony Quinn, one of the screen's most enduringly popular and busiest stars, comes into "The River's Edge" fresh from two exciting, prize-winning performances in "Last for Life" and "La Strada." The action-packed drama provides him with a characterization of a two-fisted Korean war veteran turned modest ranch and hunter's guide in New Mexico.

These two men fight it out "tooth-and-nail" for a ravishing redhead played by Debra Paget who, as a violently strong-minded "bad girl," can't make up her mind which of the two men she really loves.

The plot pivot of this suspense-filled drama is a satchel full of stolen money with which Milland is trying to escape into Mexico. He needs Quinn and his wife (Debra Paget) to guide him over precipitous mountain backroads to avoid the ranging border patrol.

To photograph "The River's Edge" in the rugged country chosen for its locale, a caravan of equipment was shipped to such exciting Mexican sites as the settlement at Ameca - Ameca, Lake Tehuantepec, and the spectacular Gorge of the Gods — the latter at an altitude of 16,000 feet above sea level.

"TEN THOUSAND BEDROOMS" — Dean Martin and Dewey Martin learn about romance in Rome from Eva Bartok, left, and Anna Marie Alberghetti, starring in M-G-M's CinemaScope comedy with music, "Ten Thousand Bedrooms," which opens Friday at the Jim Theatre.

'The Tattered Dress' Is Courtroom Drama

Courtroom dramas, when well done, are among the most absorbing of films, and Universal-International's "The Tattered Dress, which opens today at the Jim Theatre, has a taut, suspenseful story that is not only well produced but excellently acted.

Filmed in CinemaScope, the picture boasts a five - star cast — namely Jeff Chandler, Jeanne Crain, Jack Carson, Gail Russell and Elaine Stewart — in its leads, and they are backed up by such accomplished performers as George Tobias, Edward Andrews and Philip Reed.

Chandler gives perhaps the finest performance of his career as a brilliant criminal lawyer hired to defend Reed on a charge of murder in a small California desert resort town. He wins the case but then is forced back into court to defend himself against a jury-bribing charge trumped up by a corrupt sheriff, expertly played by Jack Carson. Thus there are two thrilling trial sequences in this film and it is difficult to say which is the more dramatic.

This is the kind of picture in which every actor seems inspired to give his best. Performances by Miss Crain, as Chandler's estranged wife; Miss Russell, as the woman used to frame Chandler, and Elaine Stewart, as the predatory, two - timing wife of Reed, are remarkable in their delineation of character, and it is safe to say that none of the players has ever appeared to better advantage.

Miss Stewart, turned platinum blonde for this role, emerges as a new screen personality. Hers is a flashy role and she makes the most of it.

This is a picture of mounting climaxes, with one thrill after another, for, though it is essentially a courtroom drama, there are three murders and the story is never static. For comedy relief, there is George Tobias, comedian friend of Chandler's, who eventually, however, becomes another tragic victim of the evil sheriff.

Produced by Albert Zugsmith, the picture is excellently directed by Jack Arnold from a literate, eloquent and exciting script, written by George Zuckerman.

Little Theatre Curtain Call

By BETH BREESE

Your date to remember — Friday, April 5 — opening night for "Dangerous Corner", your Little Theatre's fourth production of the season. Should be a gala night with one of the most lavish sets you've seen to date and smart clothes to help add the glamour touch to a play that's fast - paced, exciting and breathtakingly suspenseful.

Add a familiar name to the cast: Sylvester Breard. Syl has been cast as Staunton in "Dangerous Corner", and from past plays we've seen him do well, we'll looking forward to this good performance too.

This from the Ivan Needs Department: People! People for the crew. He especially needs a stage manager and a chairman of properties. Call Ivan if you'd like to join the fun of a Little Theatre production.

Ivan also needs: a copy of The London Times — you have one? A gun that fires blanks — how about one of those? Isn't it always amazing the number of props that must be gathered for the production of just one show? Give Ivan a buzz if you have either of the above, or if you would like to join the show.

Seen at the Playhouse this past week: Howard Lance, giving some professional advice on set decoration; Barbara West; Board of Directors member Bert Root and wife, Billie; Laura Leah Worsham and Dot Elmendorf.

Things Little Theaterites are talking about: Speed Lamkin's recent TV show on Perle Mesta, "The Hostess With The Mostest"; Frances McHenry's trip to New York where she is seeing "My Fair Lady" for the third time (we're just glad we know someone who's seen it that many times!); Frank Breese's invitation to toastmaster, the big banquet at the Southwest Regional Convention of the National Association of Insurance Women in Shreveport; the Dan Cupid in our midst — the same Dan Cupid who has been responsible for other Little Theater romances. Wish we could let you in on the secret, but it wouldn't be quite cricket until they announce it formally!

And with that bit of tantalizing information we'll leave you 'til next week!

HERE MONDAY

'River's Edge' Suspense Drama

Some of the most picturesque parts of Mexico and the American Southwest will provide the backgrounds for Twentieth Century Fox's CinemaScope - DeLuxe color production of "The River's Edge," which opens today at the Paramount Theatre.

"The River's Edge" combines the talents of two Academy Award winners, Ray Milland ("The Lost Weekend") and Anthony Quinn ("Viva Zapata"), co-starred together for the first time, in a suspenseful congest for the affections of one of the screen's rising young beauties, Debra Paget. Milland, one of the few top stars who can cope with comedy and drama with equal versatility, plays a smooth talking con man and vicious killer in the Benedict Bogeaus production.

Anthony Quinn, one of the screen's most enduringly popular and busiest stars, comes into "The River's Edge" fresh from two exciting, prize-winning performances in "Lust for Life" and "La Strada." The action-packed drama provides him with a characterization of a two-fisted Korean war veteran turned modest ranch and hunter's guide in New Mexico.

These two men fight it out "tooth-and-nail" for a ravishing redhead played by Debra Paget who, as a violently strong-minded "bad girl," can't make up her mind which of the two men she really loves.

The plot pivot of this suspense-filled drama is a satchel full of stolen money with which Milland is trying to escape into Mexico. He needs Quinn and his wife (Debra Paget) to guide him over precipitous mountain backroads to avoid the ranging border patrol.

To photograph "The River's Edge" in the rugged country chosen for its locale, a caravan of equipment was shipped to such exciting Mexican sites as the settlement at Ameca - Ameca, Lake Tehuantepec, and the spectacular Gorge of the Gods — the latter at an altitude of 16,000 feet above sea level.

WINNSBORO, March 30 (Special) — Revival services will be held at the Lone Pine Baptist Church, located about 12 miles northeast of here, starting Sunday, March 31, and continuing through April 7.

'The Tattered Dress' Is Courtroom Drama

Courtroom dramas, when well done, are among the most absorbing of films, and Universal-International's "The Tattered Dress, which opens today at the Jim Theatre, has a taut, suspenseful story that is not only well produced but excellently acted.

Filmed in CinemaScope, the picture boasts a five - star cast — namely Jeff Chandler, Jeanne Crain, Jack Carson, Gail Russell and Elaine Stewart — in its leads, and they are backed up by such accomplished performers as George Tobias, Edward Andrews and Philip Reed.

Chandler gives perhaps the finest performance of his career as a brilliant criminal lawyer hired to defend Reed on a charge of murder in a small California desert resort town. He wins the case but then is forced back into court to defend himself against a jury-bribing charge trumped up by a corrupt sheriff, expertly played by Jack Carson. Thus there are two thrilling trial sequences in this film and it is difficult to say which is the more dramatic.

This is the kind of picture in which every actor seems inspired to give his best. Performances by Miss Crain, as Chandler's estranged wife; Miss Russell, as the woman used to frame Chandler, and Elaine Stewart, as the predatory, two - timing wife of Reed, are remarkable in their delineation of character, and it is safe to say that none of the players has ever appeared to better advantage.

Miss Stewart, turned platinum blonde for this role, emerges as a new screen personality. Hers is a flashy role and she makes the most of it.

This is a picture of mounting climaxes, with one thrill after another, for, though it is essentially a courtroom drama, there are three murders and the story is never static. For comedy relief, there is George Tobias, comedian friend of Chandler's, who eventually, however, becomes another tragic victim of the evil sheriff.

Produced by Albert Zugsmith, the picture is excellently directed by Jack Arnold from a literate, eloquent and exciting script, written by George Zuckerman.

Little Theatre Curtain Call

By BETH BREESE

Your date to remember — Friday, April 5 — opening night for "Dangerous Corner", your Little Theatre's fourth production of the season. Should be a gala night with one of the most lavish sets you've seen to date and smart clothes to help add the glamour touch to a play that's fast - paced, exciting and breathtakingly suspenseful.

Add a familiar name to the cast: Sylvester Breard. Syl has been cast as Staunton in "Dangerous Corner", and from past plays we've seen him do well, we'll looking forward to this good performance too.

This from the Ivan Needs Department: People! People for the crew. He especially needs a stage manager and a chairman of properties. Call Ivan if you'd like to join the fun of a Little Theatre production.

Ivan also needs: a copy of The London Times — you have one? A gun that fires blanks — how about one of those? Isn't it always amazing the number of props that must be gathered for the production of just one show? Give Ivan a buzz if you have either of the above, or if you would like to join the show.

Seen at the Playhouse this past week: Howard Lance, giving some professional advice on set decoration; Barbara West; Board of Directors member Bert Root and wife, Billie; Laura Leah Worsham and Dot Elmendorf.

Things Little Theaterites are talking about: Speed Lamkin's recent TV show on Perle Mesta, "The Hostess With The Mostest"; Frances McHenry's trip to New York where she is seeing "My Fair Lady" for the third time (we're just glad we know someone who's seen it that many times!); Frank Breese's invitation to toastmaster, the big banquet at the Southwest Regional Convention of the National Association of Insurance Women in Shreveport; the Dan Cupid in our midst — the same Dan Cupid who has been responsible for other Little Theater romances. Wish we could let you in on the secret, but it wouldn't be quite cricket until they announce it formally!

And with that bit ot tantalizing information we'll leave you 'til next week!

HERE MONDAY

Spring Cleaning At Home May Uncover Museum Items

By MARIE KENT

Have you done your spring cleaning yet? Members of the Ouachita Genealogical and Historical Society are looking forward to the time when you dig into your attics and find old relics, diaries and other items with local history background. In the past, attics, closets, and out of way places were the only means of storage we had for the items that held precious memories of our forefathers, but now we have a museum in which they may be placed either as a loan or donation, where they will be cared for and placed on display.

Mrs. Hilda Colbert, a member of our research committee, gives us the following report.

"The men of Monroe have their mementos too. One of the most unusual donations to our museum is a gas rock, which came from the very bottom of a gas well in the Monroe field. This rock formation was donated by J. H. Schrader, long associated with the natural gas industry of Monroe. Rocks have many stories to tell—for years men have studied rocks to learn more about our past and prehistoric times. Geologists make surveys and studies of various rock formations, in order to locate the best possible place to drill for oil and gas.

"We have every reason to pay tribute to the natural gas industry, for our own Twin Cities are located in the very heart of one of the largest natural gas fields in the world.

"The Monroe gas field was discovered in 1916 by a man named Louis Lock. Very little is known about this man, whose discovery brought so much industrial expansion for the Monroe area. He was a quiet, retiring sort of person preferring to work in the back ground and let others take the credit.

"In June of 1953, the Ouachita Parish Public Library of Monroe gave recognition to the accomplishments of Louis Lock by dedicating and naming the large reference room of the library in his memory.

"The late beloved Dr. E. K. Means, in giving the dedicatory address, proclaimed that this fortunate discovery by Louis Lock did more for Monroe than any other single achievement of one man in the history of our municipality."

In appearance the gas rock is very similar to any other rock. Natural gas occurs in the small cavities or pores of porous rocks, generally sandstone or broken limestone known as the "sands", which are covered by a compact shale or cap - rock and underlaid by another fine - grained shale. These rocks were formed from the bodies of animals that once lived in the sea. Part of the bodies were turned into oil and natural gas. It is the local history represented by this rock that makes it a prized item for our museum collecion. Thank you, Mr. Schrader!

Donations need not be priceless antiques or old relics. Anything that played a part in the making of local history is a worthy donation.

Month Long Cancer Fund Drive Near

Hundreds of volunteers of the Ouachita Parish Unit of the American Cancer Society will begin their month-long educational and fund raising Crusade April 1.

Mrs. R. Fred Petty, president of Ouachita Parish Unit of ACS, has announced that these volunteers will be serving under the following committee chairmen: Irving Liebowitz, special gifts, Mrs. C. K. Crandall, residential canvass, Mrs. W. C. Smith, chairman of women's division, West Monroe, Mrs. J. W. Landrum, South Ouachita Parish. Members of the Pilot Club give valuable service to the Cancer Society's campaign each year.

Under the leadership of General Claire L. Chennault and Fred Huenefeld, Jr., parish campaign chairmen, volunteers will seek to alert all residents to the need for a regular health examination as a protection against needless death from cancer and they will work to raise funds which will be used to further the ACS threefold fight of research, education and service.

"Cancer will strike approximately 226 persons in Ouachita Parish in 1957," Huenefeld stated. "One third of these lives will be saved through prompt diagnosis and treatment. However," he continued, "this means that about 150 of these individuals will die from this dread disease. That is why we stress the public education aspect of this campaign and urge all persons to have regular health examinations."

"Today, so far as cancer is concerned, we are much more hopeful. Many people are alive and active today because of the great support given in past campaigns. Yet the American Cancer Society is compelled each year to reject worthwhile research projects because of lack of funds. In the face of the rise in incidence of cancer, expansion of the over-all attack on it demands more funds than ever before."

"Surveys taken by the society and by independent agencies show that public knowledge of cancer is increasing. This in turn is reflected in the remarkable strides being made in lives saved. Given the support for the Cancer Crusade, the Ouachita Parish Unit will expand and intensify its year-round educational program," he concluded.

Those who wish to volunteer for service are requested to register promptly at the Cancer Society's local headquarters, 408 Hudson Lane, or by telephoning 3-0891.

Spring Cleaning At Home May Uncover Museum Items

By MARIE KENT

Have you done your spring cleaning yet? Members of the Ouachita Genealogical and Historical Society are looking forward to the time when you dig into your attics and find old relics, diaries and other items with local history background. In the past, attics closets, and out of way places were the only means of storage. we had for the items that held precious memories of our forefathers, but now we have a museum in which they may be placed either as a loan or donation, where they will be cared for and placed on display.

Mrs. Hilda Colbert, a member of our research committee, gives us the following report.

"The men of Monroe have their mementos too. One of the most unusual donations to our museum is a gas rock, which came from the very bottom of a gas well in the Monroe field. This rock formation was donated by J. H. Schrader, long associated with the natural gas industry of Monroe. Rocks have many stories to tell—for years men have studied rocks to learn more about our past and prehistoric times. Geologists make surveys and studies of various rock formations, in order to locate the best possible place to drill for oil and gas.

"We have every reason to pay tribute to the natural gas industry, for our own Twin Cities are located in the very heart of one of the largest natural gas fields in the world.

"The Monroe gas field was discovered in 1916 by a man named Louis Lock. Very little is known about this man, whose discovery brought so much industrial expansion for the Monroe area. He was a quiet, retiring sort of person, preferring to work in the background and let others take the credit.

"In June of 1953, the Ouachita Parish Public Library of Monroe gave recognition to the accomplishments of Louis Lock by dedicating and naming the large reference room of the library in his memory.

"The late beloved Dr. E. K. Means, in giving the dedicatory address, proclaimed that this fortunate discovery by Louis Lock did more for Monroe than any other single achievement of one man in the history of our municipality."

In appearance the gas rock is very similar to any other rock. Natural gas occurs in the small cavities or pores of porous rocks, generally sandstone or broken limestone known as the "sands", which are covered by a compact shale or cap - rock and underlaid by another fine - grained shale. These rocks were formed from the bodies of animals that once lived in the sea. Part of the bodies were turned into oil and natural gas. It is the local history represented by this rock that makes it a prized item for our museum collecion. Thank you, Mr. Schrader!

Donations need not be priceless antiques or old relics. Anything that played a part in the making of local history is a worthy donation.

THE WORLD OF BOOKS AND MUSIC

Guide To Good Reading Now At The Ouachita Parish Public Library

FRANCES FLANDERS, Librarian

New books added to the library collection this week include a number of interesting books of fiction. A historical novel of more than usual interest is "The Sprig of Hemlock" by Robert Muir. This is a story based on Shay's Rebellion. It is a story of men pushed to the limits of their endurance, beside themselves with worry and debt. Led by Daniel Shays, the men first merely begged for time to pay their debts without being thrown into prison, but soon hot words demanded action. Members of the regulators wore the sprig of hemlock, whence the book gets its title. In this book we make the acquaintance of the Tucker family and get to know each one of them as they are caught up in this tense drama of mob psychology. Gripping indeed is this tale of a little known chapter of American history which paved the way for the Constitution and served notice that men in a democracy need a stable government.

FIELD OF FANTASY

T. H. White is an expert in the field of fantasy. His latest novel is called "The Master". It is the story of twins who were cast away on a desert island and there came in contact with a race of super-civilized beings. The adventures in which they become involved are marvelous but not incredible. Few novels can be read with equal enjoyment by children and grown-ups. This is one that can. It is written in a style and with a purpose which command attention from all classes of readers.

MYSTERY NOVEL

One of the most popular writers of mystery stories is Leslie Ford. Her stories are usually about people whom our readers might know, which is one reason for her popularity. Her latest novel is called "The Girl From the Mimosa Club." This book has its setting in Baltimore and is concerned with the Brayton family and the strange relationship between Dr. Brayton and his wife.

The central character of the story is Johnny Bryaton, a rising young lawyer who falls in love with Kerry O'Keefe, the girl from the Mimosa club and finds himself in all sorts of difficulties.

"Knock and Wait a While" by William Rawle Weeks is a tale of the "Silent War" that rages all over the world to..ay and of the men and women of the U. S. Intelligence service who devote their lives to the interests of our country. It is a novel, but Mr. Weeks has been there and it is closer to truth than any factual account available to the general reader. This is a book to make one stop and think about the forces that threaten our world.

IRISH STORY

"We Are Seven" by Una Troy is a completely unorthodox and completely interesting novel with the setting in Ireland. It is a novel about a charming although unconventional family. The author was born in Ireland and shows in this novel a deep understanding of Irish character. "The Deep Range" by Arthur C. Clarke is a most fantastic novel of the future and will appeal to readers of science fiction. It is the story of a man who was doomed to spend his life under the sea, taking care of the whale herds who furnished so much of the earth's food. If you are a reader of science - fiction, don't miss this one.

COAST GUARD

"Onionhead" is a novel by Weldon Hill with its setting in the Coast Guard. It is the story of a young man who found himself and matured into a fully adult character. Little has been written about life in the Coast Guard and this is a needed book. It is also a good story.

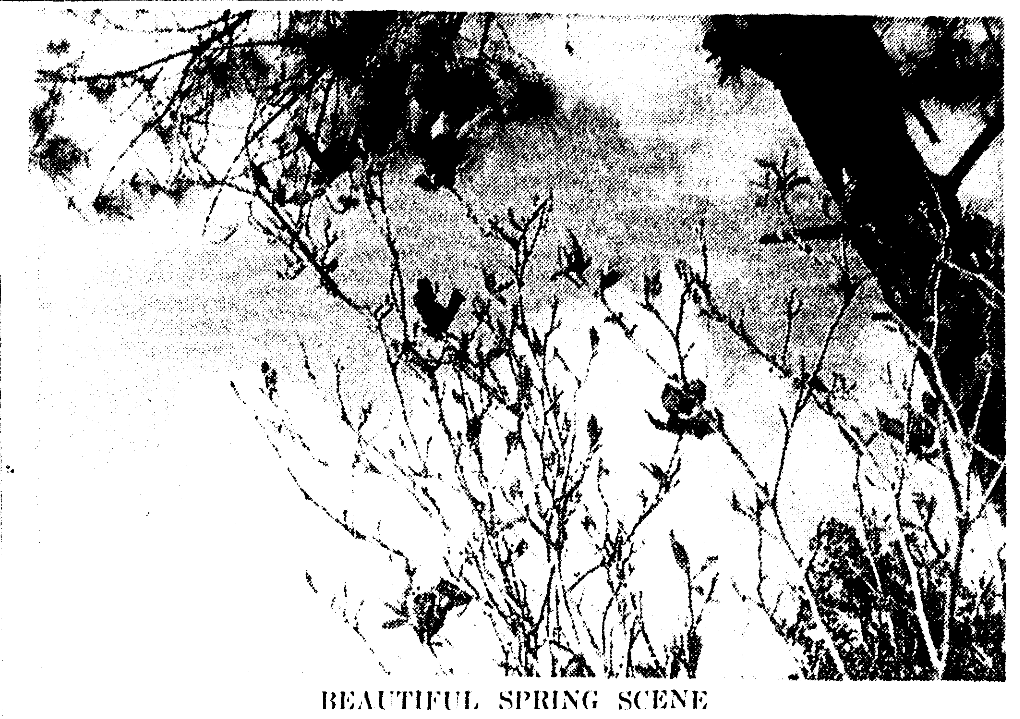
One of the loveliest books of non - fiction which we have received in a long time is called "The Bird Biographies of John James Audubon" selected and edited by Alice Ford. This is a compilation of the text which accompanied his monumental "Birds of America". It has been out of print since 1870. This is a very informative book and one that will be valuable to all bird lovers.

Books by Fulton J. Sheen are always popular. His latest one is called "Way to Inner Peace." It contains thoughtful and inspiring words for the individual in a troubled world.

BOOKS ON MELVILLE

Herman Melville is considered one of the greatest figures in the history of American literature. We are fortunate to have two books dealing with his works among the new additions to the library. One is called "Collected Poems of Herman Melville." The other is a book of literary criticism and is called "Melville and the Comic Spirit." The author of this volume is Edward H. Rosenberry and it is a very fine example of literary criticism.

These and many other new books are available through the branches of your parish library. We hope that all of you will take advantage of its resources.



BEAUTIFUL SPRING SCENE

CAMERA NOTES

Spring Blossoms Good Subjects

By JOHN OLDENBURG
Camera Editor

No doubt, this is one of the most beautiful spring pictures this past week.

John Cale, editorial and sports writer for the News-Star, used some of his fine artistic abilities, when he shot this exquisite picture of Japanese Magnolias under a pine tree.

Mr. Cale, who is an adept hand with his Bolsey 35 mm. camera, gave us this date concerning the picture. With his camera loaded with Panatomic "X" film and set at F-11, shutter speed of 1-50 seconds, he used his viewfinder to get the correct composition. In other words, the picture was printed in the full frame of the negative. He also stated that he tried to compose the picture in such a way that the diagonal line of the tree and the magnolia bush were roughly parallel in the foreground, while the top of the cloud formation intersected the diagonal lines in the background.

With the mid - afternoon sun on the sky and flowers on top of the bush, and the tree in heavy shadows, Mr. Cale visualized through his view finder what the finished print would look like and came up with an exceptional flower scene.

Compare this with some of your flower shots and be amazed at how often poor pictures were the result of lack of composing through the viewfinder.

Here are a couple of hints for shooting flowers: Keep a contrasting background. If necessary, lie down on the ground for a low angle to get the sky as a backdrop for the darker flowers.

If the weather is breezy and flowers are in motion, shoot them with a slightly faster shutter speed as your main subject may turn out fuzzy looking.

Thank you, Mr. Cale, for your fine contribution and all of you others, keep them coming in to the Camera Editor, News-Star — World, Monroe.

'Say Darling' Big Expose Of Heels, Dames

Richard Bissell's Say, Darling (Atlantic - Little, Brown) seems to bite the hand that feeds. After the success of his 7½ Cents, an expose of the garment business, he was called in to collaborate on the musical based on that novel, "The Pajama Game." Say, Darling is an expose of Broadway.

Heels and Broadway dames abound, the talk is slangy and ultra-sophisticated, the back-stabbing murderous, the success incredible, the failure damning. Everything looms larger than life.

Bissell's ear is incredibly sharp, his eye constantly peeled for the fable, the phony and the fraud. Descended more directly from "The Thin Man" than the Hemingway he superficially resembles, he is glib, wisecrack-happy, generally very funny. . . .

Leading Question In Bistro Started Morris' Career

By W. G. ROGERS

NEW YORK, March 30 (AP) — A bearded guy in a sort of Bohemian club in Paris, where everyone was a bit seedy and everyone was doing a novel, a painting or an opera, stopped Wright Morris and asked casually:

"And what are you working on?"

He wasn't working on a thing, Morris says, but the question triggered a literary career which just this month brought Morris a prize regarded by some writers as the choicest, most meaningful offered in this country:

The National Book Award.

Of course, Morris recalls, the query did not surprise him "basically:"

"Teachers thought I could write out in Pomona college. I won prizes there. In Europe that year I kept a journal. So writing was there in the back of my mind. Only three months after the question was put to me, I was back in California writing in earnest.'

His year abroad started in 1933. Used to runnning all over the United States, he decided to give Europe a try. He had $285 and that carried him all the way. One man who befriended him was his host in a great old Danube castle for a couple of months. He lived in Vienna on $3 a week.

A week? I demanded. A week, he insisted.

But he had to wait five years before he sold anything.

"How did you earn a living?" I asked.

"Those are perhaps not the words to use," he answered. "In a way I didn't earn it, and it wasn't what might be called a living. There would be a WPA check, or a pittance my wife or I picked up at teaching. I had had of course a long experience of living on nothing. For that first year we got along, and without a thing to complain of, either, on $35 a month."

WRIGHT MORRIS

Morris has fine, long hair, just slightly turning gray, that sweeps up from his high brow, and he wears a mustache. You might take him for a musician. But he's a novelist, runner - up for the National Book Award in 1953 and now winner with "A Field of Vision."

This is his 10th book; his 11th "Love Among the Cannibals," is due next summer; his 12th is planned. Born in Central City, Neb., in 1910, he was brought up in Chicago. He and his father and other stray people were always racing from mid-America to the Pacific coast and back again in some old car so beaten up that it might have to be turned in on the way. That was the foundation of the knowledge of regional America which has distinguished all his books. In that period he went through "the chaotic experiences" which have been, or will be "processed" into new novels.

"Your useful life as a creative person occurs before you're conscious of it," he believes.

"I led so many lives before I was ever aware of leading any. When you begin to become aware, it begins to spoil. The material below the surface is good always, the other stuff you treat once and it's done."

Morris and his wife, who teaches history, live in Wayne, Pa. He has had three Guggenheim fellowships, in 1942, 1946 and 1954, and has contributed to numerous periodicals. His most extreme creative experiment was two books, "The Inhabitants" and "The Home Place," which combined his photos with his text.

He is off again for a couple of months of writing in California. But he'll be back by smmer.

ANYTHING BUT

Pretty Midwife Upsets Village

THE MIDWIFE OF PONT CLERY By Flora Sandstrom (John Day Books, 256 pps, $3.50).

When a young and pretty midwife arrives in the French village of Pont Clery the women are very worried. They resent her obvious attraction for their men folk, but she is gentle and skillful at her calling and they can find no reasonable grounds for getting rid of her. Besides, she is the only midwife available to them. But old Marie Fresville, the most determined and powerful woman of them all, soon comes to suspect that her granddaughter's fiance is beginning to desire the midwife, and things happen quietly but quickly.

The men continue to think about the little midwife and her slender ankles while working in the fragrant fields, and to discuss her over a Pernod at the cafe Le Chanticler, unaware that their wives have put their heads together and hit upon a foolproof plan for keeping the attractive rival from the village. No more need for the midwife, no more straying husbands. But in picturesque Normandy, as elsewhere, nature will find a way, and the consequences are as amusing as they are unexpected.

Just what takes place in this high - spirited and wholesomely naughty situation imparts to the story a contagious Decameron flavor, and it is treated with deftness and delicacy.

Flora Sandstrom lives with her husband and young daughter in a seventeenth century cottage in Oxfordshire, England. Called "Christmas Cottage," it is a half mile away from the common where the "Roundheads" camped one bitter cold, snow-bound Christmas during the civil war in the early sixteen hundreds. She says, "The common may have changed, but not the winters."

Two New Met Stars Are Seen In Italians

NEW YORK, March 30 (UP)— American audiences have had their first chance to compare the Metropolitan Opera's two foremost Italian prima donnas. The partisans are vociferous, of course, but the only objective conclusion is that the Met now has two extraordinary females to pit against one another for the greater glory of the box office.

After Maria Meneghini Callas had dominated the first half of the current season and returned to Italy, Renata Tebaldi arrived from Italy and set right out to dominate the second half. Her first big effort was as Violetta in an entirely new production of Verdi's "La Traviata." She proved herself in Callas' league in every respect.

As Mickey Mantle is supposed to stimulate Yogi Berra, Callas obviously has stimulated Tebaldi. strength was in assuming the character of an operatic heroine with ferocious intensity and spell-making vividness. Heretofore Tebaldi has fallen short of this standard of magnetic histrionics.

More Voice

But no longer. As Violetta she was Violetta, every inch of her which, by the way, add up to considerably more inches than Callas adds up to. And there you have the one category in which Callas will always excel. She has the gift of being contented with little to eat and so she is skinny, whereas Tebaldi's nutrition obviously is keyed to her larger frame and is efficient. So there has to be a certain visual contradiction when Tebaldi sings the tubercular Violetta or the tubercular Mimi of "La Boheme."

On the other hand, nature was much more bountiful to Tebaldi than to Callas in the matter of voice — and voice, after all, is of paramount importance to an opera singer. As Violetta, Tebaldi's vocal riches were flung through the opera house with prodigious generosity. She's not a better musician than Callas, understand; but she has a finer instrument with which to exercise her musicianship.

Warren Helped

There were no gargled pianissimo passages by Tebaldi, not any thinned and shrilly fortissimos. Here and there she missed her aim when reaching for a particular note, true, and had to slide into it, but her Violetta made musical emotional sense of the highest degree. The wonder of Callas is that she can do so much with a less-than-great voice; the wonder of Tebaldi is the skill with which she handles and embellishes a great voice.

Since Violette spread - eagles "La Traviata," it may be overlooked — and it shouldn't be— that Leonard Warren, an American singer, as you no doubt know, made a most pleasing contribution to the new production in the role of the father. His is a voice really to rave about, and the way he used it and the way he acted to give warmth and sympathetic understanding to a part which rarely gets either, were exceedingly impressive.

CRYSTAL BALL

To See America's Next Twenty Yrs.

AMERICA'S NEXT TWENTY YEARS, By Peter F. Drucker, Harper.

The basic facts about tomorrow, barring the not impossible influence of foreigners—as for instance we were influenced, to put it mildly, by the Japanese at Pearl Harbor—are already established for us. That is, we have a future we can't escape, says Drucker, economist, teacher and management consultant.

That future consists of a shortage of labor with respect to the needs of a population much larger in the two unproductive extremes, youth and age.

There are many corollaries and consequences of this, Drucker claims. One is the danger of inflation; others are not enough college-educated men in the era of automation; not enough venture capital; not enough raw materials.

We're going to join the have-not nations, Drucker warns; the ill effects of this fate could be countered, we are told, by assisting in the sound, healthy and friendly development of countries with essential raw materials. A foreign-aid program of "cavity-filling and trouble - shooting" would be inadequate, however.

If Drucker is not rash enough to forecast what our politicians will be arguing, he risks forecasting what they ought to argue: Conservation, medical care, racial integration, power, transportation, housing, schooling, labor unions.

This crystal-ball business is always interesting, but it is after all a crystal-ballgame, and the time to tell the score will be 1977.

Honored From Latin-America

NEW YORK, March 30 (UP)— Four composers from Mexico, Brazil, Panama and Peru have been honored by officials of the Second Latin American Music Festival with cash awards totaling $20,000 for compositions submitted to the festival. The jury considered 120 compositions.

The first prize of $10,000 was divided between the Mexican composer Blas Galindo and Camargo Guarnieri of Brazil, both well-known for their previous contributions to the development of classical music in Latin America.

Galindo's work is a symphony in three movements, while Guarnier's is a concerto for piano and orchestra, entitled "Chorus."

Checks for $15,000 each also went to the previously unknown Panamanian composer, Rocque Cordero, for his "Second Symphony," and to Peru's Enrique U. Iturriaga for his suite in five movements.

Yale University's music school, starting July 1, 1953, will become completely a graduate professional school eliminating all undergraduate enrollments, President A. Whitney Griswold of Yale announced.

President Griswold said Yale is taking steps to strengthen its music department for Yale College undergraduates.

Under the new plan, the School of Music will train graduate students in performance and composition, but emphasis will be laid on intellectual achievement as well. All students will be required to take two-year courses in music theory and music history in addition to their composition and performance work.

As of this winter, the School of Music is no longer accepting applications of students from secondary schools, as has been the practice in the past. Beginning with the academic year 1958-59, only those students will be admitted who have completed undergraduate work at approved colleges, universities or professional schools.

MGM Records Provide Fine Listening

Among the M-G-M record releases during the past week are some of the finest etchings for any type of music, from the stately marches of the American Military Band and the 20th Century-Fox Orchestra and chorus to the jazz albums, popular dance and vocal and the folk songs of America. The latter category always has an appeal — which, whether sectional or national, will remain with the people of whom it is written.

One of the most popular sound-track albums of all time has been that from the 20th Century - Fox film "Stars and Stripes Forever." Collectors have long clamored for its appearance on a 12-inch long-play. And the package they requested is now on the market. But to add to this the second side is filled out with four superb marches by the crack American Military Band. Simultaneously with the long - playing release, extended play singles of the sound - track selections are also available.

For the platter of standards Richard Wess and his piano blend neatly polished with "originals" with the orchestra to bring "Music She Digs the Most." These include such favorites as "Autumn Leaves," "I Didn't Know What Time It Was," "I Got It Bad," "Give Me the Simple Life," "Cabin in the Sky" and seven other tunes.

Freddie Kohlman and his Mardi Gras Loungers bring "Jazz in New Orleans" straight from the Crescent City — a fine collection by the orchestra featuring Freddie on the vocals.

Joni James, backed by the orchestra of David Terry, has a winsome ballard "Only Trust Your Heart," backed by the ballard - in-blue "I Need You So."

The excellent stylings of the Ray Charles Singers shine on the waxings of two ballards of French persuasion. Both come from the best-selling Charles album "Sing A Song of Paris" and are entitled "Mam'selle" and "Mademoiselle de Paris."

THE WORLD OF BOOKS AND MUSIC

Guide To Good Reading

Now At The Ouachita Parish Public Library

FRANCES FLANDERS, Librarian

New books added to the library collection this week include a number of interesting books of fiction. A historical novel of more than usual interest is "The Sprig of Hemlock" by Robert Muir. This is a story based on Shay's Rebellion. It is a story of men pushed to the limits of their endurance, beside themselves with worry and debt. Led by Daniel Shays, the men first merely begged for time to pay their debts without being thrown into prison, but soon hot words demanded action. Members of the regulators wore the sprig of hemlock, whence the book gets its title. In this book we make the acquaintance of the Tucker family and get to know each one of them as they are caught up in this tense drama of mob psychology. Gripping indeed is this tale of a little known chapter of American history which paved the way for the Constitution and served notice that men in a democracy need a stable government.

FIELD OF FANTASY

T. H. White is an expert in the field of fantasy. His latest novel is called "The Master". It is the story of twins who were cast away on a desert island and there came in contact with a race of super-civilized beings. The adventures in which they become involved are marvelous but not incredible. Few novels can be read with equal enjoyment by children and grown-ups. This is one that can. It is written in a style and with a purpose which command attention from all classes of readers.

MYSTERY NOVEL

One of the most popular writers of mystery stories is Leslie Ford. Her stories are usually about people whom our readers might know, which is one reason for her popularity. Her latest novel is called "The Girl From the Mimosa Club." This book has its setting in Baltimore and is concerned with the Brayton family and the strange relationship between Dr. Brayton and his wife.

The central character of the story is Johnny Bryaton, a rising young lawyer who falls in love with Kerry O'Keefe, the girl from the Mimosa club and finds himself in all sorts of difficulties.

"Knock and Wait a While" by William Rawle Weeks is a tale of the "Silent War" that rages all over the world today and of the men and women of the U. S. Intelligence service who devote their lives to the interests of our country. It is a novel, but Mr. Weeks has been there and it is closer to truth than any factual account available to the general reader. This is a book to make one stop and think about the forces that threaten our world.

IRISH STORY

"We Are Seven" by Una Troy is a completely unorthodox and completely interesting novel with the setting in Ireland. It is a novel about a charming although unconventional family. The author was born in Ireland and shows in this novel a deep understanding of Irish character. "The Deep Range" by Arthur C. Clarke is a most fantastic novel of the future and will appeal to readers of science fiction. It is the story of a man who was doomed to spend his life under the sea, taking care of the whale herds who furnished so much of the earth's food. If you are a reader of science - fiction, don't miss this one.

COAST GUARD

"Onionhead" is a novel by Weldon Hill with its setting in the Coast Guard. It is the story of a young man who found himself and matured into a fully adult character. Little has been written about life in the Coast Guard and this is a needed book. It is also a good story.

One of the loveliest books of non - fiction which we have received in a long time is called "The Bird Biographies of John James Audubon" selected and edited by Alice Ford. This is a compilation of the text which accompanied his monumental "Birds of America". It has been out of print since 1870. This is a very informative book and one that will be valuable to all bird lovers.

Books by Fulton J. Sheen are always popular. His latest one is called "Way to Inner Peace." It contains thoughtful and inspiring words for the individual in a troubled world.

BOOKS ON MELVILLE

Herman Melville is considered one of the greatest figures in the history of American literature. We are fortunate to have two books dealing with his works among the new additions to the library. One is called "Collected Poems of Herman Melville." The other is a book of literary criticism and is called "Melville and the Comic Spirit." The author of this volume is Edward H. Rosenberry and it is a very fine example of literary criticism.

These and many other new books are available through the branches of your parish library. We hope that all of you will take advantage of its resources.

BEAUTIFUL SPRING SCENE

CAMERA NOTES

Spring Blossoms Good Subjects

By JOHN OLDENBURG
Camera Editor

No doubt, this is one of the most beautiful spring pictures this past week.

John Cale, editorial and sports writer for the News-Star, used some of his fine artistic abilities, when he shot this exquisite picture of Japanese Magnolias under a pine tree.

Mr. Cale, who is an adept hand with his Bolsey 35 mm. camera, gave us this date concerning the picture. With his camera loaded with Panatomic "X" film and set at F-11, shutter speed of 1-50 seconds, he used his viewfinder to get the correct composition. In other words, the picture was printed in the full frame of the negative. He also stated that he tried to compose the picture in such a way that the diagonal line of the tree and the magnolia bush were roughly parallel in the foreground, while the top of the cloud formation intersected the diagonal lines in the background.

With the mid - afternoon sun on the sky and flowers on top of the bush, and the tree in heavy shadows, Mr. Cale visualized through his view finder what the finished print would look like and came up with an exceptional flower scene.

Compare this with some of your flower shots and be amazed at how often poor pictures were the result of lack of composing through the viewfinder.

Here are a couple of hints for shooting flowers: Keep a contrasting background. If necessary, lie down on the ground for a low angle to get the sky as a backdrop for the darker flowers.

If the weather is breezy and flowers are in motion, shoot them with a slightly faster shutter speed as your main subject may turn out fuzzy looking.

Thank you, Mr. Cale, for your fine contribution and all of you others, keep them coming in to the Camera Editor, News-Star — World, Monroe.

'Say Darling' Big Expose Of Heels, Dames

Richard Bissell's Say, Darling (Atlantic - Little, Brown) seems to bite the hand that feeds. After the success of his 7½ Cents, an expose of the garment business, he was called in to collaborate on the musical based on that novel, "The Pajama Game." Say, Darling is an expose of Broadway.

Heels and Broadway dames abound, the talk is slangy and ultra-sophisticated, the back-stabbing murderous, the success incredible, the failure damning. Everything looms larger than life.

Bissell's ear is incredibly sharp, his eye constantly peeled for the foible, the phony and the fraud. Descended more directly from "The Thin Man" than the Hemingway he superficially resembles, he is glib, wisecrack-happy, generally very funny. . . .

Leading Question In Bistro Started Morris' Career

By W. G. ROGERS

NEW YORK, March 30 (AP) — A bearded guy in a sort of Bohemian club in Paris, where everyone was a bit seedy and everyone was doing a novel, a painting or an opera, stopped Wright Morris and asked casually:

"And what are you working on?"

He wasn't working on a thing, Morris says, but the question triggered a literary career which just this month brought Morris a prize regarded by some writers as the choicest, most meaningful offered in this country:

The National Book Award.

Of course, Morris recalls, the query did not surprise him "basically:"

"Teachers thought I could write out in Pomona college. I won prizes there. In Europe that year I kept a journal. So writing was there in the back of my mind. Only three months after the question was put to me, I was back in California writing in earnest.'

His year abroad started in 1933. Used to runnning all over the United States, he decided to give Europe a try. He had $285 and that carried him all the way. One man who befriended him was his host in a great old Danube castle for a couple of months. He lived in Vienna on $3 a week.

A week? I demanded. A week, he insisted.

But he had to wait five years before he sold anything.

"How did you earn a living?" I asked.

"Those are perhaps not the words to use," he answered. "In a way I didn't earn it, and it wasn't what might be called a living. There would be a WPA check, or a pittance my wife or I picked up at teaching. I had had of course a long experience of living on nothing. For that first year we got along, and without a thing to complain of, either, on $35 a month."

WRIGHT MORRIS

Morris has fine, long hair, just slightly turning gray, that sweeps up from his high brow, and he wears a mustache. You might take him for a musician. But he's a novelist, runner - up for the National Book Award in 1953 and now winner with "A Field of Vision."

This is his 10th book; his 11th "Love Among the Cannibals," is due next summer; his 12th is planned. Born in Central City, Neb., in 1910, he was brought up in Chicago. He and his father and other stray people were always racing from mid-America to the Pacific coast and back again in some old car so beaten up that it might have to be turned in on the way. That was the foundation of the knowledge of regional America which has distinguished all his books. In that period he went through "the chaotic experiences" which have been, or will be "processed" into new novels.

"Your useful life as a creative person occurs before you're conscious of it," he believes.

"I led so many lives before I was ever aware of leading any. When you begin to become aware, it begins to spoil. The material below the surface is good always, the other stuff you treat once and it's done."

Morris and his wife, who teaches history, live in Wayne, Pa. He has had three Guggenheim fellowships, in 1942, 1946 and 1954, and has contributed to numerous periodicals. His most extreme creative experiment was two books, "The Inhabitants" and "The Home Place," which combined his photos with his text.

He is off again for a couple of months of writing in California. But he'll be back by smmer.

Pretty Midwife Upsets Village

THE MIDWIFE OF PONT CLERY By Flora Sandstrom (John Day Books, 256 pps, $3.50).

When a young and pretty midwife arrives in the French village of Pont Clery the women are very worried. They resent her obvious attraction for their men folk, but she is gentle and skillful at her calling and they can find no reasonable grounds for getting rid of her. Besides, she is the only midwife available to them. But old Marie Fresville, the most determined and powerful woman of them all, soon comes to suspect that her granddaughter's fiance is beginning to desire the midwife, and things happen quietly but quickly.

The men continue to think about the little midwife and her slender ankles while working in the fragrant fields, and to discuss her over a Pernod at the cafe Le Chanticler, unaware that their wives have put their heads together and hit upon a foolproof plan for keeping the attractive rival from the village. No more need for the midwife, no more straying husbands. But in picturesque Normandy, as elsewhere, nature will find a way, and the consequences are as amusing as they are unexpected.

Just what takes place in this high - spirited and wholesomely naughty situation imparts to the story a contagious Decameron flavor, and it is treated with deftness and delicacy.

Flora Sandstrom lives with her husband and young daughter in a seventeenth century cottage in Oxfordshire, England. Called "Christmas Cottage," it is a half mile away from the common where the "Roundheads" camped one bitter cold, snow-bound Christmas during the civil war in the early sixteen hundreds. She says, "The common may have changed, but not the winters."

Liberalism Not Strong In U. S., Governor Says

WASHINGTON, March 30 (UP)—Republican Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin of Maryland told Americans for Democratic Action Saturday night that liberalism is not strong in this country because liberal thought has not kept up with the march of events.

The man who nominated President Eisenhower for his first term raised eyebrows in GOP circles by addressing the tenth anniversary banquet of the anti-Communist liberal organization which supported him for re-election. He took note of this.

"I am a party man without apology," he said at the outset. "Nevertheless, in my last campaign I was honored by the support of the ADA. I know that they did not support me because I am a Republican. They supported me because they gave me credit enough to know that the way to strengthen my party was to give the state a good administration, and on that ground I was happy to receive their support."

McKeldin, a firm supporter of Mr. Eisenhower's "modern Republicanism," said the current brand of liberalism "is not a program, nor even a policy, but an attitude." He said its opponents have done their best to convince the world that it is not even an attitude but merely a pose; hence the sneering references by some Republicans and conservative Democrats to 'bleeding hearts' and the allegations that a liberal is a sentimentalist.

"But a reactionary can be, and often is, as much a sentimentalist as any liberal," he said.

OPPORTUNITY OF A LIFETIME
IF YOU are not happy in your present position, or if you believe you should be earning more money than you are, this might be your big opportunity. It doesn't matter what type work you have been doing we prefer the inexperienced. Men who want to work hard to earn a lot of money immediately and who want security for the future why be satisfied with less than $100 per week. If you are neat, ambitious, enjoy talking with people and own a serviceable car, you might be selected. If you won't earn at least $6000 this year, you should certainly investigate this proposition. MORNING. THE STRANGER WITH A SUITCASE CONTAINING A HALF MILLION DOLLARS STILL DOESN'T REMEMBER WHO HE IS OR WHERE HE LIVES.
IT'S A DREADFUL FEELING, I ASSURE YOU.
WE HAVE A SUGGESTION, SIR.
WHY NOT NOTIFY THE POLICE?
OH, NO, NO! PLEASE! I'M AFRAID. FOR ALL I KNOW THE MONEY'S NOT MINE! IT MAY HAVE BEEN STOLEN!
NOT A CHANCE, BROTHER. COMBED THE NEWSPAPERS. THERE'S NO MENTION OF A HALF-MILLION DOLLAR ROBBERY.
OR IT MAY BE COUNTERFEIT!
PLEASE DON'T WORRY.
YOU DROPPED THIS BILL LAST NIGHT. I TOOK THE LIBERTY OF HAVING THE BANK EXAMINE IT. IT'S GENUINE.
PLEASE, NO POLICE! NO PUBLICITY! JUST LET ME STAY WITH YOU UNTIL I FIND OUT WHO I AM.
WHY, OF COURSE.
STAY AS LONG AS YOU LIKE.
BUT WHAT'LL WE CALL YOU, SIR?
I GOT IT! WE'LL CALL HIM MR. RICH... IZZY RICH!
CALL ME WHAT YOU PLEASE, KIND PEOPLE. AND IF THIS MONEY PROVES TO BE MINE, I INTEND TO SHARE IT WITH YOU.
I'LL BUY YOU A NEW CAR... THE MOST EXPENSIVE CAR ON THE MARKET. IN FACT, I'LL BUY EACH OF YOU A NEW CAR.
AW... FERGET IT, IZZY.
I MEAN IT. I'LL BUY YOU A NEW TRACTOR TOO... AND A NEW TRUCK... AND A THIRTY-TWO FOOT CABIN CRUISER.

THEY CAN'T GET MARRIED 'CAUSE SHE'S GOT A POORLY HUSBAND — SO WHY DO YOU THROW THEM TOGETHER AN' TEAR THEIR HEARTS OUT ?
HAHAHAHA!
THAT CACKLIN' DON'T ANSWER MY QUESTION, MA'AM...
AN' I TAKE IT AS UNFRIENDLY OF YOU TO BULLY MY KISSIN' KIN!
RIGHT WHEN I'VE GOT MY SCHOOL WORK AND THE FIRST ROUND OF THE STATE BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT ON MY MIND...
...YOU COME ALONG WITH THIS HEADACHE FOR ME!
WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT, LITTLE ORPHAN WHOZIS ?
MA'AM, I DON'T TAKE KINDLY TO FOLKS WHO ARE ORN'RY JUS' FOR JOLLIES!
I'M FRIGHTENED OUT OF MY WITS!.. AND I AM ALSO BECOMING BORED!
NOW GO AWAY BEFORE I CALL THE POLICE!
MEANWHILE ... THE PAIRINGS HAVE BEEN DRAWN FOR THE REGIONAL TOURNAMENTS...
IN THE B DIVISION... WEST OLEANDREA PLAYS STUMPHILL!
I'LL BET THE WIRE SERVICES WILL GIVE THAT ONE A BIG PLAY!
STEVE, I DON'T MEAN TO DISTRESS YOU, BUT COPPER CALHOON ORDERED ME TO GO TO THESE GAMES...
BECAUSE SHE KNEW I'D BE HERE ON ACCOUNT OF POTEET! I'M GLAD TO SEE YOU, SUMMER, HONEY! EVEN THOUGH IT HURTS — IT HURTS GOOD!

BRINGING UP FATHER
MY GOODNESS! THERE WAS ANOTHER BURGLARY IN THIS NEIGHBORHOOD LAST NIGHT!
WHAT ?! AGAIN ?!
BUT, FORTUNATELY, THE BURGLAR WAS CHASED AWAY BY A WATCHDOG!
I HOPE HE TOOK A GOOD BITE!
I HEARD MY BROTHER BIMMY COMING IN LATE LAST NIGHT! I WONDER IF HE SAW ANY OF THE EXCITEMENT!
MAYBE THE POOR BOY IS STILL ASLEEP - I HATE TO DISTURB HIM!
IT'S A LOT DIFFERENT WHEN I'M SLEEPING -
IS THAT YOU, MAGGIE ? — I WANT YOU TO DO A LITTLE SEWIN' JOB FOR ME!
BUT, BIMMY -- AREN'T THOSE YOUR NEW PANTS ?
YEAH! -- THEY'RE NOT MAKIN' THEM THE WAY THEY USED TO!
OH, SHUT UP!

The PHANTOM
By LEE FALK and WILSON McCOY
WHAT A CURIOUS PRISONER! WON'T SAY A WORD. ANY TRACE OF THE STOLEN MONEY?
NONE. WHAT IF WE'VE MADE A MISTAKE?
A MASKED MAN-HIDING IN HIS CABIN-HOW CAN IT BE A MISTAKE?
MEANWHILE, DANGLOR-- THE BANK ROBBER-
MY PLAN'S WORKED SO FAR. THEY THINK HE'S ME. BUT WHEN WE REACH PORT-THEY'LL FIND OUT-WHOEVER HE IS-
I'VE GOT TO GET HIM OVERBOARD BEFORE WE REACH PORT! BUT HOW?
WORD HAS SPREAD AMONG THE NATIVE CREW-ABOUT THE INCREDIBLE PRISONER IN THE BRIG--
IT IS --THE PHANTOM-
-THE GHOST WHO WALKS!
HE VISITED MY TRIBE ONCE-- IN BENGALI-
WHY DOES HE STAY THERE? HE COULD BREAK OUT!
HE BIDES HIS TIME-HE IS ANGRY-HE MAY DESTROY THE SHIP-AND ALL OF US-
THE GHOST WHO WALKS-IT MEANS BAD LUCK TO THIS SHIP-IF HE IS ANGRY.
WILSON McCOY 3-3
© 1957, King Features Syndicate, Inc., World rights reserved.
IT IS TRUE, SIR. HE IS THE PHANTOM OF THE JUNGLE-THE MAN WHO CANNOT DIE.
HE DOES NOT SPEAK. HE WAITS, THEN HE WILL STRIKE!
HMM.
THAT NIGHT DANGLOR GOES TO WORK-
WHAT LUCK! THESE SUPERSTITIOUS NATIVES THINK HE'S A HOODOO OF SOME KIND. I WONDERED HOW TO GET HIM OUT OF THAT BRIG! NOW I KNOW--
NOW A LIFEBOAT-
WHAT'S HE UP TO?
A DYNAMITE CAP IN THE STOVE.

The PHANTOM
By LEE FALK and WILSON McCOY
WHAT A CURIOUS PRISONER! WON'T SAY A WORD. ANY TRACE OF THE STOLEN MONEY?
NONE. WHAT IF WE'VE MADE A MISTAKE?
A MASKED MAN-HIDING IN HIS CABIN-HOW CAN IT BE A MISTAKE?
MEANWHILE, DANGLOR--THE BANK ROBBER--
MY PLANS WORKED SO FAR. THEY THINK HE'S ME. BUT WHEN WE REACH PORT-THEY'LL FIND OUT-WHOEVER HE IS-
I'VE GOT TO GET HIM OVERBOARD BEFORE WE REACH PORT! BUT HOW?
WORD HAS SPREAD AMONG THE NATIVE CREW-ABOUT THE INCREDIBLE PRISONER IN THE BRIG-
IT IS--THE PHANTOM-
THE GHOST WHO WALKS!
HE VISITED MY TRIBE ONCE--IN BENGALI-
WHY DOES HE STAY THERE? HE COULD BREAK OUT!
HE BIDES HIS TIME-HE IS ANGRY-HE MAY DESTROY THE SHIP-AND ALL OF US-
THE GHOST WHO WALKS-IT MEANS BAD LUCK TO THIS SHIP-IF HE IS ANGRY.
WILSON McCOY 3-3
IT IS TRUE, SIR. HE IS THE PHANTOM OF THE JUNGLE-THE MAN WHO CANNOT DIE.
HE DOES NOT SPEAK. HE WAITS, THEN HE WILL STRIKE!
HMM.
THAT NIGHT, DANGLOR GOES TO WORK-
WHAT LUCK! THESE SUPERSTITIOUS NATIVES THINK HE'S A HOODOO OF SOME KIND. I WONDERED HOW TO GET HIM OUT OF THAT BRIG! NOW I KNOW--
NOW A LIFEBOAT-
WHAT'S HE UP TO?
A DYNAMITE CAP IN THE STOVE.
